The ambassador expressed the hope that the statesmen of his country may rise to the height of the task that will be imposed upon them and avoid returning to the system of the balance of power, without sacrificing any of the good will and friendship of Great Britain's friends in other parts of the world.

Interpreter of Europe.

One of the principal duties of Great Britain in the future, he declared, will be to explain and interpret the necessities and difficulties of Europe to America and the overseas dominions, while at the same time working in Europe for an enduring peace.

"But I would ask Americans to try to understand the difficult position of Great Britain," he continued. "Every man in the British Isles desires the closest understanding with the United States. That is the cardinal principle of our policy and must remain so. We are however, compelled at the same time to consider our situation in Europe, and we have also to consult and regulate our policy according to the views and the opinions of other partners of the British Empire, whose interests are not directly concerned with Europe, and it is that which may at times make it difficult for the English speaking nations outside of Europe to understand our policy owing to our more complex problems."

Speaking of the doctrine of the balance of power and its application for so many years, Sir Esme said:

"I do not pretend that England has taken the side of the weaker in all these long centuries of war out of any especially chivalrous or quixotic sentiment, though no doubt this did to some extent influence her policy."

Self-Preservation.

"Generally speaking, however it was just the instinct of self-preservation, the knowledge that any power which dominated Europe would probably dominate the seas, and that any power which dominated the seas would ultimately dominate England. All that is so clear that he who runs may read.

"For that reason, and that reason alone, the English, like every European which valued their own independence above every other good, even a Pax Romana imposed on Europe by some modern emperor, were prepared to fight to maintain te balance of power by which alone that independence should be secured."

WANTS WINTER FAIR

Movement in London By Consignments Sales Company.

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 30.—(Canadian Press).—The first definite steps toward the securing of a winter fair for London will be taken to-day when the question will be raised at the annual meeting of the shareholders of the Western Ontario Consignments Sales Company at the County Buildings.

MRS. GOMPERS

Mrs. Samuel M. Gompers, widow of the late labor leader, was cut off with only the "minimum amount required by law" in her husband's will. She says she is both "surprised and hurt" by his action. Mrs. Gompers is conferring with attorneys now relative to starting proceedings to break the document which disposes of an estate of $30,000.

31 BELOW FOR APSLEY FOLKS

Two Arctic Sundays in Succession—Carols Sung in Biting Cold.

STAGE ON RUNNERS

APSLEY, Dec., 29.—Thirty-one degrees below zero was registered here on Sunday morning, and twenty-nine below a week ago Sunday, two low figures for December. As a consequence of the severe cold the swamps are in good shape for getting out timber, and the lumber camps are in full swing. More attention is being paid to cutting hardwood for lumber, there being little or no market for soft woods such as hemlock, spruce and balsam, while maples command a good price.

The mill in Methuen has about a million feet cut and ready for hauling to Coe Hill for shipment, which will be done by motor trucks, it is expected.

Christmas Concert.

The Sunday Schools of St. George's Apsley and St. Paul's Lasswade held their annual Christmas tree and entertainment on Monday and Tuesday respectively, when each scholar received a present for regular attendance.

The entertainment consisted of a motion picture show which was thoroughly enjoyed by both young and old.

A quiet but pretty wedding took place in St. Paul's Church, Lasswade on Wednesday, December 24, when Mary Eliza Bullied, became the bride of Edwin Cecil Davis, the Rev. C. A. G. Spence officiating.

Willie Bullied, eldest brother of the bride gave her away, Miss Lucinda Davis acting as bridesmaid, while George Bullied was groomsman.

A reception was afterwards held at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bullied.

Cold For Carols.

On Christmas Eve the choir of St. George's Church, assisted by Rev. J. Ogden, the Methodist minister, in spite of the severe cold followed their annual custom of singing Chirstmas Carols in the village.

George Stephens is still making his daily run between Apsley and Peterborough by motor truck. The stage reverted to sleighs on Saturday..

SARNIA OFFENCES FEW.

SARNIA, Dec. 30. — (Canadian Press).—Crime of any kind has been at the minimum in Sarnia during the month of December. Only twenty-three cases, the majority for minor offences, are entered on the police records.

ENGLISH COAST TOWNS DAMAGED BY HEAVY GALE

Sea Advanced Like Tidal Wave Inundating Streets and Flooding Homes.

FURNITURE AFLOAT

Meadows Along the Upper Thames Like Lakes—Gulls Fly Over Eaton Fields.

LONDON, Dec. 30. — (Canadian Press Cable) — The gale which has been sweeping the English coast, endangering shipping and causing considerable damage, has subsided, at least for the present, but reports of the results which have been remarkable as well as disastrous continue to be received here.

At Fleetwood, where the sea surrounds the town on three sides, the sea advanced like a tidal wave and caused the only road leading inland to be impassable.

The quaint little town of Selby, Yorkshire, was almost washed out by the rising of the River Ouse. Household fires were extinguished by the flood and light furniture was floating in the rooms of the residences for a while.

Preston was flooded and when the water was at its height a motor boat cruised about on the highways.

At Port Herbert, South Wales, the mother of a day-old child was rescued from her flooded home through a window.

In the upper reaches of the Thames the water is still rising and the adjacent meadows are literally lakes some of them being fully a mile wide.

Thirty sheep were drowned in the flood at Richmond.

A house boat was sunk at Hampton Court.

Sea gulls have been flying over the playing fields at Eaton, apparently being under a misapprehension as to the playgrounds of the noted school being under the water.

EGYPTIANS FREED.

Ten More Suspects in Stack Murder Liberated Monday.

CAIRO, Egypt, Dec. 29.— Ten more persons arrested in connection with the murder of Sir Lee Stack, the Egyptian Sirdar, were liberated Monday. Among those who were given thier freedom were Sheikh Ghayati, a deputy and prominent member of the Wafd, and Hassan Yassin, also a deputy and leader of the so-called student army whose activities have been a conspicuous feature of the Zagloul movement.

Other suspects who were being held in connection with the Sirdar's slaying were remanded by the court for another fortnight. Among these were A-bden Rahman Fehmy, organizer of the notorious Vengeance Society, and Nekrashy Bey, Under Secretary of the Interior in former Premier Zagloul's cabinet.

The minister of the interior has forbidden students who are not voters taking any part in the election campaign which is now under way.

500 FAMILIES COMING

Ukrainains for Central and Northern Saskatchewan.

SASKATOON, Sask., Dec. 30. — (Canadian Press). — Arrangements for the settlement on lands in Central and Northern Saskatchewan of five hundred families of the Eastern Ukraine in the coming spring, were completed at a conference of immigration officials, officials of the St. Raphael's Society and the Saskatoon Board of Trade, held in the city over the week-end. The prospective immigrants will not be assisted settlers any further than the assistance tendered them by the St. Raphael's Society in locating suitable farm lands on arrival in this district. All have been carefully selected by immigration officials in the Ukraine, and all will have sufficient funds to permit of them securing a reasonable start on arrival.

CONGREGATION FOR UNION.

SASKATOON, Sask., Dec. 30. — The Presbyterian congregation at Yorkton, Sask., Monday voted 115 in favor of church union and 17 against, a majority of 98 for the merger.

SKATING, BAND TONIGHT COGNAWAGA RINK, GOOD ICE!

LINDSAY TRAIN CREWS HIT BY TRAFFIC LULL

David Porter Likely to Be New License Inspector at Lindsay.

LINDSAY, Dec. 30.— There has been a decided slump in grain hauling operations on the local division of the C.N.R. and as a result quite a number of the railway employees have been out of work. This has had a serious effect locally, as a slump in the railway payroll means much to the merchants, who, this year, state that Christmas business was not up to former years.

It is expected that there will be a resumption in grain hauling operations after the new year, as at present there are thirty-five vessels tied up at Midland, and fifteen millions of bushels are ready to move at any time. Nearily fifty million bushels of grain passed through Midland during the past season, which beats any previous year by half a million bushels.

LONDON TEMPERATE IN CHRISTMAS HOLIDAYS

Magistrates Adopted Leniency in Dealing With Offenders.

LONDON, Dec. 30. —(Canadian Press Cable.)— The Christmas just passed was one of the most temperate in London on record, if police charges offer any criterion. One Metropolitan magistrate yesterday decided merely to bind over offenders in the belief that the shock of being charged will prove a sufficient deterrent. Another magistrate was still more original when he told a bibulous one whose face was badly damaged to "go into the jailer's room and have a look at yourself in the mirror."

"Oh, what a mess!" exclaimed the offender when he returned and was discharged.

DECEMBER'S SEVERITY SEEN IN ST. CLAIR ICE

Slump in Grain Hauling Temporarily Crimps Payrolls.

SARNIA, Dec. 30. — The St. Clair now presents an appearance exceptional for this early period of the winter, and is jammed with ice from one bank to the other. Only at very isolated points is clear water in view and these spots are mere ponds.

A mass of jagged ice is the impression one gains on viewing the river from the Sarnia side, a condition which for years past has not prevailed before late January since when the ferries have had difficulty in maintaining an hourly schedule. Sarnians can recall within a few years when the St. Clair was frozen across and it was possible to walk over it, but it is many years since such a condition prevailed before the month of December expired.

INSPECTOR RETIRES

Lindsay Board of Trade Angling for Coffin Factory.

LINDSAY, Dec. 30.—The retirement of License Inspector William Thornbury of Victoria and Haliburton Counties, has been announced here. Mr. Thornbury, who is seventy-three years of age, has been license inspector since 1905, having succeeded John Short, who afterwards became chief of police of Lindsay. Mr. Thornbury's successor, it is understood, is Mr. David Porter, of Lindsay, brother of Mr. A. T. Porter, clerk of the Surrogate Court.

BRIDEGROOM'S ALIBI

Police Punctured His Story of Hold-Up And Loss of Money.

PORT ARTHUR, Ont., Dec. 30.—City police Saturday night were put on the trail of a pair of mythical bandits after being informed by a young newly-wed that while on his way to the depot to purchase tickets for his honeymoon, he had been held up and robbed of $169.

After the police had conducted a fruitless search, they returned to the complainant and subjected him to further questioning. The young man confessed that his story was a frame-up to explain for the benefit of his bride, his shortage of cash. In police court yesterday the magistrate, on account of the previous good record of the man, suspended sentence

KENYA INDIANS SEEKING PEACE

Abandon Attitude of Non-Co-operation With Whites and Decide to Pay Tax.

BID TO WHITES

NAIROBI, Kenya, East- Africa, Dec. 30.—(Canadian Press Cable via Reuter's).—The National Congress of East Africa after a stormy session lasting two days, has passed important resolutions on the advice of the president of the congress, Abdul Wahid, a Kenya merchant pioneer, who, after twenty-five years residence, is the wealthiest Indian here with the greatest interests.

Abdul Wahid, who originally had a meeting with Ormsby-Gore, Under Secretary for the Colonies in London, and another meeting recently with him in Nairobi, urged in his address that peace should be made with Europeans for, in the next three years, he declared, he was hopeful that if this were done the result would be the establishment of a permanent friendship.

During the debate it was decided that there should not be a non-co-operative opposition and eventually the congress adopted a resolution to abandon non-co-operation in Kenya, agreeing firstly, to accept five nominated Indian seats in the legislative council; secondly, to pay poll tax; thirdly, to accept representation of the Kenya executive council; fourthly, to accept municipal representation of the Kenya executive council; fourthly, to accept municipal representation in the proportion of five Asiastics to seven Europeans; and fifthly, to advise Uganda Indians to agree to one Indian representative being nominated to the Uganda legislature.

Thus for the next three years the Indians here are offering entire cooperation with Europeans in the hope of European reciprocity insuring in the future lasting co-operation in the work.

SUBWAY AT OSHAWA.

Projected by C.N.R. Under Tracks at South Oshawa.

OSHAWA, Dec. 30.—H. B. Stuart and C. A. Mitchell, of Toronto Canadian National Railway's bridge engineers, H. W. Cooper, general manager and W. H. Cooper, road superintendent of the Oshawa Railway Company, were in conference with W. C. Smith, Oshawa city engineer, yesterday, in regard to the proposed new subway under the C.N.R. tracks at South Oshawa. Costs and the original plan allowing for a 50-foot subway interior measurement was enlarged to 58 feet. When the new plans are completed, the local civic officials will ask for a conference with the Railway Board of Canada and providing same are agreed to the Canadian National Railways contemplating erecting a new station at Oshawa which will cost between $40,000 and $50,000.

NEW BOUNDARY FOR LABRADOR

Basis of Settlement of Old Dispute Between Newfoundland and Quebec.

MONTREAL MEETING

MONTREAL, Dec. 30.—Anticipating a speedy settlement of the Quebec-Labrador question delegates from Newfoundland stated Monday afternoon that their mission was now accomplished and that they were taking home for the approval of their colleagues of the Executive Council, suggestions for a basis of agreement which would settle a thirty-year old dispute out of court.

Those engaged in conference included Hon. W. S. Munroe, Prime Minister of Newfoundland, the Hon. J. R. Bennett, Colonial Secretary; Hon. W. J. Higgins, K.C., Minister of Justice; Sir Patrick McGrath, Secretary of the Commission; Premier L. A. Taschereau, representing the Province of Quebec; Aime Geoffrion, K.C., Chas. Lanctot, K.C., Assistant Attorney-General for the Province, and acting in the interest of the Dominion the Rt. Hon. C. J. Doherty, and C. A. Plaxton.

No information regarding the nature of the settlement was given by the Newfoundland delegates, who intimated, however, that a new boundary line was to be the way out of the difficulty. Secrecy must be maintained they averred, since the suggestions after they were passed upon by the Executive Council of Newfoundland as a proposition which it was willing to put before Parliament, would be forwarded by the Council to the Dominion Government as a formal proposal for settlement of the dispute. Premier Munroe explained that the matter would be dealt with very speedily and that it was hoped to complete it in 1925.

This is the first time a delegation from Newfoundland has been in Canada to discuss matters with Canadian representatives in thirty years, and the opportunity has been taken by the visitors from the Island, to discuss a number of important questions in which Newfoundland and Canada are concerned.

The delegates will return home on Thursday.

M'COY GUILTY MANSLAUGHTER

Compromise Verdict by Jury Ends Longest Deliberation in Los Angeles.

PRISON TERM

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Dec. 30. —(Canadian Press).—Kid McCoy, former pugilist was convicted in superior court late Monday of manslaughter in connection with the shooting here Aug. 12, last of Mrs. Theresa Mors. The penalty for manslaughter is from one to ten years imprisonment.

When the verdict was read, McCoy's eyes became tear-dimmed as he sat at the end of the counsel table.

"I don't believe it was a just verdict," he said. "If I am not guilty as charged, I am not guilty at all. It was not a just verdict."

The prisoner then arose and in custody of bailiffs walked across the courtroom to comfort his three sisters, who were weeping.

Foreman F. W. Coulther, of the jury, said that the verdict was a compromise one,—"that was the best we could do."

The jury, which was out longer than any other in the legal history of Los Angeles County, had been locked up for 78 hours when the verdict was returned at 5:06 o'clock last night and had been in actual deliberation for 34 hours.

Twenty-four ballots were taken before the fate of the former prize fighter was read in open court. The jury was comprised of nine women and three men.

Superior Judge C. S. Crail had no comment to make other than: "I guess it was the best that they could do."

Several hundred persons, many of them women, and members of the Southern California boxing circles, thronged the halls outside the courtroom when the verdict was returned.

OSHAWA WOMAN WAS NOMINATED

Proposed for City Council From New Cedardale Ward —Contest for Mayor.

TRICK OPPOSED

OSHAWA, Dec. 30.—Municipal nominations for the offices of Mayor, Aldermen, Water Commissioners and Board of Education took place here Monday. Eleven prospective candidates were proposed two of whom the present Mayor William John Trick and Aldeman Herbert Peers Schell, have positively declared themselves as going to the wire in the local municipal derby on election day, Monday, January 5th, while two others Aldermen George T. Morris and Edwin Luther Vickery are considering entering the race, but have until this evening at nine o'clock to qualify. In the five wards of the city the nominations for Alderman were held and from the lists handed into City Clerk here from each ward there will be no dearth of candidates on election day. The two members for the Board of Water Commissioners George W. McLaughlin and William H. Ross were elected by acclamation.

Woman Nominated.

Ward Five which includes the newly annexed Cedardale which lies to the south of the Canadian National Railways has the honor of having the only lady nominated for the City Council and also that of returning its present representative Thos. Stapleton on the Board of Education by acclamation.

A public meeting of the electors of the city was held in the City Hall here last evening and the auditorium was packed to the doors, to hear particularly the candidates for the mayoralty announce their platforms for the coming year. One of the most lively contests in years was launched.

SAME PENALTIES FOR WOMEN AND MEN IN RESORTS

Montreal Doctor Condemns Legalizing of Social Vice as "Nefarious" and Worthless.

"WAR TO THE DEATH"

Courts Should Impose Equal Sentences on Men and Women in Prostitution.

MONTREAL, December 30. — Equal sentences alike for men and women found guilty in prostitution, were advocated on Monday afternoon by Dr. A. H. Desloges, director of anti-venereal disease activities and director of asylums of the Provincial Health Department, testifying before Mr. Justice Coderre at the police enquiry.

If there were no clients, the doctor argued, there would be no prostitutes. He favored jail sentences in every case, as there is no other system that will give adequate provision for medical examination, and treatment in cases where the prisoners are found to be diseased.

"War to the death," was the witness' slogan. "All prostitutes are diseased," he said. "So-called regulation is nefarious, for it means worthless medical examination and, far from curbing clandestine vice, stimulates it by giving the unfortunate women legal status. Examination of conscripts for the late war had awakened the world to the ravages of venereal disease; in Canada 17 per cent. of the conscripts had been victims. Half measures were useless, and though prostitution could never be banished while human passions existed, yet the future of all races demanded that the sternest possible repressive measures be applied at all times.

No Red Lights.

The witness advocated the smashing of the red light district and the deportation of the alien trust gripping it and those living on disorderly house earnings.

Novels, undesirable plays, and moving pictures, dance halls, cabarets and, notably, Canada's lax immigration policy, all encouraged prostitution here, Dr. Desloges found. The result was that healthy people were in such danger of infection that he would even favor the abolition of kissing.

The antecedents of each immigrant should be delved into, and he should be given a thorough examination to ascertain that he is free from venereal disease, the witness said. The immigration law was faulty, he found, in that an alien who had resided in Canada for five years then had the right of domicile and could not be deported for anything except outright crime. The United States recognized no right of domicile, unless formally naturalized, and an immigrant could always be deported as an undesirable after even thirty years of residence.

TO IGNORE MISSION.

British Trades Council Turn Cold Shoulder to Russia.

LONDON, Dec. 30. — (United News).—The congress of the general council of trades unions, meeting in emergency session, has decided not to recognize or to have anything to do with the recent recommendations of the British Labor mission to Russia. The Labor association recommended recognition of the Soviet union. A Russian loan resumption of trade between the two nations and other steps. The trade union also declined to participate in a suggested demonstration in behalf of these recommendations.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Thinking it would be a little variety, and possibly interest a few, I pen these lines. We were pleased to spend our Christmas day in Muskoka with our daughter (Jennie) and her family. The weather conditions put us in memory of by-gone days, when sixty years ago we lived, or existed, on the cold bleak shores of Prince Edward Island. As we looked out the window and gazed upon the snow covering everything, and still lots more falling, and as we went outside we found it bitterly cold, it was much like P.E.I. weather, but not quite so bad. True we were better sheltered and clothed in Muskoka than in Prince Edward Island.

In the summer there is a similarity in the wild fruits that grow in both countries and a great difference in the land, there being lots of rocks, both large and larger in Muskoka, while in P.E.I. there is practically none, except a few small boulders that were apparently washed on the island by nature ages ago.

Sixty years ago on P.E.I. education, social and religious life were at a low ebb. No doubt things are better in some lines at present.

I must stop now with the glad assurance that this old world will soon be restored to its pristine glory. Then and not until then, will conditions of life be satisfactory to all. Thanks, Mr. Editor for space, etc.—M. T. Butcher.

To the Editor, The Examiner.

Sir,—It is quite evident from Mr. W. H. Bradburn's letter in last evening's Examiner, that he intends to block this city in any attempt it may make to find out if a saving of about $50,000.00 per year can be made in the wholesale purchase of electric power. He evidently is opposed to the Peterboro Utilities Commission even making any enquiry if this saving can be made.

Mr. Bradburn says the City Council should make this enquiry. Perhaps it should, but the Commission is the body that buys the power for the city, and pays for the power it buys, and should try and get it at the lowest cost. It is confidently stated that if our water powers were developed this city would save a large sum each year to the taxpayers. Why not find out? Mr. Bradburn will not try at all. If I am elected I certainly will insist that the people get the information I am after.

When I was Mayor of the city, the cost of developing power was almost prohibitive. There was then a surplus of power immediately in sight, but now there is a shortage of power in sight. Now is the time to act.

I congratulate Mr. Bradburn on the high position he holds as member of the Provincial Legislature, but I think he should willingly allow some of the lesser honors to go to other aspirants, and I believe the majority of our citizens feel as I do in this matter.

I am particularly pleased that The Examiner is strongly supporting the policy of enquiry into our own undeveloped water powers which are now running to waste.

Mr. Bradburn has seen fit to criticise me and my policy, and has thereby forced me in self-defence to criticize him and his policy.—Yours truly,

A. A. McINTYRE.

December 30th, 1924.

To the Editor, Examiner,—

Sir,—I would like you to give me a small space of your valuable paper I just want to tell my pale face friends, that I feel proud to say that the department of Indian Affairs are going to send no other than a qualified school teacher to the Indian Reserves, which should have been done years ago, but any one at all will do for Indians. I remember one time that a teacher asked my brother, how many hours was there in one day. Brother said 24 hours. Teacher said no only 12. So you can guess what kind of teachers, we have had. Now if John Knott had a qualified teacher in his school days he could have answered the lawyers pretty good.

QUESTIONS FOR DR. PIGEON.

To the Editor, Examiner,

After reading Dr. Pigeon's letter of the 18th inst., in the public press: I felt somewhat perplexed regarding his statement that the Presbyterian Church will preserve its identity after being merged in the United Church of Canada. I do not understand how the name "Presbyterian" can continue after the Union has been completed. The United Church in Canada has extensive corporate powers conferred on it by the Church Union Act. It has power to acquire and sell property, also to make and accept bills of exchange and promissory notes. I would like Dr. Pigeon to enlighten me on the following points:

1. When the so-called United Church of Canada purchases a parcel of land, in what name will the conveyance be made? Will it be made in the name of the Presbyterian Church or in the name of the United Church of Canada?

2. After the Union in what name will the United Church make their cheques and notes, will it be the Presbyterian Church or the United Church of Canada?

3. When Rev. Dr. Pigeon performs a marriage after the Union, will he sign the marriage certificate as a minister of the Presbyterian Church or the United Church of Canada?

A short answer to these three questions will be greatly appreciated.

Reviews Four Years.

Mayor A. J. Meyers was first called on to speak. He was pleased to see such a large gathering. It shows the people are interested in the affairs of the town. He spoke briefly of the three previous years he had been mayor and then of this past year. The sewer construction was a work of considerable magnitude and necessarily an expensive work. The estimate had been made of fifteen thousand two hundred and twenty-seven dollars and some change added more to the cost. There was the cost of work and the cost of machinery. The policy of the council in constructing sewers, water mains and laying sidewalks under a competent foreman had saved thousands of dollars to the citizens. The work has amounted to only about twelve thousand five hundred dollars less than the estimate. In doing work by the day it has helped the men of the town to support their families, especially during the depression in business.

The town of Campbellford is equipped to do construction work and the money is to be spent in town. He also told of the amount of concrete sidewalk laid and filling in ready for more next year, and of the repairs on the bridge. In speaking of the tax rate he said it would be considerable, but if council exercise care and economy it would be forty-three or forty-four mills. As there is a deficit it will take one mill to make that up. The next few years will be the hardest years then in a few years some of the debentures will be fully paid.

As he has been four years Mayor he has appreciated the honor. He thought he had carried the responsibility long enough. He thanked the citizens for their loyal support during the past four years. It has encouraged him to carry on. He could not decide at the meeting what his decision would be, but he asked for the support that his past record deserves.

Reeve Davidson.

Reeve Davidson was called upon. He spoke very highly of the work of Mayor Meyers during the last term. He had held the position of Reeve other years and had done his best for the town. His life in Campbellford no one could ever accuse him of selling any liquor or even drinking any and he would leave it to the electors of the town, who all know him, whether he is worthy or not to be returned to office. He also asked the man who had written the letter to come forward and prove these things or say what he had to say.

There was no response.

Reeve Davidson also spoke of the year's work and at the close received a very hearty applause.

Councillor Kingston

Councillor Kingston, chairman of the finance committee gave the financial statement and explained some of the items very fully and also spoke of the debentures. The total debenture debt is now two hundred and seven-five thousand dollars. The sewer Debenture ninety thousand dollars.

Property owners on the sewers pay 60 per cent and the town 40 per cent of the cost.

The power debenture of fiftyfive thousand dollars is self-sustaining and water and light have a greater surplus on hand this year. The debt on the High School is one hundred and ten thousand dollars, and according to the attendance at the High School now the County pays 35 per cent, bringing it down to forty thousand dollars. The Township of Seymour is responsible for 8 per cent.

Mr. J. L. Hoover had been in for two years as school trustee. It had been no light work in connection with building the new high school. He had decided to step out.

Other nomination addresses will be published to-morrow.

MOTIVE POWER FROM HEAVEN.

Railroad presidents and various oil directors will be out of jobs when the new motive power invented by an American engineer comes into general use. He has it pretty well in hand at the present time, so much so that he recently invited a number of friends to ride on a machine which he has built.

The experimental car had much the appearance of the foot-power trucks which are sometimes made use of by railroad workmen with the addition of a ten-foot pole in front with a bundle of wire on its top.

It has a motor and a little machinery hardly worth mentioning, but no engine, battery, or gas tank.

"What makes it go?" asked one of the guests.

"I am taking electricity from the air," was the reply.

The inventor took his guests many miles through the country and the power never failed. With a supply of power from the skies to be drawn through an old umbrella frame there will be no use for the mussy stuff heretofore taken from the interior of the earth, neither will there be any use for the many gas tanks scattered over the country.

Isn't this picture the cat's whiskers? At any rate it ought to be, for it is a photo of "Oh, Minley Surprise of Gaybrook," a first prize winner at the Nationall Cat Club's championship show at Crystal Palace, London.

Candidates Speak.

On motion of Alex. Hume and Geo. Vonvolkenburg the clerk was appointed chairman, and the candidates were asked to speak. The old council members and those newly nominated were invited to the platform.

George Vanvolkenburg as reeve for the past year, was asked to speak. He thanked the proposer and seconder of his nomination and thanked the electors for their confidence. He dealt mostly with county matters, and drew attention to the financial statement, the county rate being 8 mills. This included first. mother's allowance, which amounted to about one thousand dollars a month; second, county roads, this year costing $90,000. This was down from one hundred and thirty thousand dollars; third, Children's Aid Society, which amounted to $5100; High school, $41,000. He gave some figures as to the cost of the House of Refuge. The total cost of expenses, $21,519, with earnings from its farm of $3139, making the total that much less. The food per inmate a day was only 14.4c and the total cost of each inmate a day only 79.87 cents.

Roads: Provincial highway paid for 1922 construction, maintenance, etc., $52,287; in 1923 the cost was around $30,717; bill not presented for 1924 yet. It is estimated, included some paying to be about $90,000. The county rate is bound to go up. The government intend to continue paying the roads and this year the amount may go up to $200,000. He then spoke of the amount spent in Seymour. He said that there had been $20,000 more spent in Seymour than in any other towship in the counties this year.

P. B. Nelson, deputy reeve for last year, spoke next. He spoke briefly about county work, and then about the township. It had been a pleasure to work with the men of the council. They were all good business men. The cost of purchasing machinery had been heavy. The system used in road making was that each councillor had been apportioned so much money to look after the roads in the different parts of the township. The work had been done with a small road gang with the assistance of those in that vicinity. The government engineer had passed all the work done by the superintendent of the road work. He said the township ought to have the very best men in the council.

If put in again as Deputy Reeve he would endeavor to do the work to the best of his ability, and conscientiously.

Councillor Milne—He had prepared the estimates for the years 1921-22-23-24. The liabilities are all provided for during the year, though part will not be paid until February or March. He also explained the part of the work on the road in his district. He said as he had been in the Council for three years, he was now in the field for Deputy Reeve, and asked the support of the electors.

Councillor Peake said he had received two nominations — one for Deputy Reeve and one for Councillor. He had not decided as yet which he would run for. Had been in Council two years. The Council had carried on a good work. There had been a lot of real good work done on the roads this year. The buying of the stone crusher was one of the best things a Council could do. He had tried to work for the best interest of the township, and, if elected to the office he would decide to try for, he would do the same this next year.

Councillor R. McKelvie was unable to be present, as he had been called away from home, but Deputy Reeve Nelson thought he would be home to qualify.

W. S. Grills was nominated for Reeve. After thanking the mover and seconder, he said he had decided to accept. He had been two years in Council and assessor for nine years. He knew thoroughly every road in the township, and there was not a ratepayer's house he had not been in. He thanked the electors for all the kindness he had received when assessor, and asked for a hearty support. He had no criticism to make of the old Council.

Alex. Hume—He was pleased to be at this nomination. Had always taken an interest in municipal affairs, but he was not in the field. He had got to the top as Warden. He did not intend to criticize, but he thought they should aim to lower the rate instead of raising it. He was like Reeve Vonvalkenburg, and did hot approve of debentures. He did not believe in burdening our children, that we should pay as we go. It was good financing.

Thos. H. Rowe, who was nominated for Reeve, was not present.

W. A. Wynn was pleased to see so many present and interested in municipal affairs. He accepted the nomination for Deputy Reeve, and if returned would work to the best interest of the township, but if not he would be saved quite a lot of responsibility.

Robert Innes thanked his mover and seconder and took this opportunity of asking the sunport of all the ratepayers. He did not agree with all the Council had done. He thought all the Council ought to see all the roads and all the work done on them.

Robert Linn thanked the mover and seconder and he would be in the field for Councillor, and asked the electors to support him.

Wm. Hume, Jr., not present. John Ingram, not present. W. T. Allan after thanking his mover and seconder said that he thought they should have a representative in his part of the township as they had not had one for two or three years. If elected to the Council would do his best.

John Locke, said he did not think it a good plan to lose all the old men in the Council, as the men in harness knew better the conditions of affairs than those not in harness. He was not in favor of a one man Council to look after a district. He thought it the duty of the Council as a whole to look into and know all about all the roads, etc. It was one thing to find fault but the next thing to do better. He criticized some of the road work done near his place. He said as there were so many Councillors in the field he might as well be one of them.

Harold B. Wood, nominated for Councillor. He had been asked to be in the Council on one or two occasions before, but since there is going to be an election, he will stand, and will do his very best and that if a dollar is spent he will see that there shall be a hundred cents value.

Robert Waddel, nominated for Councillor, thanked his mover and seconder, but did not wish to stand. Reeve Vonvolkenburg in his reply, said he admired good honest criticism. In reference to a one man Council he said, they had all gone over the work and the whole Council knew what was spent and what was going on in the other man's division. Mr. Vonvolkenburg said, he did not intend to run for Reeve and was dropping out. The clerk reminded every candidate who intended standing must see to it that he qualify in the clerk's office before nine o'clock on Tuesday night. He also thanked the large audience for their splendid order and gentlemanly conduct. There were about three hundred men present.

At the township nominations in Chandos yesterday, R. Scott was re-elected to the Reeveship by acclamation.

Fight in Burleigh.

His colleague of the past year, D. Brown, Reeve of Burleigh and Anstruther, evidently has a fight on his hands. Norman Lean, who is no stranger to the County Council, was nominated to contest the seat.

AARHUS, Denmark, Dec. 30.—Of the 330 communes into which Denmark is divided 270 now favor prohibition, and in only 60 is there a majority of the voters in favor of retaining alcohol, according to Larsent Ledet, member of the Danish Parliament from this city and leader in the prohibition movement.

According to M. Ledet, "it is hopeless to expect the moral and economic regeneration of Europe unless intoxicating liquor disappears from the face of the earth."

SHINING TOWER OF DAVID DISCOVERED

Excavations in Palestine Reveal Ancient City of Paramount Interest.

JERUSALEM, Palestine, Dec. 30. —Excavations in progress for six months in Ophel, close to the area where stood the Jewish temple, seem to have revealed this as the indisputable site of the city of David, according to the Rev. J. Garrow Duncan, director of the Palestine exploration fund.

His explorations have led him to what he is convinced is the eastern side of David's city, where he has discovered not only a wall 27 feet thick and which he has traced for 200 yards, but also a magnificent tower of David.

He is certain he has discovered the real Jebusite wall of the fort which was standing when David took it in the year 1000 B. C.

Inhabited for 5,000 Years.

The discovery of remains of the ancient city of David is of great interest to archaeologists, who have long debated the location of the original site of ancient Jerusalem.

Mr. Duncan claims that in addition to finally settling this point, he has been able to prove that the site where David's city stood has been continuously inhabited for over 5,000 years, some of the pottery unearthed at Ophel belonging to the cave-dwelling period of 3,000 years B.C. and before.

The site has yielded also basketfuls of Hebrew pottery, and any number of jar handles with Hebrew inscriptions dedicated to Jehovah.

Town of White Limestone.

The tower of David, with its clean surface of white limestone, is now once more exposed to the light of day and visible from every part of the city.

The Palestine government has declared this part of the ancient wall a national monument, and the tower is being restored.

WATCHING FRANCE.

Political Sharps Hear French Intend to Send Warship to Valone.

ROME, Dec. 30.—(United Press) —Anxiety is manifested in political circles with the publication of a report the French government intends to dispatch a warship to Valona, Albania. Further news of the subject is awaited with interest and some elements see a possible attempt of France to negotiate with the Albanian Government. Commenting on the report the Nuovo Paez says in to-day's issue:

"The report that Italy intended to send a battleship to Albania was quickly denied. Now it seems that France intends to take care of the interests of her subjects and also perhaps show its pleasure at what happened on the other side of the Adriatic. We repeat with a true cry of alarm;

"Keep your eyes on Valona."

HASTINGS WON GAME.

Defeated Campbellford by a Score of Five to Two.

HASTINGS, Dec. 30. — Hastings won the first hockey game played here this season when they defeated the Campbellford squad by the score of 5-2 on Monday evening.

The visitors were a much lighter team than the locals, but deserved credit for what they accomplished. Although the locals have had very little practice as yet this year, they stand a good show of going a long way in the Trent Valley League.

The most of the play was around the visitors' nets, and in the last period N. Scriver was replaced in the nets by Bill Scriver.

The line-up was:

VARIETY IN STAMP PRINTING.

Efforts are constantly being made to improve the method of printing our postage stamps and the result is that the red stamp now in general use, is to be had in four different processes. MAKING HEADWAY.

The campaign against the revolver is gaining momentum.

The pressure of newspaper opinion is reflected in the fact that such well-known organizations as Sears, Roebuck & Co. and Butler Bros. have stopped selling revolvers by mail, and an effort is being made to have the United States Government prohibit all mail selling of these deadly firearms.

The agitation is not to be wondered at.

With at least 10,000 murders a year across the line, steps to put an end to this unprecedented slaughter are absolutely necessary.

By far a majority of murders are done with revolvers.

You often read of revolver killings, and only occasionally of a life taken by knife or club or poison.

To stop the shooting the supply of firearms must be shut off, and the suppression of mail order sales is the first logical step, because when firearms can be purchased in this way the effectiveness of local regulations in regard to the sale of revolvers is materially diminished.

Eventually, as the Examiner has persistently argued, the manufacture of revolvers will be prohibited—the only effective way of hampering the killer.

USING THE BANKS.

Of the victimizing of credulous investors there seems to be no end.

The blowing up of a music company in Winnipeg, which has been declared defunct and the manager of which has disappeared without a trace, is the latest illustration of what Barnum meant when he said there was one born every minute.

This particular swindle, as it undoubtedly was, claimed a particularly large number of victims in London, Ont., where a salesman of great eloquence and no little ability succeeded in luring many dollars into a concern that from the beginning had no chance to succeed.

A glib tongue and the ever-present fascination that the making of easy money has for most people made it a very easy matter for this high-pressure operator to loot London.

The point is that the investors believed the salesman, and they did not make any further investigation.

The London Advertiser declares that it knows of two bank managers who three months ago had confidential reports on this company and were prepared to do their clients a good service by warning them to keep out of it, but in neither case did any of the investors ask the bankers anything about it.

The incident goes to show that we don't make enough use of our banks.

In most cases a bank can give or obtain a report upon concerns of this kind, and if the advice of the banker was sought it is certain that many of the dubious investments reported would never be made.

People with money to invest make a serious mistake in not availing themselves of the protective service the banks are willing to furnish to their customers.

GOOD BUSINESS.

So often have the original appropriations for public works been exceeded that when an undertaking is completed inside the estimate the public has reason to be gratified—and surprised.

The statement, therefore, in regard to the cost of the construction by the local Hydro-electric Commission of the new substation, waterworks office and storeroom, garage and transformer station on Aylmer street makes good reading.

It will be remembered that the original estimate of the cost of the substation itself, including the land, was $150,071.00, and the people passed a bylaw authorizing the expenditure of $150,000 for this purpose.

The commission was successful in completing the substation for $130,044.97, leaving a surplus, including debenture premium, of $24,139.03.

A waterworks office being necessary, the surplus from the substation was utilized for its construction, and this essential building was erected at a cost of $21,850.24, leaving a balance of $2,288.79, which in turn was used for the building of a garage and a storeroom for a surplus stock of transformers, the work being done for $2,458.33.

The net result of all these operations is that at a total excess of only $169.54 over the original estimate of the cost of the substation itself, the Utilities Commission has a complete plant, including not only the substation but a splendid office and storeroom for the Waterworks Department and a much-needed garage and transformer storeroom.

The handling of this matter has been done in a very business-like manner, and Peterborough's citizens have received much greater value for the $150,000 than even the most optimistic supporter of the original bylaw would have ventured to predict.

THE SCHOOL QUESTION.

Interest in the aldermanic campaign should be quickened by the fact that during 1925 two very important questions are likely to be before the Council—the taking over by the city of the Hydro enterprises here and the Board of Education's request for funds for the erection of a combined Collegiate Institute and Technical School.

The first of these questions may not eventuate next year, but the second is sure to be before the Council, and it might help many citizens to make up their minds if the candidates in the field for the Council would give some light upon the attitude they can be counted upon to take.

With a large sum of money involved, there are numerous ratepayers who would like to know just where the aspirants for aldermanic honours stand on this question.

Are they prepared to adopt the recommendation of the Board of Education and pass the necessary bylaw on their own responsibility, as the Council is justified in doing if the majority of its members so think, or will their position be that an expenditure of this magnitude should be submitted to the people for the sanction of the ratepayers?

Candidates for the Council should be prepared to say now, before the election, how they line up on this most important question.

It may be that this school enterprise will hinge upon the five men elected on Thursday.

The ratepayers have a right to know what they are voting for.

If they are committing Peterborough to this expenditure without a vote of the people they at least should be given the opportunity of doing it with their eyes open.

Aldermanic candidates should put their cards down on the table.

THE CROP YEAR.

History of the crop year for 1924 has been nearly all written, and the United States Department of Agriculture reports that the principal cultivated crops have a gross farm value of $9,479,902,000.

This does not cover everything produced nor the livestock products. The same crops last year were valued at $8,726,889,000 and two years ago $7,816,000,000. When the full history is written it will be found that farm production is above $13,200,000,000, or a billion more than a year ago.

There have been many successes and a few tragedies in this present history, says Barron's. It seemed as if the elements made a savage assault on King Corn as if attempting to depose him. But notwithstanding he lost heavily and comes through with the smallest number of bushels since 1903, he still sits on the throne. The total farm value of the corn crop on the first of December was valued at $2,405,468,000, or $200,000,000 more than a year ago. But notwithstanding this large money value the corn crop is small and poor. The feeding value is not more than 50 per cent. of average, and, in fact, is not sufficient to satisfy normal requirements of the farm.

Cotton, the principal rival of corn for regal honors, apparently made a desperate endeavor for first position. Production of 13,153,000 bales was 30 per cent. more than that of last year. Notwithstanding this increase, the value of the crop, including seed, is approximately $100,000,000 less than that of a year ago, the average farm price for lint being 22.6 cents a pound, against 31 cents last year and the seed $33.56 a ton, against $45.92 a year ago.

Interest centres in the wheat crop of 872,673,000 bushels, against 797,381,000 a year ago. This is 10 per cent. more wheat on 10 per cent. less land than in 1923. The money value also is $400,000,000 greater than in 1923. Wheat farmers get almost half of the increase in value of farm production. What seems strange is that figures for the wheat crop of the United States steadily increased, while those of all other countries constantly declined from the earlier estimates.

Now that the world harvest can be pretty closely estimated the International Institute of Agriculture says that there is a world deficit of 401,000,000 bushels of wheat and 173,000,000 of rye, making 574,000,000 bushels less of bread-grain than actual requirements. This means that every bushel of our available surplus of whea t and rye will leave our shores and that before next May there will be wild fluctuations in a market that must be unusually sensitive to every change in new crop conditions.

But so far as the influence of agriculture is concerned business can regard the first half of 1925 with great complacency. Beyond that, the future depends upon the new crops.

WHAT CREDIT MEANS.

When analysed, credit is found to be always the possession of individuals, says the Ottawa Journal. That is considerably true when a nation borrows, or when a business corporation does so. In both cases, it is the property of individuals which is the main basis of the credit. Of course, character, individual and collective, counts also. Mexico could not borrow money as cheaply as Canada, even upon equal wealth. The Mexican people would first have to establish a reputation for political stability. Still, it is a mistake to take a merely impersonal view of the debts of nations, states and municipalities.

For the purposes of illustration, let us take the case of the debt of the Dominion. At Confederation, it stood at $93,046,052. By the end of 1913, it had grown to $483,232,555. And then by tremendous leaps it rose to $2,888,827,237 at the close of 1923. The ability to borrow on that fearsome scale rests on what is commonly called "the credit of Canada." But what is really meant is credit due to the individual possessions of her population.

National credit has its foundation in two things, outside of national character. First, the power to tax the people for the money necessary to pay interest charges; and second, the power to place a lien on individual property as security for the money borrowed. We should all very clearly see that this is a tremendous power. The practical results from the exercising of it in the case of the national debt are rather startling. Whereas in 1867 the average of the mortgage resting on the possessions of the average family in Canada was $125, it is now $1,605.

When the Dominion Government floats a loan, it borrows against its power to tax, with the private property of the people of Canada as security for the debt incurred. When the Province borrows, or the municipality borrows, precisely the same thing happens. It is invariably and unavoidably the credit of individuals which forms the basis of the transaction.

To speak of the debt of the Dominion, as though it attached to anything which the Crown owns, is therefore misleading. It is the people who owe, and the people who have supplied the credit. To grasp that truth is to have the situation changed from an impersonal to an intensely personal complexion. Instead of each citizen saying, "the country owes so much," he should say "I owe so much." Of course, the average family in Canada does not owe $1,605 of national debt. A rich family owes a far greater proportion, a poor family much less. But liability exists for each, and is direct in its effects.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The London Rotary Club has sent the following message to its members: "Resolved, to get more out of 1925 by putting more into it." Perhaps the Rotarians will allow that idea to be generally used.

No citizen who does not exercise his franchise on Thursday can boast of starting the new year right.

The first duty of the new year—and a most important one—is to live up to civic.

The West may be anxious to get new markets for its wheat, but it continues to ship all its cold spells down this way.

A THOUGHT.

"REVENGE IS SWEET" —POISON

It is my belief that most men have a lot of heaven in their hearts and that all men have more or less bitterness in their heads.

Down deep in a good man's heart there is little room for bitterness, but even a good man will harbor in his head a resentment.

Now, how can we get this poison out of our heads?

Resentment breeds a desire for revenge and revenge results in wild remorse.

Revenge recoils. It opens the wound. Revenge is a passion that promises a great deal and pays but little.

One is always beneath his own foundation when not above an injury.

Indignation interrupts clear thinking and constructive acting. Animosity is anarchy. When we show to the world we are savage, relentless and rabid, the world avoids us.

There are those whom you do not like, people you do not care for, but the world is wide. There are two sides to every street.

When a man spends his time heating a furnace to blister the man he hates, he usually gets singed himself.

The great trouble with wrathful feelings, the real curse of getting your "back up," the danger of foaming at the mouth, is, you always make a monkey of yourself.—The Silent Partner.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK.

TORONTO, Dec. 29.—The Union Stock Yards witnessed a decidedly strong market to-day and some butchers' cattle were a dollar a cwt. higher than last week. To-day's receipts were 95 cars, 1,248 cattle and 217 billed through; 127 calves, 1,607 hogs and 243 sheep and lambs. Average shipping steers were $8 a cwt. and one load of good ones went at $8.25 a cwt. On these cattle the quotation was easily up 25 cents a cwt., quality considered.

A few export heifers sold at $7 to $7.25 a cwt. and some steers not fully finished brought $7.75 a cwt. The selection of butchers was not large and Frank Hunnisett said he paid $6.75 for a load only equal to some bought last week at $5.40 a cwt. Butchers' cows were stronger but the increase here was limited to about 25 cents a cwt. The commission men admitted a good trade, but denied that the increase in prices was as much as claimed by the buyers.

Rogers & Maybee bought about 180 and H. P. Kennedy about 30 on the market for export and both firms could have used more. Export cows were $5 a cwt. up and bulls $4.50 to $5. The market was almost cleaned up at 11 o'clock. One load of Western 800-lb. stockers sold at $5 a cwt. The top paid for butchers was $7 to $7.50 a cwt., but there were few of this quality on offer. Loads of good handyweight butchers sold at $6.75 to $6.85 a cwt. and good mediums at $6.25 a cwt.

Calves were wanted for Buffalo again to-day, and any vealers worth consideration sold from 10 to 13½ cents a pound. Common calves, which were selling at 5 cents a couple of weeks ago, are now 7 cents a pound. All the calves on sale were picked up quickly.

There was a hot market in lambs, and prices jumped $2 a cwt. to a top of 15½ cents a pound on light ewes and wethers. Heavier lambs sold at 14½ cents. Sheep were also strong, and choice butchers' sheep were worth $8 a cwt.

Hogs are still advancing and a rise of another 25 cents a cwt. to $10 a cwt. f.o.b. was not questioned, and it is quite likely that this figure will be exceeded.

MONTREAL GRAIN.

MONTREAL, Dec. 29—(Canadian Press).—The foreign demand for Canadian grain here to-day was not very brisk and the export business was reported dull. On spot No. 1 Northern was offering at 10½ cents per bushel over the Winnipeg December option, No. 2 Northern at 4½ cents per bushel under, and No. 3 Northern at the May option price, c.i.f. bay ports with no buyers. The domestic demand for oats was slow, but the tone of the market was firm. Ontario No. 2 white oats being quoted at 65 cents, No. 3 grade at 63 cents, and No. 4 grade at 61 cents per bushel, ex-store.

A firm feeling prevailed in the egg market, but prices showed no change, and the volume of business was moderate sized. The demand for butter was limited, but the undertone was firm. Little business was transacted in cheese, but the tendency of the market continues firm, with some holders of June, July and August made cheese asking as high as 20½ cents per lb. waxed, and current receipts were quoted at 18 to 18½ cents per pound.

Crop beans were quoted at $2.70 and $2.80 per bushel for one-pound pickers.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Dec. 29.— (Canadian Press).—Reports that Argentina and Australia are decidedly under-selling United States wheat in Europe had much to do to-day with a sharp setback in wheat prices here. POSTAL HOLIDAY.

No Delivery of Mail By Rural Cariers on New Year's.

CAVAN, Dec. 30.—There will be no rural mail delivery on New Year's Day as the Postmaster-General has granted a holiday on that day to all rural mail carriers. This holiday will be much appreciated by the carriers.

The box-holders on the Seventh Line of Cavan showed their kind Christmas spirit for their mail-carriers, Mr. and Mrs. J. Bothwell, by each box-holder leaving an envelope containing a sum of money in it. This amounted to a well-filled purse, showing their appreciation of their services during the past year.

On Sunday evening the Rev. R. T. Richards gave an interesting and instructive recital of Henry Van Dyke's book, "The Other Wise Man."

Next Sunday evening, the first Sunday in the New Year, his subject will be "New Paths."

Miss Belva and Master Ralph Woodsworth, Ottawa, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Staples and family.

On Saturday afternoon, Miss Helen Syer gave a tea for a number of her girl friends who are spending their Christmas vacation at their homes in Cavan Centre.

Miss Ruth Keegan returned to Rochester on Monday.

Miss Olive Perrin has returned to Toronto.

THE "PYROLL GIRL" AT J. LYNCH'S DRUG STORE

Young Lady Displays Teeth Whitened And Cleaned by Use of Pyroll.

The "Pyroll Girl" is the latest addition to James Lynch's well-known Hunter street drug store. The lady is a permanent visitor, and occupies a sizable space on the western wall, where she shows here perfect set of teeth, whitened by the use of Pyroll, that "keeps the teeth, mouth and throat clean," in a pleasant smile. She forms part of a quite extensive scheme of mural decoration carried out in very attractive style by Messrs Harris and Boddy.

At the entrance to the store, the "Pyroll Girl flashes a welcome to patrons. She is a joyous young damsel, with pink-flushed, healthy cheeks and fair hair, a white middy blouse with red scarf, and her pretty face has a background of blue sky and flat cream paint. The same buff surrounds the advertisements for Dr. Norvalls stomach and tonic tablets, Dr. Bantas Pills, and a second reminder of the excellence of Pyroll dentifrice, that emblazon in long streamers the upper spaces of the east and west walls. Against their light backing ,done in red and blue lettering, picked out with black, they make a novel and interesting interior decoration.

PERSONAL FACTS ABOUT THOSE WHO ASPIRE TO CITY OFFICES AT THE MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS

Five Ex-Aldermen Seek Re-, Election, While Seven New Names Appear.

FEW COMMITTMENTS

Policies of Most Candidates Remain to be Seen, But Some Take Definite Stand.

Here is some personal information on the candidates for the Aldermanic Board whose names will be on the ballot papers on Thursday. They will appear in alphabetical order as they are placed here:

Ex-Alderman Joseph Crowe.

Ex-Alderman Joseph Crowe has completed seven years as Alderman, having been appointed six years ago to take the place of Alex Murray, who resigned. Previous to that Mr. Crowe had served a one year term. Four years ago he was re-elected at the head of the poll, and two years ago he was again returned. In private life Mr. Crowe is employed as moulder with the William Hamilton Co.

If elected, this candidate will demand that the city own its own paving plant which he believes will save money; he will demand a revision of the salaries paid to city officials, mostly downward; and he will support the doing of all possible city work in winter.

He has also declared in favor of having one boss or supervisor in the city offices, who would appy expert methods in having the clerical work done as efficiently and cheaply as possible.

Roland Denne.

Roland Denne, well known flour and feed merchant, has just completed twelve years on the Board of Education where he rendered good service. He has had considerable experience in public life, having been for several years president of the Liberal-Conservative Association of West Peterborough and several years president of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition, still holding the latter office. Mr. Denne missed two meetings during his twelve year's service on the School Board.

Ex-Alderman J. O. Fife.

Ex-Alderman J. O. Fife, real estate dealer, was elected two years ago and has shown during his term in office that he is capable of giving sane and careful thought to any problem that comes before the council. Mr. Fife demands all the facts in a case before taking a stand, and is willing to hear all sides of a question before giving his studied decision.

J. M. Greene.

J. M. Greene, managing director of the J. M. Greene Music Co., a firm having its headquarters in Peterborough and several branches throughout the district, has served seven years on the Board of Education, having been chairman in 1924. Mr. Green believes that his twenty years of successful business in his own interests qualify him to apply sound business principles to the business of the people, and his energy and progressive attitude on the Board of Education indicate that he would bring the same "forward" policy to the deliberations of Council.

Wilbert J. Hancock.

Wilbert J. Hancock, auctioneer, has not previously come before the electors seeking civic honors, but is well known through his business relations and in his thirteen years association with real estate transactions in the city. Mr. Hancock believes that he has his fingers on the pulse of the city and knows the treatment it needs.

He intimates that he will have something to do with the tax rate, if he is elected, and will do what is best for the people who foot the bill.

G. L. Hay.

G. L. Hay, secretary-treasurer of The Peterborough Examiner, and Director for the last six years, comes before the electors for the second time, having served as Alderman for the year 1921. Mr. Hay believes that the same business methods should be applied to the administration of the city's affairs that are used in private business.

Ex-Alderman M. J. Maher.

Ex-Alderman M. J. Maher, partner in a clothing business on Charlotte street, has served two years as Alderman. Up until a short time ago he was manager of the Oak Hall store in Peterborough, and previous to that he was in partnership with J. T. C. Lang, who passed away yesterday. Mr. Maher has always taken a great interest in the city's affairs, being associated with several civic associations for the advancement of the city's welfare. Coming before the electors on this occasion, he stands on his record for the past two years, and promises if elected to give his best consideration to all business brought before the council.

Ex-Alderman J. W. Meyers.

Ex-Alderman J. W. Meyers, president and managing director of the Peterborough Cereal Co. Ltd. has also completed two years service on the Aldermanic Board, where his opinion has always been received with the attention warranted by his long business experience and his achievements. Mr. Meyers has served as Chairman of the Manufacturers' Committee, and in that capacity was responsible for opening up the inquiry into the power account of the Campbell Milling Company, involving $15,000 for power which he says the company have used but which he claims was not charged by the Utilities Commission. This is now pending under the form of a Judicial Inquiry undertaken by the City Council.

Mr. Meyers pledges himself always to work in the interests of the people he represents.

Ex-Alderman Robert Morrison

Ex-Alderman Robert Morrison, electrician, completes his sixth consecutive year as an Alderman, having served this last term as chairman of the Board of Works. He has also been the city's representative on the Suburban Area Commission, with jurisdiction of certain roads extending from the city limits. Mr. Morrison is enthusiastic about anything he takes up, and carries his battles to decisions.

Thomas E. Sargent.

Thomas E. Sargent, agent, is a new aspirant for office who brings forward his two years service on the township council of Otonabee as a qualification for election to the Aldermanic Board of the City of Peterborough. Mr. Sargent promises the electors he will give his best judgment to all matters touching the interests and progress of the citizens.

John Hugh Spence.

John Hugh Spence, inspector in the Utilities Commission, is prominent in Orange circles in the city. He advocates the most economical administration, looks for less unemployment in 1925, and at the same time promises his support to measures of progress.

Frederick T. Tuggey.

Frederick T. Tuggey, bricklayer, is back in the municipal ring after a previous defeat. He stands on the square, he says, for the interests of the citizens, and has no private interests to help.

FACTORY ASKS LOAN

Many Years Since the River Was Frozen So Extensively.

LINDSAY, Dec. 30.—Lindsay Board of Trade, it is understood, is angling for a coffin factory. Those behind the concern have visited town a few days ago and looked over the ground. It is understood the concern would like to secure a loan of $10,000. Many citizens do not take kindly to the proposal. They point to the fact that Lindsay had paid dearly in the past for attempting to spoon feed certain enterprises, which later proved white elephants.

PEOPLE OF TODAY HAVE FINE IDEALS

Speaker at Millbrook Says World is Going Ahead at Present.

MILLBROOK, Dec. 30.—Anniversary services in connection with the Methodist Sunday School were held on Sunday, Rev. Principal Farewell, of the Ontario Ladies' College, Whitby, being the speaker for the day.

Considering the severe weather, a good congregation was present at the morning service, the special music by the choir including two anthems, "Hail, Thou Long Expected Jesus," with solo by F. N. Alcorn, and duet by Mrs. F. P. Johnston, and Mrs. G. W. Sayles, and "The Prince of Peace."

Mr. Farewell, who was for several years secretary of the Ontario Sunday School, gave a blackboard talk, his subject dealing with the education and development of our young life from birth until adult years. His address was prefaced with two statements regarding his personal convictions (a) "I believe that young people today are better than ever before in the history of the world; they have finer ideals, and a broader outlook on life's problems, than in any previous generation; "(b)" "I am an optimist; I do not believe that the world is going to the dogs. True, there are periods of reaction when it does seem as though Christianity has failed, but, though thrown back, it is only to gather new forces, and go forward to higher ideals, and nobler standards than ever before."

The "Life line" drawn on the blackboard was divided into periods of childhood, and youth, and the fact noted that from birth to about ten years the child is subject to the authority of parents, teachers, and pastor; but from eleven to fourteen or sisteen years there is a question mark after everything seen, or thought about. "Why"? is the constant query, inherent in each individual for this is the period of selfdetermination—"I have the right to determine my own career, and choose what I shall be in life. "No wise parent, or teacher, will attempt to carry authority over into this period, co-operation being the only policy likely to succeed, the aim being to develop initiative and self-reliance in making choice of what best to do and be in life. Working together with, rather than "you must" is the ideal plan.

The Sunday School has an important part in educating the boys and girls during the years of strain, stress and struggle, so often startling in their intensity, and helping them to become the men and women they might be, not merely a fraction of the same. We shall avert a tragedy if we help them to realize all their powers ultimately to the very full.

The home, the public school, the Sunday School, and the community the educative forces which influence the unfolding life. The home, pre-eminent in the earliest years, gradually grows less of a factor, as the others become pre-dominant, the 'teen age youth becoming more and more directly influenced by environment as years advance. There can be no question as to the responsibility of the community to make stimulating, and morally as well as physically healthful, the environent with which its young people are surrounded. Its play life, its social functions, its church life, its concerts, its educational facilities its public institution, should all be suggestive of the finest ideals, and the attainment of the best things.

A Sunday School superintendent, and staff of teachers and officers, who love children and young people, and who love Jesus, who realize that a child is "God's problem awaiting man's solution,' and that "Childhood is like a mirror, catching and reflecting images from all around it,' are an asset of untold value in any church, and community, in educating for the wisest, purest, and highest choices as the developing lives expand, and each takes his, or her place in the citizenship of the country. "A Christion is the highest style of man.'

Anniversary.

The anniversary occasion in connection with the Methodist Sunday School, observed on the last Sunday of the old year, or the first Sunday of the New, is the "red letter" day in the school's programme for the twelve months.

The church auditorium was well filled by 2.30 p.m. on Sunday, the superintendent, W. Fred Fallis, having associated with him on the platform Rev.fl Principal Fanewell of the O.L.C., Whitby, who addressed the scholars using as his subject matter the story of David and Goliath, dramatically told.

At the conclusion of the regular session, the awards were distributed Annually the school gives a prize, preferably a Bible unless the scholar has won such any previous year, to the pupil who has not missed a Sunday during te year. Also to the one reciting all the verses of the lessons of the year, or the highest number in a class provided at least one nundred and fifty verses are memorized.

Eleven scholars had been present every Sunday.

Boneka Class.

Ethel Forsyth, in the "Boneka" class, Mrs. (Rev) Howard, teacher; Pearl Childs in "Golden Rule" class, Mrs. C. W. Richards, teacher; Wilma Fallis, in "Maple Leaf" class, Mrs. O. Williamson, teacher; Rena Guthrie in Mrs. J. Hatherlys class; Eric Clarke and William Skitch in Mrs. I. M. Nattrass' class; Bruce Freelove, who has not missed a Sunday in six years, in the Senior Trail Rangers' class, Mr. T. H. Aiken, teacher; George Clarke, who has not missed a Sunday in four years, in the Junior Trail Rangers' class, F. N. Alcorn, teacher; Bonna Clarke and Elwood Fallis in the Primary Department, Miss Pearl Burnham, superintendent.

One scholar, Bertha Lang, in Mrs. Williamson's class, had learned all the verses in all the lessons during the year, 583 being the number correctly recited. Other winning awards were:—Marian Earle, and Sadie Rowland in Mrs. McComb's class, with 209 and 160 respectively; Gerald Raper in Mrs. Nattrass' class 176 verses; Elsie Spence and Pearl Childs, in Mrs. Richards' class, who said 216 and 151 respectively; Henry Raper, in Mrs. J. McKnight's class, 239 verses. Recited 1346, average 112; collections $56.53, average $4.35. The year report was most encouraging, the figures being: Attendance 7033, average 135; verses recited 4279, average 82; collections $248.78, average $4.78.

The treasurer's report was read by W. G. Hetherington, who has held the office for several years, and showed the expenditures of the year were $421.58, the balance on hand $101.58, with liabilities for supplies, etc. of $167.60.

All the children of the primary department were remembered with a book suitable to the varying ages, this being the custom annually followed. Miss Ella Elson presided at the piano during the session. Messrs G. E. and Ernest Burnham, with their cornets, supplying a good lead for the singing which was heartily entered into by all present. Rev. Mr. Farewell pronounced the benediction.

The next regular meeting of the executive of the Sunday School will be held on the second Tuesday in January at 8 p.m. in the league room of the church.

HAIR

Red-haired women make better wives than brunets or blonds, says a San Francisco judge. His reason: "Not one out of every 100 women who come before my court seeking divorce has red hair."

Yet that doen't prove anything, since not one woman in 100 has red hair.

The color of the hair is usually the result of distant heredity. Its importance in temperament and character is exaggerated.

HEAVY REDUCTION IN PACKARD PRICES

Closed Models of the "Six" Cut to Price of Open Cars.

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 30.—The Packard Motor Car Company Monday threw a bomb into the automobile industry with the announcement of one of the most drastic cuts in prices made on any automobile in years. Reductions which affect all closed models of the "Packard Six" bring them down to the same prices as those on the open cars Reductions run from $640. to $840.

Officers of the company said the reduction had been made in the midst of one of the most prosperous years in the company's history and with prospects ahead for a big year for the entire industry, because it was believed that the action would result in a big increase in distribution which would full justify it. The new schedules are to be maintained, he added, as long as the expected increase in volume of business is maintained. The price of "Packard Eights" is not affected. Alvan Macauley, president of the company, explained that the new prices are applied to the regular standard "Packard Six" closed cars which are to be continued of exactly the same quality as before.

The company's quarterly financial statement just issued shows it to have $18,155,578.50 in cash and marketable securities, with earnings for the quarter ending November of $1,872,753, one of the best quarterly periods in its history. Particular significance is attached to the action on prices because of the large volume of business now being done by Packard. Mr. Macauley said the financial position of the company made it possible for Packard to seize what it believes a real opportunity.

ALLIES' ACTION WIDELY SPLITS GERMAN GROUPS

Uncompromising Attitude of Nationalists Hardened by Refusal to Evacuate Cologne.

RUHR COMES FIRST

Socialists More Determined Against Coalition With Nationalists.

BERLIN, Dec. 30.—German official quarters appear to take the situation growing out of the postponement of the allied evacuation of the Cologne bridgehead—set by the Versailles treaty for January 10 — less tragically than German editors or popular opinion. Government leaders seem to welcome the holiday recess as serving a useful purpose in that it is expected to accomplish moderation of the present public indignation.

The reticence of government officials so far as it is reflected in an disinclination to discuss the action of the allied council of ambassadors at Paris in deciding upon a postponement of the Cologne evacuation, is received as an indication that the London, Paris and Brussels governments have not yet arrived at a complete understanding in the matter and that the issue will be referred to formal negotiations between them and Germany.

While considerable sentiment attaches to the rigid observance of the evacuation dates, as prescribed by the treaty of Versailles, there is a strong current of semi-official and private opinion here that a compromise on the question of the Cologne bridgehead would be tolerable if linked up with the positive understanding that France and Belgium would quit the Ruhr at an appreciably early date.

Final and complete liberation of Germany's most important industrial sector, after two years foreign occupancy is viewed here as being a question of greater immediate urgency than the release of Cologne and, to this extent, it is hoped that the occupying powers will come forward with a complete proposal guaranteeing the definite evacuation of both areas at a date which will reconcile the German government and popular opinion to an occupation of Cologne by British troops beyond January 10.

Politics Complicated

The action of the council of ambassadors, however, has contributed a disturbing factor to the German internal political situation in that it is expected to complicate the problem of forming a new government out of a deadlocked party lineup resulting from the recent Reichstag elections. It has served to accelerate the intransigeant attitude of the Nationalist parties on one hand and has also, it is said, strengthened the antagonism of the Socialists to any proposition involving participation of the Westarp-Von Tirpitz party in a cabinet whose first business it will be to find a solution to the foreign impasse growing out of the allies' prospective failure to vacate Cologne.

The Vorwaerts, the Socialist organ, declares point blank that a government containing Nationalists, would be an anomaly in the present situation, and suggests it would do no harm to try and discover whether mistakes were committed by a government which forced Premier Herriot to abandon his programme of Franco-German rapprochement.

REFORMED BY CIRCUMSTANCES.

The consumption of alcoholic drinks in France has decreased 60 percent since the year 1913, according to the Echo de Paris. This fact should bring joy to the hearts of the prohibitionists.

JURY IN LIQUOR CASE DRANK THE "EVIDENCE"

Judge Dismissed Them And Ordered a New Trial.

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, Dec. 30. —(Canadian Press).—Five inches of liquor in a quart bottle is too much for twelve jurors to consume in determining whether the "evidence" contains more than one half of one per cent. alcohol, in the opinion of Federal Judge Odlin, who ordered a mis-trial of the hearing because the jury spent part of its time in court and part in the jury room and because too much evidence disappeared.

The bottle in question was almost full when it was delivered to the jury. The latter retired with the "evidence" and, after several hours, reached a verdict. But when the verdict was handed in the bottle was empty and the courtroom was found in "great disorder." The judge discharged the jury.

CANADA'S REPLY ON CONFERENCE

Government's Leaders Not Needed at Proposed Imperial Conference in London.

FORWARDED TO-DAY.

OTTAWA, Dec. 30. —(Canadian Press.)— Canada's reply probably will go out within twenty-four hours to the invitation of the British government to attend in March next a conference of empire on the Geneva protocol and Britain's suggested alternative. The dominion government has given out no official declaration of its policy on the matter, but it is generally understood that Canada's attitude will be that the attendance of Canadian cabinet leaders in London while the dominion parliament is in full swing is not necessary to the solution of the difficulty. As much can be achieved by the exchange of letters and cables, it is generally considered here, and only if this means of communication fails should the presence of government leaders in London be required. Indications are that Australia and New Zealand intend to take the same attitude.

The reply deals only with the question of Canada's attendance at a suggested imperial conference. What Canada will do about the protocol itself, is not touched on, nor has any indication been given so far of the dominion's intentions. It is understood that the cabinet in Ottawa has the matter under consideration but it is far from a decision as yet.

Capetown's Sentiment.

CAPETOWN, Union of South Africa, Dec. 30.— (Canadian Press Cable Via Reuter's.) — Attention here is being focused on the Geneva protocol and the proposal to have the matter considered by a conference of dominion representatives with members of the Baldwin Cabinet at London. The conference is considered impracticable at present and the general feeling as voiced by public men throughout the Union is opposed to the protocol in its present form.

RECORD OF SLAUGHTER.

FREDERICTON, N.B., Dec. 29.— Fifteen hundred moose and 3,200 deer were killed by hunters in New Brunswick during the game season this year, according to a compilation completed by Chief Game Warden L. A. Gagnon, from returns so far available.

EASTBOUND RATES

British Columbia Prepare Protest to Railway Board.

VICTORIA, B. C., Dec. 30.—The British Columbia government Monday prepared a formal application to the Railway Board for an order making the Crow's Nest freight rates applicable to eastbound as well as westbound goods. A statement issued by Premier Oliver said that the Government was protesting against "any discrimination against this province which arises out of the decision of the Federal Government restoring the Crow's Nest rates."

It was explained that under the Cabinet's recent decision British Columbia goods do not receive the advantage conferred on the products of the prairie provinces as the Crow's Nest rates affect only westbound goods. Mr. Oliver is expected to take up the rate situation while he is in Ottawa for the conference on Peace River transportation problems, early in January.

You are a special creation. Millions of others, but not another one just like you.

IRELAND'S PROTEST

Received by League And Circulated Among Members.

GENEVA, Dec. 30. — (Canadian Press).—A letter acknowledging receipt of Ireland's refusal to accept Great Britain's view that the Anglo-Irish treaty is not subject to registration because it is not an international convention and because component parts of the British Empire are not subject to outside inquiry, was despatched Monday by Sir Eric Drummond, secretary general of the League of Nations, to the Dublin Government.

The letter added that Ireland's communication insisting on the right of registering the treaty had been distributed to all members of the League. It also informed the Dublin Government that the Irish communication would be published in the League of Nations treaty series.

"BREAK CLEAN, GIRLS"

Even the old ladies are going in for the strenuous life these days. The photo shows Mrs. Ada Guthrie, 75, and Miss Kate Bagley, 74, inmates of the Old Woman's Home, Atlanta, Ga., in a clinch in their morning round of boxing. Some of the spectators, though, "just cant' bear to look," it would seem from the photo.

RACE DOOMED TO EXTINCTION UNLESS MAN CHANGES HABITS

Dr. Jno. Harvey Scores Drug, Tobacco and "Sweets" Habits of Modern Man.

MUST REVISE DIET

Should Live a More Natural Life, If Humanity is to ..... Survive.

The inordinate eating of sweets in candy and confectionery; the almost universal use of tobacco; the prevalence of modern civilized diet deficient in lime, iron and vitamines, combined with other habits which have fastened themselves upon humanity with the progress of civilization, are threatening the existence of the human race, in the opinion of Dr. John Harvey Kellogg, noted dietitian and surgeon, who is superintendent of the Battle Creek Sanatorium, Michigan.

"There is no doubt that the tendency of modern civilization is to produce race deterioration both physical and mental," Dr. Kellogg writes. "We are going down hill. Insanity is increasing; crime is increasing. Diseases which result from degeneration, such as heart disease, arteriosclerosis, Bright's disease and cancer are steadily increasing. Taken as a whole, modern civilization evidently promotes disease and degeneracy more than health and race improvement, and we are falling into a terrible slough of degeneracy, physical, mental and moral. Really the greatest problem before the world today is to save the human race from extinction."

To the ordinary observer Dr. Kellogg's attitude seems to border on pessimism, but it is hopeful and bright compared with the conclusion reached by scientists whom he quotes. For example, Dr. Charles B. Davenport of the Carnegie Foundation and Major Darwin, son of Charles Darwin, and the leader of the English eugenics movement, have abandoned all hope of an endless future for the human race. The deterioration of the race is more evident, they say, in European countries, particularly in the south of Europe, than in America.

Dr. Kellogg quotes Dr. Henry Fairfield Osborn that "investigations made during the World War led to the discovery that our people on the average have lost two and a half inches in stature since the Civil War.

On the other hand, Dr. Kellogg believes that man, by his intelligence, in the study of eugenics, and euthenics, and whole-hearted efforts to conform himself to the biologic laws which govern his being, may escape the destructive influences that have destroyed races of animals, and which would with equal certainty destroy man unless he intelligently and persistently combats the exterminating forces to which every living creature is exposed.

Things That Blight.

"Undoubtedly unbiologic habits are the chief factors in race deterioration," writes Dr. Kellogg. "A boy born into the world with a capacity to become a giant may be dwarfed and weazened by wrong feeding. The blighting influence of alcohol, tobacco and other drugs, gluttony, sensuality and other vices, cannot be questioned, and these destructive influences are multiplying. Our daily poison dose, through drug habits, has steadily increased from year to year until now the average person living in the United States, including women and children as well as men, swallows daily nearly 300 grains of poison, alcohol, nicotine, caffeine and opium. This alone would be enough to produce profound symptoms of degeneration, if no other causes were in operation."

Dr. Kellogg points out that the United States now consumes 60,000,000,000 cigarettes a year. In this connection he asserts: "Tobacco produces a grave disturbance in nutrition, as indicated by loss of weight. Seaver, who studied Yale students, found that non-smoking students increased in height and in chest girth one-fourth more than the smokers. The increase in chest capacity of the non-smokers was most notable, exceeding that of the smokers by 77 per cent."

Another factor which Dr. Kellogg emphasizes is the deficiency of lime in the ordinary human diet. Lime is an essential element for bone building. Every growing child needs at least twenty or thirty grains of lime, or a third to a half dram of lime daily for the construction of the skeleton, the framework of the body which determines the height. The average diet, he states, is deficient in lime. A full day's ration made up of white bread, meat and potatoes will furnish less than a quarter of the lime required by the growing boy or girl.

"About the only widely used foodstuffs which are rich in lime are oatmeal and milk," asserts the doctor. "But, unfortunately, oatmeal, which was formerly in much more general use than now, has been largely replaced by breakfast foods, often denatured products which are almost wholly lacking in lime and other food salts which are essential for the growth of the body. Coffee, butter, sugar, meat, fruits and, of course, pastry, sweet cakes and desserts are all deficient in lime. Greens, such as spinach, dandelion, kale, beet tops and turnip tops are rich in lime, but these excellent foodstuffs are unfortunately little used. A larger use of milk a day to the average dietary would without doubt result in a marked improvement in physique."

Advises Use of Milk.

If each person consumes an additional pint of milk a day Dr. Kellogg points out that the costly meat consumption might be cut down and possibly eliminated, effecting a saving, for example, in Canada of about $720,000,000 yearly. This sum could rapidly wipe out the national debt.

Such a change in diet would not only be safe, but desirable, Dr. Kellogg maintains. Because of lack of this milk diet, he states, "we are rapidly becoming a toothless race, because the average diet is lacking in material needed for the construction of teeth and bones."

A possible relation between the enormous consumption of sweets and the shrinking stature of the people of North America is also seen by Dr. Kellogg. The consumption of cane sugar in its various forms on this continent has steadily increased during the past fifty years, until now it averages 100 pounds per capita, or more than a quarter of the total food supply.

"Fruits, such as dates, figs and raisins are rich in lime and iron and ought to take the place to a large extent of the cane sugar and confectionery which is now used. Such a substitution of natural sweets for the concentrated artificial products which are now consumed in such inordinate quantity would undoubtedly result in a great improvement in the national physique."

Becoming Anemic People.

There is good ground for believing that the average American is 20 to 30 per cent. below par in the quality of his blood, Dr. Kellogg states. "We are becoming anemic people by depending too largely on foods which are deficient in iron, as well as lime and vitamines." To overcome this and other handicaps of the human race due to diet, Dr. Kellogg advises the discarding of fine flour bread from our tables, the free use of coarse cereals, including oatmeal, and the freer use of roughage in various forms, including greens, fresh vegetables and the coarser cereal products."

"The same forces which have destroyed other creatures, other genera and species, and which are preying upon man as a member of the animal kingdom, instead of being mitigated and neutralized by man's intelligence, have actually been increased and exaggerated by his perversions and vagaries. Man has thus forced upon his body conditions which are so far removed from his biologic and physiologic requirements that, at the present time, he is actually accentuating by his daily habits of life the influence of those destructive forces which have wiped out thousands of species of animals," warns Dr. Kellogg.

"The time has certainly come when the human race should take itself in hand and mark out for itself a regime which will lead toward race improvement to replace our present reckless self-indulgent mode of life which is driving us down to race extinction."

SIDELIGHTS ON MARKET REPORTS

(By Jeannette.)

"Ods ravens and rooks, I am fond of good books,"
Said the king, turning over a page;
"This dear little plant," said his orthodox aunt,
"Is far wiser than you. It is sage."

Yes, sage is associated with wisdom, all right, and we have the tearful onion and the jolly "pumpion," as it used to be called, and the noisy apple and celery stalk, but who would ever think of beans, for instance, as being a temperamental vegetable. They are, if the market reports are to be believed. And they cause dealers a lot of inconvenience with their up-stage tendencies. The trade journals that spend a lot of time and space in giving market reports and discussing the various manifestations of character as exhibited by everydays comestibles have a lot to say about "stiffer" beans. They are evidently getting more haughty as the days go by.

Then there is the sad news chronicled occasionally that rice "is very low." Nobody thought that rice was in an unhealthy condition, but such must be the case. "Nuts supply scarce" is a further indication of the unobservant tendencies of the scribe, and a somewhat shaky sentence formation is evident in the information that "molasses are easy." Is molasses plural? We thought it was singular.

Then we hear of cauliflower that is "steady but firm." Evidently there is no shenanigan about the mealy vegetable. And there are indications of a "nervous" coffee market. Coffee does make some people nervous, but why emphasize it? "Herbs are featureless" is another tactless indictment of a very necessary commodity, but "eggs are active" opens up a wide vista of speculation as to their probable age, and "cheese moves upward" probably doesn't mean what it sounds like.

"Peppers look higher" and "pork shoulders are up" are indications of snobbish characterstics that no one would ever have thought of associating with such things, and there is a touch of catering to riches also in the note that "Wealthy apples arrive." Smoked meats, however, are "quiet," but vegetables are "active," and tea is "very strong." There is satisfaction in the thought that sugar is nearly always chronicled as being "refined," except when it goes on a rampage, and gets "raw," and there is some very welcome news for small sufferers from maternal dosing in the item in "Miscellaneous trade notes" that "castor oil advances in price."

DENKE HAS PRACTICED CANNIBALISM 10 YEARS

Clothing of Victims Was Preserved—Fifteen Suffered at His Hands.

BERLIN, Dec. 30—(United Press)—Karl Denke, the "cannibal man" of Muensterberg, who lured victims to his lonely Silesian farm and killed and ate them, had been practicing cannibalism for ten years, police investigations revealed today.

Neighbors of Denke told stories of suspicious meat cooking in cauldrons which the farmer tended himself. Evidence was found of the death of fifteen men recently. Denke having preserved their clothing. The cannibal committed suicide when arrested.

The authorities found little clay medallions in Denke's home, with quaint inscriptions and dates, apparently commemorating each murder. It is recalled that Fritz Haarman, Hanover murderer, similarly kept account of his victims.

INHABITANTS REBEL.

Stormed Revenue Ministers Office in the Punjab and Burned It Down.

CALCUTTA, Dec. 30.—(United Press).—Inhabitants of the State of Suket, in the Punjab, rose in arms yesterday, stormed the Revenue Minister's office and burned it down.

The natives held the Minister responsible for a new and unpopular land tax.

A British officer at the head of a small body of troops rushed to the scene of the rioting and succeeded in restoring order.

NEW LIQUOR LAW.

Col. J. A. Currie Says C ing Session Will See Sa Liquor Law Introduced

TORONTO, Dec. 30.—(Cana Press). — Municipal questions not occupy the undivided attent of members of Ward Two Conservative Association at a meeting last night, the Ontario Temperance Act taking a prominent place in the remarks of several of the speakers. In addition to the number of candidates for municipal office, the meeting was addressed by several members of the Legislature. Considerable applause greeted the prediction, made by Col. J. A. Currie, M.L.A., that the coming session would see a sane liquor law introduced and carried in the Legislature, while several other speakers touched on the question in much the same vein.

ACCIDENTALLY KILLED.

Revolver Discharged While He Was Cleaning It.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., Dec. 30.—(Canadian Press.)—Death from a revolver wound of Reginald Guttin, manager of the Keenan Woodenware Co., at Niagara-on-the-Lake, occurred yesterday in the office of the plant. Engineer Jos. Fuller heard the sound of a shot and on rushing to the office found Guttin expiring. The shot penetrated his forehead. It is believed that the affair was entirely accidental and that Guttin was engaged in cleaning his revolver at the time. He came from Owen Sound last summer and was well known throughout the to and district. His widow and five children survive.

by EDMUND SNELL

"You oughtn't to want much enlightening—after that," he assured him. Oh, I'm no detective! I only went to these pleasant little meetings for amusement—and education. I found it improved my knowledge of the native dialects, and all that sort of thing. It was when the lady entered the case that the fun really began——!"

"It usually does!" agreed Corrigan, acidly.

"I argued to myself that a woman doesn't go to a lot of trouble for nothing," pursued Fellowes. "She was obviously out to get everyone into her clutches—for some definite end. I gathered enough last evening to assure me that you were the end!"

"I'll come down with you to-night, if you're agreeable," declared Corrigan. "I should like to be present when the plans for my own assassination were being discussed!"

"It'll be a tight fit, I think; but we'll manage. Come and have makan with me—and we'll go together."

Corrigan's new cook boy came in to announce that the meal was ready. For the first time, Fellowes had an opportunity of observing him closely. He stared hard after him as he went down the passage-way which led to the back of the house.

"How's that feller shaping?" he inquired of Corrigan.

"Oh! He cooks pretty well, which is something. I haven't had a lot of time to observe him carefully. I engaged him principally because he turned up just at the critical moment when I was without one. My last bright beauty, you'll remember, met with rather a tragic end!"

They strolled into the living-room and sat down before some exceedingly thin soup which appeared to be fully peppered!

"He's not what you might term my ideal cook boy," continued Corrigan. "For one thing, he speaks a tolerable amount of English, which is at once a damn nuisance and an extremely bad sign. He's inordinately proud of a cookery book presented him by a misguided Englishwoman and printed in both languages. I've a hunch—as the Americans say—that he tampers with the whisky."

Fellowes broke off a piece of bread. "The heathen Chinee is peculiar!" he quoted.

Corrigan thumped the table with his fist.

"It's the other variety that I've no use for," he declared. "If I find him up to any of his tricks—I'll fire him right away."

"Of course," said Fellowes, nodding wisely. "A revengeful oriental cook compares very favorably with an active volcano. You never know when it's going to start—or where!"

"No," said Corrigan, "but you get a pretty fair idea where you're going to finish!"

* * * * *

They approached the House of the Seven Stars by a circuitous route indicated by the first assistant. It was close upon ten and, beneath the leafy screen formed by interwoven branches, the darkness was intense. The night air was fraught with a thousand varying insect noises; the deeper throated croaking of giant bullfrogs; mysterious crashings of strange creatures through the matted undergrowth.

Fellowes caught Corrigan's arm.

"We must go carefully here," he whispered. "The building is just ahead, in a clump of palms. Follow close behind me."

Ten minutes later they paused before a crazy flight of bamboo steps. Fellowes tapped seven times on the woodwork. A pause, and then a hoarse voice challenged them from a dark opening in the wall above them. There ensued a whispered conversation which apparently ended satisfactorily, for the assistant turned to his employer.

"I'll go up first," he said softly. "I don't think it'll stand our combined weight."

"Carry on," replied Corrigan shortly.

The planter was enjoying himself immensely. This was an adventure after his own heart. It had ever been his custom to go forward to meet his enemy. To be present at the signing of his intended death warrant appealed to his sense of humor.

"All right," came a voice from the top of the ladder.

He found himself presently in a room like a cupboard—evidently employed as a sleeping apartment. A hurricane lamp—turned low—stood in one corner by an opium pipe of bamboo with a broad china cuplike contrivance fastened to a central plate of white metal. He recognized a Chinese pillow made of papier mache, painted red.

The door closed to behind them and Fellowes pointed silently to a series of holes drilled in the party wall in a convenient position for a man standing to peep through. Corrigan surmised that the original intention had been for ventilation.

He removed the Terai that he had worn for comfort, and put it carefully in one corner. Presently he selected a couple of spy holes and peered into the main room of the building.

His first impression was one of a vast smoke cloud which clung to the ceiling because there was very little opportunity for it to get away. Gradually, in the yellow rays of a single oil lamp which swung in the centre, he managed to make out a circle of squatting men. They were orientals, most of them, but here and there he detected members of other races: a Pathan from the next estate but one, a krani clerk, who had no real claim to any race in particular. There were other forms beyond the rays of the lamp that he could not clearly see. A persistent sound of snoring came from mysterious hiding places he could not locate. There were drinking cups of every description and fat jars of the pernicious Sam-su. Occasionally, from a distance, he heard the shrill laughter of women.

He caught the voice of his assistant close to his ear, whispering: "The Black Witch!"

Filled with a strange emotion, he stared as the crouching forms closest round her and figures emerged from the outer shadows to lean on the shoulders of the inner circle. The chattering of many voices had ceased abruptly. There was an air of curious expectancy.

The Black Witch sat very erect in a sarong of bright green that displayed to advantage the graceful curves of her ebony back. There were bangles of gold at her wrists and ankles; tiny studs of yellow metal in her upper lip and the sides of her nose; a broad band of gold at her neck. The sight of her took Corrigan back to a certain day on the veranda of the Bungalow with the Red Sun Blinds! If she were evil then, she was ten times more baneful now!

She seemed to be drawing something with her finger in the dust at her feet. Every eye in that reeking den followed her.

Then, with a swift movement, she withdrew her hand and, like a lightning flash, a tiny gold dagger stuck in the floor in front of her.

For the first time—she spoke.

"Who of you will kill the Tuan Corrigan—for me?" she cried hoarsely, looking from one to the other. Corrigan could see the whites of her eyes as she came slowly round.

For a moment there was a silence so intense that Corrigan feared to breathe. The gold dagger still stuck there in the rough boarding.

"Look," came the hoarse voice again. "Am I not beautiful—more lovely than all the women you have seen. He who would possess me—take the dagger—and strike!"

A yellow hand came suddenly from the outer darkness and hovered over the handle of the weapon.

"Before everybody do you swear it?" a guttural voice demanded.

"He who kills—possesses! I swear it," hissed the Black Witch.

The hand clasped on the dagger and drew it slowly from its resting place.

"He who takes the dagger of the Black Witch—and fails to kill—dies," she declared. "Failure spells death!"

The man came forward, so that the light fell on his broad features. Corrigan recoiled in horror.

It was Lip-See—the cook boy who had tampered with his whisky!

RULES OF THE GAME

You may resemble a composite picture of Peggy Joyce, Nita Naldi and other girls de looks.

And yet will park yourself against a wall while others dance unless you know—

That if a man is good looking, you must tell him how brainy he is.

That if he is a mental giant, you must say that he could double for Valentino.

That if he is dumb, you must rave over "those strong, silent men."

And that if he is the kind that talks, you must keep your mouth shut, but your eyes open with admiration!

HOW STAGS FIGHT.

The stag is a ferocious fighter and has attacked and killed horses—and on occasions put bulls to flight.

The fighting weapon of the stag is its antlers. Each year these antlers grow from the skull at the rate of an inch a day.

During their growth they are covered by a fleshy layer of skin, in which the blood circulates in order to feed the growing bone, writes Mr. E. Kay Robinson in "Nature Lessons with Animals."

When the antlers are fully grown the skin dries up and the animal rubs it off. The stag only uses his antlers as a weapon for about three weeks, and then carries them for but a few months more.

When two stags are fighting, each endeavors to get its antlers outside those of its opponent's, in order to push it aside, and thus expose its flank, at which it makes a darting blow with the shorter points on the antlers.

This the sort of whale that swallowed Jonah. Captain Cott Plummer (inset), who caught him off Sabine Pass, near Port Arthur, Texas, says so. The monster weighs 90 tons and measured nearly 60 feet in length. The whale was found floundering in shallow water. Captain Plummer caught another whale near Sabine Pass 16 years ago.

WHERE AND HOW TO CAST VOTES IN THURSDAY'S CITY ELECTION

Points Which Electors Should Observe to Make Ballots Effectivin Selection.

POLLING PLACES.

Only Five Aldermen May be Voted For, and Four Must Be Named on Each Ballot.

The red flag will wave in Peterborough again on Thursday, throwingits folds from forty buildings. It will not herald, however, the march of Bolshevism, but will mark the progress of free government wherein the people select those who will govern their affairs.

Every polling place—and they are all named in the appended list—will be marked with a flag so that voters may have the minimum trouble in finding where they vote.

This year, as every year, the voting public will be made up of those who have a real interest in the progress of the city and are far-sighted enough to see that much of their own prosperity depends upon the success of the municipality, and that this in large measure rests upon the men whom they select to conduct the business. Women who are entitled to cast a vote may find it hard to tear themselves away from the meal they must cook, but should recognize that it is much more important to elect the men who will help them keep the little pot boiling on the domestic hearth all the rest of the year by managing the city's affairs successfully.

Men who fear they cannot spare the time from their holiday or lunch hour to go to the polling place should remember that these men who are elected— with or without their aid— will have a great part in keeping the wheels of industry humming during the next two years, according to their ability.

Of course there are elephants that will trade their half ton meal of roughage, straw, and bamboo sticks for a peanut. But who wants to be an elephant, or who wants to have a good meal on Thursday at the cost of many other meals in the three hundred and sixty four remaining days of 1925?

Who May Vote

Those who may vote at the municipal election are British subjects by birth or naturalization over 21 years of age. The person must be rated for $400 in his or her own right as owner or tenant or for income, or his or her wife, or husband must be so rated as owner or tenant.

How to Vote

Thirteen names will appear on the ballot in the following alphabetical order:

Blade, Arthur,
Crowe, Joseph,
Denne, Roland
Fife, J. O.
Greene, J Mendell.
Hancock, Wilbert J
Hay, G. L.
Maher, M. J.
Meyers, J W.
Morrison, Robert.
Sargent, Thomas E.
Spence, John Hugh,
Tuggey, Frederick T

There are really only twelve names to be voted on, since Mr. Blade has asked the electors not to mark their ballots for him. He found that business would not permit him to accept the office.

There are five vacancies to be filled and each elector must vote for not less than four names and not more than five. Anyone who marks an "X" opposite three or six names spoils his ballot and it will not count.

Each elector can vote only at one place for Aldermen or Utilities Commissioner. Returning officers are instructed to maintain strictly the secrecy of the ballot. The booths will be open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

There are no bye-laws this year.

Utilities Commission

Two names will appear on the ballot under this heading,

Bradburn, William H.
McIntyre, A. A.

and the same regulations apply as in the Aldermanic list except of course that only one commissioner should be voted for.

CREW OF JAPANESE STEAMER RESCUED

Thirty-six Men Stayed Aboard All Night and Fought Flames.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 30—(Canadian Press).—After fighting flames aboard the Japanese freighter Ginyo Maru through the night ,a remnant of the crew, thirty-six men left the vessel at daybreak to-day off the coast of Mexico near Acapulco to board the rescue ship Julia Luckenbach which had previously picked up seventy nine passengers and seventy three of the crew, a radio message says.

Only the captain and officers remained on board the burning ship at daybreak. The passengers were sent into lifeboats shortly after midnight. Fear of an explosion from consignment of nitrates aboard hastened the decision to launch the life boats. The flames were bursting through the hatches when the Luckenbach arrived. The rescue ship is heading for Manzanilo with the survivors.

ROBBED A BANK.

CHANDLER, Okla., Dec. 30. — While Lincoln county sheriff's force guarded the banks at Stroud, having been tipped that there would be a robbery there, four men to-day robbed the Farmers' National Bank here and escaped with an unknown amount of currency.

Dr. Oscar Hartmann, prominent German banker, now in the United States, believes his European colleagues frequently come with mistaken notions. He says most of them seem to think America has unlimited funds.

"I'M NOT TRYING TO REFORM WORLD," SAYS DR. STRATON

REV. DR. JOHN ROACH STRATON

BY GEORGE BRITT

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—Most of the world is skipping quite gayly on the path to Hell, says Dr. John Roach Straton, and he for one is fairly well reconciled to the situation.

It is in the latter point of view that he differs from many ministerial observers. He has stopped worrying.

"I am not trying to reform the world," says Dr. Straton in a conversation about his work at the Calvary Baptist Church. "I am not a reformer. I am calling to the people of the church to separate themselves from the world."

Following this policy, Dr. Straton has barred all "stunts" from his church. He realizes that automobiles, movies, radio and a dozen other modern devices are appealing with more attractiveness than ever before to divert people from the church. He lets them compete.

"The church and the Y.M.C.A. will be beaten whenever they race with outside agencies to furnish amusement for the people,' says this prematurely gray chief captain of the fundamentalists.

"We are not trying to entertain but to change people's hearts. When they experience that change, they will love service rather than self-indulgence. It is not the purpose of the church to conquer the world but to be a witness against the world.

"My message to Broadway over here is that you cannot find happiness by pursuing pleasure. Happiness comes from inner forces, and I think I am the happiest man in New York."

Dr. Straton would turn religious ideas back to the complete and literal acceptance of the Bible and the nonformal organization of the church 1900 years ago.

The uniqueness of his work, says Dr. Straton is due to his preaching of the "oldtime religion." This is the attraction he says, which has enabled his church, surrounded by hotels, shops and offices, to grow while many other churches have languished. In recent years its rate of growth in membership and financial strength has been greater than that of any church of its denomination in the city.

In spirit Dr. Straton is an old testament prophet denouncing the current practices of his day. In appearance he is a twin to former President Woodrow Wilson. In creed, he calls himself a "radical reactionary."

THE NEW ELECTRIC SUB-STATION

The following statement of construction costs of the Electric Sub-Station, Waterworks Office and store room, garage and transformer store room, including the cost of the land, erected and completed during 1923 and 1924, on the property of the Peterboro Utilities Commission, situated on lots 8 and 9 at the corner of Sherbrooke and Aylmer streets:

Electric Sub-Station.

The original estimate on the cost of constructing the sub-station, including the cost of ½ of lots 8 and 9, was $150,071.00, on which estimate a bylaw was ratified by the people for an expenditure of $150,000.00.

Following is a statement of the total construction costs of the sub-station:

Total Debenture issue, $150,000.00.
Lands	$ 8,013.14
Building	44,137.00
Switching equipment	35,951.13
Transformers	19,942.29
Synchronous Motor	9,422.83
Engineering	7,951.09
Sales tax and overhead	4,627.49
Total construction cost....	$130,044.97
Saving on estimated cost	$ 19,995,03
Debenture premium	4,144.00
Total surplus over contract cost	24,139.03

Waterworks Office and Store Room.

No provision was made in the original estimate of $150,000.00 for the construction of a waterworks office and store room, however, on January 1st, 1924, the property on Hunter St., which had housed the Waterworks Department since 1902, was sold by the owner to J. E. A. Fitzgerald and the commission were notified to vacate these premises within six months As the property owned by the commission on Sherbrooke and Aylmer streets was originally purchased with the view of providing for the centralization of the Electric and Water Departments, and as there was sufficient surplus remaining from the $150,000.00 debenture issue after completing the sub-station construction, to pay for the portion of the land required by he Waterworks Department for a pipe yard, and to construct an office and store room, this expenditure was proceed with at the following cost:

Surplus of debenture issue after completion of the sub-station	$ 24,139.03
Cost of land required for Waterworks Dept.	7,515.19
Cost of constructing office and storeroom	14,333.05
Total cost of land and building	21,850.24
Surplus still remaining after construction of sub-station, waterworks office and storeroom	14,335.05

Garage and Transformer Store Room

As it was essential to provide proper shelter and accommodation for the trucks of the commission and for the surplus stock of lighting transformers, it became necessary to construct a garage and Transformer Store Room, at the following cost:

Surplus remaining from Sub-station, and Water-Works Office Construction	$ 2,288.79
Cost of constructing garage and Transformer Storeroom	2,458,33
Total excess cost above surplus	169.54

Summarizing the above statements on an authorized expenditure of $150,000.00 for the construction of a Sub-station, there was sufficient saved on this contract, after paying for the Electric Department share of the cost of the land at Sherbrooke and Aylmer streets, to pay for the portion of the land required by the Waterworks Department, to complete the construction of the Waterworks Office and Storeroom, and to complete the construction of the Garage and Transformer Store Room at a total excess over the $150,000.00 debenture issue of only $169.54.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER.

FANNIE HURST FAVORS CAREER

Novelist Refuses to Discuss Marriage or Dissolution of Childless Ones.

WOMEN AFRAID

"The time has come to talk of many things—of shoes and ships and sealing wax and cabbages and kings—" (quotation.)

—But Not Marriage!

This from Fannie Hurst, novelist, whose views on marriage have been the topic of much interest in the past.

"I am through discussing my marriage or that of anybody else."

Miss Hurst made this vehement statement yesterday in her studio-parlor, No. 23 West Sixty-seventh street, when questioned concerning the proposition advanced by Dr. A. S. Pinto, Health Commissioner of Omaha. Dr. Pinto recommends legislation to void childless marriages after two years.

Miss Hurst, in a blue smock, interrupted her work on a new novel to say:

"You know, matters reached the point where I dreaded seeing my friends marry, for with their marriage always came the discussion as to whether or not they should do it the Fannie Hurst way. Marriage—

Women and Career.

"Goodness, I almost discussed it after all. Let's try another subject."

The other subject turned out to be women and careers. About this the genial authoress said:

"Women have a fear of living. They inhibit themselves from being alive and eager by their fear of what is going to happen to the feminine part of them. That is, they worry about whether or not they can remain sweet and gentle in mind and body if they take part in the world's work.

"The men don't give a thought to that. They accept the fact that work and contact with life in no way infringes upon the feminity of women.

As a matter of fact, I believe the more women see of life and the more knocks they get, the more they will appreciate the physical protection of a man and the more clearly they will see the necessity for sympathy and gentleness on their parts."

Miss Hurst is "so very, very weary" of being asked about masculine women. She was very decided in her opinion concerning these:

"Work doesn't make a woman masculine. That's nonsense. Today one sees much less of the woman in heavy tweeds and stiff collars than before.

"Mark my word and see if the emancipated woman doesn't turn out to be a much sweeter, more feminine creature than the woman of the eighties."

Doubts "Old-time Days."

The woman who loves her home and babies should tend to them, believes the novelist, and shouldn't neglect them to potter around in work of no importance. But, the woman who has a love for a career should follow her bent. At the same time, a home and children and a career are not incompatible, declared Miss Hurst, and added:

"Those women who want both always find a way to manage successfully. It's the woman who doesn't know what she wants who talks about careers versus home life, and who turns to clubs and lectures for a solution."

Miss Hurst has no word of disapproval for the young girls of to-day. She thinks they are not a bit worse, morally, than the girls of the crinoline age. She added with a little wink that she had her doubts about those "good old-fashioned days!"

LOCAL CURLERS STARTED GAMES

First Scheduled Games Played at Rink Last Night.

The local curlers were greeted with a keen sheet of ice for their first scheduled games of the season last night and four of the six games scheduled were run off with some of the curlers showing mid-season form. This was the only walkaway of the evening. Bob Hicks won a closely contested and excitingly-finished contest from M. Cruthers by 11 points to 9, and J. H. Connal's rink took a fall out of W. G. BANK DIRECTOR FOUND GUILTY

J. F. M. Stewart Convicted of Negligence in Signing False Bank Statements.

TORONTO, Dec. 30.—(Canadian Press.)—J. F. M. Stewart, of Toronto, director of the Home Bank of Canada, which failed in August, 1923, was this morning found guilty of negligence in signing false or deceptive statements in connection with the bank's affairs. In announcing his decision, Senior County Judge Emerson Coatsworth stated that he would deliver sentence on January 15th.

Three directors and an official have now been convicted on charges laid following investigation of the affairs of the defunct institution. The trial of R. P. Gough, another director, is proceeding before Judge Coatsworth.

Stewart is the third director to be convicted of charges under the Bank Act. C. A. Barnard, Montreal, was found guilty on all three counts and Clarence F. Smith, Montreal, of negligence. They have appealed and are now on bail pending the result of appeal. Two officials, Ocean G. Smith, chief accountant, and Sidney Jones, auditor, also convicted. Sentence on Ocean Smith suspeided and Jones is now serving a term at the jail farm. Trial of R. H. Gough, vice-president, is proceeding before Judge Coatsworth. Casey Wood and J. B. Russell, of Toronto, are yet to be tried.

As in all other convictions, the Judge finds that the annual statement of the bank for 1923 was false. In delivering judgment His Honor said:

An extraordinary combination of companies in all of which the directors, including accused, were largely interested, and which were, so to speak, feeding off the bank, came into existence, one by one, and became more or less interlocked. A few of them paid up finally, but most of them failed to pay and involved the bank in enormous losses. Depositors' money was loaned to these and other compapies, many of them unreliable concerns, instead of being used in legitimate banking business. Accused was interested in many of these companies and consequently well aware of the manner in which the bank's funds were being diverted into risky speculations."

Continuing the Judge said: "No business man would be deceived by camouflage balance sheets. Directors did not live up to the test. Fact appears to be that the directors were to such an extent using the bank for their own purposes and their own companies and speculations that they turned a deaf ear to the call of duty and responsibility."

CHURCH UNION FIGHT.

One Man Thrown to the Floor During Stormy Debate.

KINGSTON, Ont., Dec. 30.—The liviest kind of a time took place at a Presbyterian meeting held in the village of Lansdowne last night. The meeting was called for the purpose of arranging for the vote on Church Union to be taken on Tuesday next. Report from the village states that a warm debate occurred in fact so warm that some of the members came to grips and that one man was thrown to the floor in the excitement. It is also alleged that one member picked up a chair as a means of protection. Order was restored after a time and the members "cooled off."

Rev. I. N. Beckstedt is the minister of his charge and he presided at the meeting. The Minister appealed to the members not to allow their tempers to get the better of them. The incident has caused quite a sensation in church circles.

TO THE ELECTORS OF PETERBOROUGH

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

In respectfully soliciting your vote and influence in my election as Utilities Commissioner, I do so feeling that if I am elected I can be of service to you. It will be possible for me to give the position my undivided attention, and feel that my previous municipal experience should be of value.

I am particularly interested in seeing that an enquiry be made into the undeveloped water powers in this district, and in every way do what I can to see that the business of the Commission is conducted openly so that the public may be acquainted with all the facts and knowledge they should have.

Again respectfully soliciting your votes and influence, I am, yours faithfully,

They have been assigned to patrol the parks, where they will look after children, protect their own sex from flirts, and keep people off the grass. They wear navy blue uniforms and black straw hats.

For ALDERMAN VOTE

W. J. HANCOCK

Dear Fellow-Ratepayers,

We have now come to the time when economy must be practised in our municipal affairs as well as our private business. Nothing but the absolutely necessary expenditure should be carried out.

Capital expenditure must also be curtailed as much as possible.

How can we ever expect to encourage manufacturers to locate here when they find their source of labor is being overtaxed so that men are unable to work for reasonable remuneration and be happy and satisfied employees.

If I have the honor of serving you, I will exercise my judgment for the large masses of the people.

Yours truly,

W. J. HANCOCK

To The Electors of The City:

In coming before you for re-election as Alderman, I did not intend to say anything in print, as you already have my seven years of service before you.

I was also pleased to see a number of good citizens taking a lively interest in our city affairs by offering themselves for service. But what has transpired since, has given me some reason to reflect on what appears to be the formulating of plans with the object to upset what members of past councils and I were successful in carrying through, namely, re the police commission, etc., legislation which the citizens in general approved of.

I am still in favour of giving the people what they want and are willing to pay for. But, if elected, will not be bound by any ring or clique that takes advantage of or dominates the Council.

Your obedient servant,

JOSEPH CROWE

BIG CROWD SAW FAMILY HOCKEY

Barrs Defeated Allens by 4-0 in Fracas on Skates at the Arena.

BOTH MIXED IT

Six hundred fans at the Arena last evening witnessed one of the roughest games of hockey played here in a good many years, between the LeBarr family and the Allen family the former winning by the score of 4 to 0.

For the first few minutes of play everything went smoothy but when one of the Allen defence men flew at a LeBarr puck carrier the fun started, and from then on the game was full of slashing, bodying, tripping and everything in the book.

Referee Eddie Foley had his work cut out for him and although both teams were credited with a number of penalties, a lot of dirty work got by without him noticing it. When he would have his eye on one pair who were mixing it, another couple would be tearing at each other at the other end of the rink..

The LeBarrs were superior to their opponents but taking into consideration that the Allens were mostly old timers and had not been on their skates in a number of years, they put up a game battle. The LeBarrs all showed flashes of speed on their skates, while in goal L. LeBarr, Sr. had but one shot to stop. This was the second time he had been on skates in twenty-five years and the first time in fifteen years. His movements showed that he had at one time been a hockey player and if he had of been up on the front line he might have made some of the younger ones step to keep up with him.

"Did" Allen who played centre for the Allens was their only player who was anyways dangerous on the firing line, and had there been a couple more like him on the Allen team the score would most likely have been much closer. "Bill" in goal also showed some of Joe Dwyer's form but in the last period his teammates gave him poor support and the LeBarr shots poured at him from all angles.

Willie Hoppe and Robert Cannefax Post Forfeits.

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—(Canadian Press)—Arrangements for the three-cushion billiard match between Willie Hoppe, world's balkline cue king, and Robert Cannefax, three cushion title holder, were completed yesterday when the rivals posted forfeits of $2,500 each, an amount which sets a record for special matches in which no title is involved. This money represents a side wager which will go to the winner in addition to 65 per cent. of the gate receipts. The remaining 35 per cent. will go to the loser.

The match will be played here the week of January 19, with sixty-point blocks afternoon and evening, the best six out of eleven blocks to decide the winner.

HOCKEY ALONG LAKE SHORE TWO WEEKS AHEAD OF 1923

Cobourg and Bowmanville Are Picked as the Two Best Teams in Junior Group.

HOME TEAMS WIN

Trenton, Bowmanville and Port Hope Leading in Intermediate Series.

OSHAWA, Dec. 30.—(Special).—Hockey in the local junior and intermediate groups which include the towns along the lakeshore, Trenton, Cobourg, Port Hope, Bowmanville, Oshawa and Whitby is two weeks ahead of its last year's schedule, as the opening games in the junior group of 1924-25 were not played until after the New Year, whereas this season two games were played Tuesday evening, December 23rd. In the intermediate group of a year ago the first three games billed for the first week in January were all postponed, while the opening three of this season were played on Friday evening, December 26th, with three more, Cobourg at Oshawa, Bowmanville at Trenton and Whitby at Port Hope are scheduled for Monday evening, December 29th.

The early season dope on the junior series calls for Ginger Edgar's Bowmanville crew and Manager Rooney's Cobourg squad to fight it out for group honors. The Bowmanville kids went into Whitby, the evening before Santa Claus is supposed to arrive and lifted a nice bungle of toy out of Sheriff Paxton's Christmas Eve stocking, by defeating Charlie Lavery's lads. The same evening Bill Rooney's Cobourg youngsters gave "lady luck" the cold shoulder at Oshawa when after having the game sewed up at the end of the second period with a score of 3 to 1, they came on the ice with their chests swelled up like pouter pigeons and while in the reducing stage, the local church league entry ran in three goals and then backed up on the defence to stave off opposition, turning what looked like a defeat into a four to three victory and as a result Coach Blanchard and Secretary E. Anderson had a sock full of Christmas cheer to enjoy. However, on Christmas Day, Rooneys' Cobourg team journeyed over to Port Hope and gained a victoy on foreign territory by defeating Moss Howson's Hopers and drew up on even terms with the Edgerites from Bowmanville in a win away from home. With the only other game scheduled for December, Whitby at Bowmanville on Dec. 30th, the ex-hosiery town should be still leading the junior group at the end of the present year. The standing up to date is as follows:

Cobourg	1	1
Whitby	0	1

Games scheduled for the coming week are:

Tuesday evening, December 30—Whitby at Bowmanville.

Thursday, January 1—Port Hope at Cobourg.

Intermediate Group No. 2

In the intermediate group the opening games played Friday evening, two out of three victories went to the home team by a one goal margin, Port Hope being the one to win away from home, when they jitneyed over to the ferry town of Cobourg and carried off a eight to three victory which gives them the edge of a win on foreign ice. Chief of Police Charlie Lavery of Whitby and his country town braves threw a scare into Bowmanville at Taylor's arena in the eastern town when they made the Edger boys extend themselves to win by the odd goal in a three to two score. Trenton and Oshawa repeated their last year's performance in the Bay of Quinte town by providing an overtime battle. The score at full time being 2-2 and in the extra ten minutes Trenton won out by 3 to 2.

The standing of the local intermediate group is as follows:

Team	Won	Lost
Trenton	1	0
Bowmanville	1	0
Cobourg	0	1
Oshawa	0	1

Games schedued for the coming week:

Monday evening, December 29—Cobourg at Oshawa; Bowmanville at Trenton; Whitby at Port Hope.

Friday evening, January 2—Oshawa at Whitby; Port Hope at Bowmanville; Trenton at Cobourg.

O.H.A. PUCKERINGS

Ed Donald and Joe Walsh who went down with the Oshawa intermediates to Trenton returned with an expression of "surprise' written all over their anatomy from the shoulders up, over the performance turned in by the local stick handlers —ready for the anual struggle for group honors speaks the two.

London got a set back in the big six series of the O.H.A. senior series, when Stratford stepped into Adam Beck's city and pulled off a 2 to 1 victory. There was no extra Hydro illumination on the expressions on the London big sixes at midnight.

"Mickey" Murray the ex-Peterboro and Oshaaw boy was on the line up that sprang a surprise package at Kitchener, when Galt held the green shirts to a 5 to 0 score in a "big six" O.H.A. senior group game on Friday evening. "Mickey's" popularity in Oshawa would draw a full house of Motor City fans to the Liftlock City, providing Galt and Peterboro should play off in the senior series.

"Gunner" Arnott, the ex-Belleville boy scored the only goal for Preston against the Niagara Falls team in another game of the "big six" senior series. A good start for migrators from Eastern Ontario—Murray in goal stops Kitchener from scoring, while Arnott gets the only goal for Preston.

Eight senior games are scheduled for next week—Peterboro gets its first chance at Aura Lee at Toronto; Hamilton meets Parkdale; London goes to Preston; Kitchener to Stratford; Galt to Niagara Falls; Preston to Kitchener; Stratford to Galt, and Niagara Falls to London. In the three series of the O.H.A. there will be sixty-five games played from Monday to Saturday night—a good week for referees.

Saturday O.H.A. bulletin—"Instructions have been issued to all OH.A referees to commence games on advertised time, and where clubs are at fault for the delay in getting a game started to tack on a fine and to force the offending team to play a man short for every minute the game is late in starting."—Good news to hockey fans.

A COVELESKIE YARN BY EVANS

Players Framed Umpire at Expense of Taciturn Pole of the Indians.

HUGGINS CHASED

The sale of Pitcher Stanley Coveleskie to the Washington Club recalls a joke some of the Cleveland players once put over at his expense.

Coveleskie is a quiet chap. His two longest words are yes and no. Some Cleveland players insist he has sat on the bench for days without uttering a word.

He generally selects an out-of-the-way spot in the dugout, puts in a big chew of tobacco, and is set for the day.

When brusque Bill Guthrie, who fears no man, broke into the American League as umpire, several Cleveland players decided to have a little fun with him.

When Bill was busy calling balls and strikes, some player from a point of vantage would take his judgment to task.

Just breaking in, Bill found it difficult enough to judge balls and strikes without looking in the direction of the Cleveland bench. Nevertheless he was considerably peeved.

"Who is making all those wise cracks on your bench?" asked Guthrie.

"Nobody but Coveleskie," answered one of the Cleveland players. "He sure can think of a lot of nasty things, can't he?"

Biding his time, Guthrie waited patiently until the next outburst. It came an inning later.

"Say, you big Pole,' 'yelled Guthrie, "you better keep your mouth shut and save the saliva your wasting for your 'spitter.' It's none too good. If you don't get wise to yourself I will probably have to mention you to Mr. Johnson in a special delivery letter."

Even then Covie didn't get the drift of the conversation. He kept chewing his cud of tobacco and looking off into space. As Guthrie turned his back some one yelled: "You're a far better detective than an umpire."

Thinking it was Coveleskie, Guthrie shouted:

"The plate is just two inches wide the next time you pitch." Meaning Covie would have to make his strikes perfect. "For the rest of the day nothing but silence and plenty of it from you."

Happily at this stage of the proceedings some one put Guthrie wise or Coveleskie would have probably been chased to the clubhouse for the first time during his career.

Miller Huggins, mite manager of the Yankees, will probably never forget his first meeting with Guthrie.

On the very first play of the game Guthrie, working at first base, called Whitey Witt out on a very close play.

Witt entered strenuous objections. Before he had gotten very far Guthrie had put him out of the game. Huggins, coaching at third fearing Witt would be chased, rushed over to see if he couldn't head off the trouble that he knew was imminent.

Huggins was about 20 feet from first base when Guthrie noticed him. Witt, in the meantime, had started for the Yankee clubhouse. Getting a glance at Huggins, Guthrie, in a most nonchalant manner, yelled:

"And by the way, Witt, you might as well take the bat boy along with you," referring to Huggins, of course.

Witt stopped, so did Huggins. A smile broke over their faces, and without any further comment both made their exit.

Huggins, a lawyer, admitted the decision was so convincing and unusual that he could offer nothing in rebuttal.

COBOURG TEAM LOST O.H.A. GAME

Intermediate Series Opener Resulted in a Win for Oshawa.

OSHAWA, Ont., December 30. — Tommy Bulger's Cobourg puck chasers and Oshawa opened the intermediate O.H.A. series at Bradley's arena here to-night, and the horse show town representatives were defeated by 7-3.

Cobourg bulged the twine behind Dick Smith in Oshawa's goal for the first counter of the game five minutes after play commenced, but Oshawa soon evened it up and scored three more before the bell rang for the first rest, making the score Oshawa 4; Cobourg 1.

In the second Oshawa ran in three goals in succession, and Cobourg notched one just before the period ended, baking it Oshawa 7, Cobourg 2.

Cobourg scored the only goal of the third period, making the final score, Oshawa 7, Cobourg 3.

The teams were:

Cobourg: Goal, J. loyd; defence, Bowen and Cunningham; centre, Bulger, wings, Walden and Nile; subs., Wilbur ad Jacobs.

Oshawa: Goal, Smith; defence, Palmer and Clark, centre Houcke; wings, Stevens and Rowden; subs., Morris and Johnston.

TIGERS INTO A TIE.

Boston Team Showed Improved Condition Last Evening.

BOSTON, Dec. 30. — (Canadian Press).—Hamilton Tigers went into tie with the Canadiens for lead of the National Hockey League by winning from the rejuvenated Boston Bruins here last night 2 to 1. But it was a hard-earned victory, and the Bruins for the first time this season showed themselves as dangerous to the League's first division clubs. Although outskated and beaten in every department of the game in the first period, the Bruins took a new lease of life in the second, and in the third they seriously threatened to defeat the Tigers.

OSHAWA, Dec. 30.—Ten new alleys are being completed at the Motor City bowling alleys, and will be ready for the official opening on New Year's Day. Five alleys have already been completed, and these are to be devoted exclusively to ten-pin bowling, while the alleys just being completed are to be reserved for the use of ladies and their escorts. The five-pin alleys are to be partitioned off from the ten-pin alleys, and ample provision has been made for a lounge room.

HIT BY GERMAN GOODS

Chemicals Purchased for £400 Sold at £110

TORONTO, December 30.—One of the partners of Mangol Bros. chemical merchants, examind in the Bankruptcy Court, stated that their business was a key industry, and while a certain measure of protection was in force it was fairly prosperous.

When the McKenna duties were abolished they found it impossible to continue owing to the market being flooded with German chemicals.

In one instance chemicals purchased for £400 had to be sold for £110 and another batch costing £1,080 was sold for £550.

Liabilities were returned at £7,078 and assets at £1,146. Failure was attributed to German competition, trade depression, heavy fall in prices and lack of capital.

VETERAN GOLF STARS BEGINNING TO FADE

Jones Tops Ranking List, But Von Elm Noses "Chick" Evans Out of Second Place—Sweetser Given Third Place, But Had a Bad Year.

THE BIG TEN IN GOLF

No. 1. Bobby Jones
No. 2. George Von Elm
No. 3. Jess Sweetser
No. 4. Chick Evans
No. 5. Max Marston
No. 6. Francis Ouimet
No. 7. Jess Guilford
No. 8. Harrison Johnston
No. 9 Dexter Cummings
No.10 Rudolph Knepper

The belief is quite universal that electrocutions, taken indiscriminately, will do little toward increasing the population of any given community.

Another notion on which the world at large is pretty thoroughly sold is that Robert Tyre Jones of Atlanta is the best amateur golfer this side of Mars.

These sapient sentences are designed to introduce the writer's classification of the 10 leading amateurs in American golf.

Jones in incontestably the ace of the deck. As a matter of truth the young southerner has been the best amateur in the game for the past four years. It just happened that it was not his luck to win the championship until this year. His qualifications are so well known as to make amplified comment superfluous.

The business of classifying the rest of the field is beset with complexities. Personal estimate of abilities must play a deciding part in most instances. Only a few of the ranking stars took part in all the major events. This leaves the reviewer but little to work with.

Von Elm Rated Second.

Many of the old stars have begun to slip. A year ago Chick Evans still held his position as second best to Jones. This year the Chicagoan has dropped to fourth. Chick is still a splendid shot-maker but his record of having lost twice in a row in the first round of the national cannot be overlooked.

In Evan's place we have tdvanced George Von Elm, a youngster from the far west. Von Elm not only went to the finals against Jones this year but showed unmistakable signs of high-grade ability at Flossmoor a dominant advantage in match play His advance has been spectacular. Two years ago he did not rank with the first 10.

To Jess Sweetser goes third position. This may provoke criticism. Sweetser had a bad season. He did not even qualify for the national. But those who appreciate the vagaries of golf know this is not important. Sweetser was good enough to win the title in 1922 and he reached the finals the following fall. That proves his class.

Marston Lands Fifth.

Chick Evans is fourth and Marston on his skill as a match player rather than his genius as a shot-maker, is placed fifth. The Philadelphian has a knack for being at his best in the pinches. Though beaten in several minor tourneys this year, he went to the fourth round in the all-important national.

Francis Ouiment is a better golfer than Marston but physical frailties the ranking. His Boston pal, Jess keep him down to sixth place. Guildford has always been two or three shots below the Brookline star, right behind him. This is fitting. Ouiment beat him in this year's national test 4 and 3.

Many Good Ones Absent.

From this point on the classification becomes little more than guesswork, with our personal inclinations favoring Harrison Johnston, who scored a notable victory in the western amateur; Dexter Cummings, who repeated in the national intercollegiates, and Rudolph Knepper, who lost to Jones in the third round at Merion.

Readers protesting the absence from the list of Bob Gardner, Jimmy Manion, Bill Reekie, W. C. Fownes, D. Clark Cochran, Dr. O. F. Willing Woody Platt, Willie Hunter, Johnny McHugh, Jack Kenzler, and Ira Couth are asked to take the matter up directly and personally with the congressman.

And when you write ask the dear fellows how everything is in the little green house on K street.

This did not prevent his friends who saw in his retirement increased danger to Mussolini and the Fascisti solidarity from urging him to reconsider. The Nuovo Paez reports that De Stefani and Sarrochi also endeavored to persuade Salandra to withdraw his resignation.

THEATRES

AT THE GRAND.

Whenever the name of Mutt and Jeff is mentioned the word fun seems to be synonomous. These famous cartoons, the creation of Bud Fisher, will be seen in the flesh in a brand new offering of mirth and melody at the Grand, commencing Jan. 3rd. The piece abounds in original ingredients, surprises, screams, novelties and features and from all accounts should prove one of the successes of the season. The contribution has been built for laughter exclusively. There is a plot, of course, and one that can be followed without the aid of a libretto or printed guide. Mutt and Jeff figure in a number of escapades and adventures, all ludicrous in the extreme, but plausible and enjoyable, nevertheless. They are in turn golf enthusiasts, chauffeurs, radio fans, race track followers detectives and football coaches. The supporting company is capable and a first-class performance is assured. In addition to other entertaining attributes there will be a chorus of twenty young women who do not lack in the way of pulchritude or requisite talent. Something not always to be found in offerings of a similar nature.

"THIS WOMAN IS MINE."

The picture, "This Woman is Mine," a screen version of Leoncavallo's immortal opera, "I Pagliacci," shown at the Grand Opera House last night, was frankly a disappointment, and inasmuch as the vaudeville acts announced as part of the programme were unable to reach the city, the management has decided to cancel the screenings advertised for to-night and to-morrow night. With its dramatic story of passion and tragedy, "Pagliacci" might be regarded as a treasure trove for the motion picture director, but those responsible for the making of "This Woman is Mine" have only succeeded in turning out a production that is never convincing and at times is decidedly wearisome. There is some fine photography in the film, but not enough to make up for the dullness of the whole production and the failure of the cast to rise to its opportunities. Leoncavallo's opera might have been sadly mishandled in the production seen here last night. The Grand management was justified in its decision to cancel the film for to-night and to-morrow.

MUTT AND JEFF, AT THE GRAND OPERA HOUSE NEXT SATURDAY, MATINEE AND NIGHT.

AT THE ROYAL.

DOROTHY MACKAILL SCORES ONCE MORE.

Charming Actress Wins New Laurels As Star of "What Shall I Do?"

Dorothy Mackaill, that beautiful English girl with the spun-gold hair and a fragile beauty that goes with spring and daisy fields, has achieved another screen success in Frank E. Woods' problem story, "What Shall I Do?" which is being shown at the Royal Theatre.

Never has Miss Mackaill been so appealing; never has she had a better opportunity to display her ability as an emotional actress. As Jeanie Andrews, left by a strange play of circumstances an abandoned wife confronted with the task of supporting herself and her baby, she does some excellent work. John Harron is good as the boy whose desire to succeed without the aid of his wealthy stepfather causes him to keep his marriage to the little cashier a secret, that brings dire results.

Others who deserve special commendation are Louise Dresser, who is seen as the boy's mother, William V. Mong, well-known character actor who plays the stepfather; Joan Standing as Lizzie the waitress; Danny Hoy as Joe the amorous busboy, and Tom O'Brien as Big Jim Brown.

The story is one of those that "get" you. It is real because it is true in little things. It has those human touches that give a story life. Not a small part of its appeal is due to the fact that it "says something" and is not merely "movie material." The problem of the mother who must work and has no place to leave her baby is a great social question—one that has long merited the public attention that the screen offers.

"What's wrong with this picture?" Absolutely nothing! And you can't say that about many films.

"What Shall I Do?" is one of the finest we have seen lately.

The musical accompaniment of this production is excellent, and helps considerably in bringing out the varying moods of an absorbing picture.

The shorter subjects, Benny Leonard and Larry Semon, are both up to the mark.

The ladies in particular are going to enthuse over "What Shall I Do?"

SPECIAL PRODUCTION AT ROYAL NEW YEAR'S DAY, "THE BELOVED BRUTE."

The cast of "The Beloved Brute," which will be the attraction at the Royal Theatre on Thursday, includes such favorites of the screen as Marguerite de la Motte, Victor McLaglen, William Russell, Mary Alden and Stuart Holmes.

The action is laid for the most part in the once popular dance halls of the West and in the open country through which a traveling circus or wagon show passed. There is plenty of action in the production, including a thrilling rescue of the heroine from a wildcat, a cleaning out of a dance hall by the hero with his bare fists, fighting against a score of rough thugs employed by the keeper of the place. Then there are the antics of the trained bear, the performances of the dancing girl, a wrestling match, which is the genuine article, between Victor McLaglen and William Russell. Both of these players are wrestlers of repute, and for the production they staged a real match which has been declared to be the best ever produced for screen purposes. In addition to these features, the picture is rich in scenic backgrounds and has a love interest with a new twist.

The photoplay is the work of J. Stuart Blackton, who will be remembered as the producer of such screen masterpieces as "Let Not Man Put Asunder," "Between Friends," "Behold This Woman" and "The Clean Heart" or "The Cruelties of Life."

AT THE REGENT.

UP TO NECK IN RISING WATER UNABLE TO SWIM

Mildred Harris Gets Frightened As Mine Explosion Occurs in Making Picture

One of the most dramatic sequences of "One Law for the Woman," the Charles E. Blaney melodrama to be shown at Regent theatre to-day, was brought about in a novel manner Mildred Harris, who has the leading feminine role, is a poor swimmer and always nervous about water scenes. The fact that one of the sequences in which she appeared called for the flooding of a mine was carefully kept from her.

The day of shooting the scene arrived and Miss Harris was informed of the fact that a blast was to be set in the mine and some of the lake water allowed to come in.

"How deep will it be?" she inquired of Mr. Blaney.

"Oh, perhaps up to your ankles, or maybe your knees and at the most we'll say up to your hips."

"I'm nervous about these water scenes," said Miss Harris. "I can't swim well and they make me nervous."

"Never fear," said Mr. Blaney. "See that ladder?" He pointed to a ladder out of camera range, but easily accessible to the players. "That is for you to use in an emergency. If the water gets too high, make a dash for the ladder and climb to safety."

The blast was set off and the lake water flooded the mine. It rose to the ankles, knees, waist, chest and chin.

"The water's too deep, Mr. Blaney," exclaimed Miss Harris appearing frightened and swimming toward the platform upon which he stood supervising the production, "What shall I do?"

"Swim for the ladder," said Mr. Blaney, pointing to the ladder which had been raised until it was out of reach, according to prearranged instructions. Miss Harris swam toward the ladder and has gone some distance before she discovered that it had disappeared.

"The ladder's gone!" she exclaimed. "What shall I do now"

"Swim this way," directed Mr. Blaney, and the frightened actress obeyed him, going hither and thither at his command, becoming more and more perturbed until the sequence was completed and she was rescued from the water.

"I'll never believe a man again," said Miss Harris, when she had donned dry clothes. "They are all alike, deceivers."

AT THE CAPITOL.

An obsolete type of lady is the one portrayed by Norma Talmadge in "Secrets," the picture featured at the Capitol Theatre for the first three days of this week. In the good old days that the daguerrotypes tell of, there were probably hundreds of the same sort, the "Alice" type who "wept with delight when he gave her a smile and trembled with fear at his frown," but the good old days have gone forever.

Mary Carleton, wife of John Carleton, is the fair Norma's latest triumph, and she gives a wonderful characterization of the gentlewoman of a bygone age, who fell in love with a clerk in her father's counting house, and fled away with him to the then strange land of America, where perilous adventures awaited them and where the petted daughter of a proud English home became the mistress of a rough ranch house. Here the rough riders of a vengeful gang come to take toll of John's life for the hanging of their leader, a cattle rustler, and Mary joins in the fray. Transported back again to England, where by one of those fortuitous circumstances so popular in the movie world, John becomes Sir John Carleton, another element enters the life of Mary Carleton, and another women comes to take away her husband's love. Through it all, there is the same demeanor, the attitude that makes her answer "Yes, John," to everything her husband demands of her.

It is an intriguing story, rather slow-moving in spots, but interest-holding throughout. The art of Norma Talmadge carries it to a successful finale. The picture is mainly Norma, but nobody objects, because the heroine is perfectly satisfying in every one of her four-fold roles. One can hardly imagine that the actress who weeps and smiles in the young girl characterization is the same white haired woman who watches beside the bed of her sick husband and turns the leaves of her "Secrets" book in quiet retrospection.

Wonderfully artistic as is the work of the heroine in her trying parts, it is hardly likely that a picture of this sort would go over without a Norma Talmadge to carry it. The movie-going public, like the story reader, like youth. It knows very well that the hero and the heroine, have to progress onward to the sere and yellow autumn, but it wants to see them in the heyday of their young love and romance. "Secrets" opens with an old woman turning the leaves of her memory book and closes with the vision of her soothing the peevishness of a sick old man. Norma Talmadge is a picture of youth and beauty in her young girl roles in this picture, and her matronly characterization is also very beautiful, but she may be remembered in it as an old white-haired lady. However she is a suberb actress, seeming to lose herself in every role portrayed, and "Secrets" is a fine production, with a strong supporting cast that includes the handsome Eugene O'Brien, playing opposite the star.

The musical accompaniment to "Secrets" is splendid, and is rendered in their usual fine style by the members of the Capitol orchestra.

There is a funny comedy, depicting the adventures of a trio of amateur hunters and fishermen, treed by a tame bear and suffering from misplaced shot guns.

ALLIED DEBT CONFERENCE MAY BE HELD NEXT YEAR

Atmosphere Has Been Greatly Cleared by Official and Unofficial Statements.

LONDON, Dec. 30. — (Canadian Press).—Next year will be the ideal time for the allied debt conference which conceivably might result from Paris meeting of the Allied Finance Ministers next month, according to the opinions expressed in some official quarters in London to-day.

It is believed that the atmosphere has been greatly cleared by official and unofficial statements by some of the Allied Governments in recent months and Great Britain, while she will not take the lead in calling of such a conference, but would welcome some kind of understanding for the settlement of the inter-Allied debt question.

After a buffet lunch was served at the home of the bride, the happy couple left for Windsor, and on their return will reside in Ennismore.

HOLDCROFT—ADAMS.

A quiet but pretty Christmas wedding was solemnized at the home of Rev. and Mrs. Charles Adams, 41 Galley Avenue, on Tuesday, Dec. 23, when their eldest daughter, Hazel Winnifred, was united in marriage to Donald James Holdcroft, M.D., of New York, youngest son of Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Holdcroft, Havelock, Ont. The ceremony was conducted by the father of the bride, assisted by Rev. A. P. Addison, D.D., of North Parkdale Methodist Church, in the presence of the immediate relatives of the bridal couple. The bride entered the drawing-room with her father to the strain of Lohengrin's Wedding March, played by her sister, Florence. The bride looked charming in a white georgette gown, trimmed with lace and touches of ostrich, and wore silver shoes and stockings. Her embroidered tulle veil was arranged in Grecian style, with a bandeau of orange blossoms and seed pearls, and she carried a shower bouquet of Ophelia roses and lilies of the valley. The groom's gift to the bride was a white gold wrist-watch. Mr. Gordon Adams, brother of the bride, sang during the signing of the register. After a dainty buffet luncheon, the happy couple left for a brief honeymoon, the bride travelling in cinnamon-brown satin, trimmed with with fur, with felt hat to match, and a velour coat, with Australian opposum trimmings. Dr. and Mrs. Holdcroft will reside in Morris Plains, New Jersey, where he has accepted a position on the staff of the State Hospital.—Toronto Globe.

BIBLE SCHOLARS REJECT GENESIS CREATION STORY

Darwin's Theory of Evolution Generally Accepted, Professor Asserts at Convention.

BRYAN "DOGMATIC"

Apes Think and Show Many Evidences of Ideation—Might Be Taught.

WASHINGTON, December 31. — Advances in psychology, medicine, biology, chemistry and physics, were disclosed in hundreds of papers read on Tuesday before the fifteen sections of the American Associations for the Advancement of Science, the 79th annual meeting of which is now in full swing.

Thirty-one hundred members were registered during the day, and a flurry of interest was caused by a report that William J. Bryan would arrive in time to listen to a criticism of his views on evolution, but he failed to appear.

The largest audience of any sectional meeting thus far held attended that addressed by Dr. Edward L. Rice, professor of Zoology, at the Ohio Wesleyan niversity, a Methodist institution. Choosing "Darwin and Bryan" as his text. Dr. Rice in a paper characterized the views of William Jennings Bryan on evolution as "dogmatic" and "dangerous to religion," and urged more unprejudiced co-operation in scientific and religious study. Mr. Bryan's arguments he said were deduced "from the assumption of the literary accuracy of the Bible in general and of the first two chapters of Genesis in particular."

Not Accepted To-day.

This assumption was "not Biblical" nor was it "accepted by leading Bible scholars of to-day."

Darwin's work on the contrary was represented as having been based upon a hypothesis "followed by a most complete verification and leading to a degree of probability amounting to practical certainty.

Chimpanzees not only appear to think but do think, Dr. Robert M. Yerkes of the Psychological Institute of Yale University, declared in a paper read before the Psychological section. He based his conclusions on studies made of two young Chimpanzees, which he said knew how to study a problem presented to them in a way essentially like that of man and quite unlike that of any other animal.

"The great apes are intellectually closer to men than we have hitherto imagined," Dr. Yerkes stated. "The evidence for their solution of problems 'ideationally' is now abundant and convincing."

Dr. Yerkes said one of the characteristics of the solving of problems by chimpanzees was that the solution seemed often to come suddenly to them after a period of quiet reflection. In reply to a question, he said it was possible that Chimpanzees might be taught to read and write, or at least to use some sort of symbols.

Study of the Sea.

The aims of the proposed oceanographic research by the navy were summarized by Dr. Austin H. Clark, of the Smithsonian Institution, in a general address. They include the discovery of new fishing banks and an increase in food resources, better understanding of climatic conditions which will aid in weather forecasting, and in marine and aerial navigation; fuller knowledge of ocean currents, and of the drift of icebergs, knowledge of ocean depths and contours which will aid navigation fishing, and the laying of telegraph cables, and knowledge of the composition of sea water which will lead to greater accuracy in the use of the zonic depth finder.

Research in Federal personnel work, was discussed by L. J. O'Rourke, of the United States civil service commission, who advocated more practical tests, not merely those which looked practical. He reported a new method of correction of payers, which effected a saving of 50 per cent. in the work.

VETERAN DIED OF COLD.

PEACE RIVER, Alta., Dec. 31.—The body of Alex Reid, a returned soldier, was found frozen solid lying on the floor of his homestead shack on the Battle River trail by a trapper named McAllister, who was en route to Peace River. He reported his discovery by long distance telephone from Grimshaw to the provincial police to-day.

DOCTOR FINDS WOMEN WEAKER

Lost Most of Normal Physical Characteristics—Brain is Over-Stimulated.

WOMAN'S REBUTTAL.

LONDON, Dec. 31.—An exciting controversy has been started among doctors and psychologists by Sir William Arbuthnot Lane, consulting surgeon at Guys Hospital, who declares in an article in the Franco-British Medical Review:

That women of to-day is badly nourished;

That she is degenerating in size;

That her physical character is defective;

That her brain is over-stimulated; and

That the crass stupidity of man is responsible.

He continues:

"Modern woman has lost most of the normal physical characteristics which are such marked features in the magnificently built savage. Her capacity to bear and produce children has become complicated by much trouble, the innumerable sequels of which too often make life miserable.

Blamed For Cancer Spread.

"They are unable to provide sufficient nourishment for their offspring and are obliged to fall back on deleterious combinations provided by food chemists."

As a result of this degeneration, Dr. Lane continues, woman is a primary factor in the development of cancer.

Woman's Reply.

Replying publicly to Dr. Lane's strictures, Elizabeth Sloan Chesser, M.D., flatly contradicts him. She declares:

"Statistics of the size and physique of women over the last fifty years tell otherwise to anybody who likes and believes in statistics. During the war I examined 15,000 to 20,000 women in twelve months. I saw many magnificent women and the majority approximated normal.

"I have examined over 10,000 school girls and thousands of women of the type who work all day long in offices, schools and shops. My observation leads me to conclude that the modern woman is taller, better developed and healthier, with more endurance that Sir Lane would have us believe."

COOLIDGE HOPES FOR NEW'S ARMS CONFERENCE

Survey of the Needs of the United States Navy Projected.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30.— The future of the United States navy took on a new aspect yesterday with simultaneous expressions of opinion from both the White House and the House Naval Committee as to what should be the first step in that direction. Just as the house committee decided to begin an inquiry into the needs of the navy it was revealed that President Colidge still is hopeful that another international arms conference may be held during 1925.

Although the president is not entirely convinced that such a conference will be possible, he, nevertheless is hopeful that an opportune time will arise for such a venture.

Mr. Coolidge will exert his influence to bring about another arms limitation conference whenever the time is considered propitious, but at present he is unable to determine just when a conference could be called with fair prospects of success.

WOMAN CONFESSES MURDER OF FAMILY

Neighbors Had Feared Tragedy By Demented Woman —Four Killed.

LOGANSPORT, Ind., Dec. 31.—Mrs. Emma Hobough, 33-year-old widow, confessed yesterday that she killed the four members of her family, found dead Monday in the farm home, eight miles from here, according to Sheriff Walter Bowyer of this (Cass) County.

The four persons killed were Mrs. Hobough's 3-year-old daughter, Viola, her brother, John Bassler, aged 22, and her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bassler, aged 69 and 60 respectively. They were all killed with a shot gun, the tops of their heads being blown off.

Mrs. Hobough was known to have been demented, though thought to be harmless for the past twelve years, according to information to the police.

Through eight hours of questioning, Mrs. Hobough told a story of alleged abuses and indignities at the hands of members of her family.

"God told me to, because they were mean to me," she said once when Sheriff Bowyer asked her why she "did it."

"They were mean to me after my husband died and I had to go and live with them," she told the sheriff. "They wouldn't buy the things my little girl needed and this Christmas they wouldn't let me get her any presents or have a tree for her."

Neighbors of the accused woman told the sheriff that Mrs. Hobough had shown symptoms of insanity for months and that they had "feared a tragedy in the family."

From the evidence of the tragedy on the Bassler farm and the incoherent answers of Mrs. Hobough to questions, the authorities gathered together the details of the murder of the members of the family.

Brooding over her alleged wrongs and failure of her parents to buy a Christmas present for her daughter, the woman decided Sunday afternoon to kill her relatives, the authorities believe.

The father was shot late that evening as he dozed by a stove in the living-room of the Bassler home.

A moment later the shotgun was turned on the little girl, lying asleep on a couch, and she was killed instantly.

Shot From Behind.

The mother was at the barn milking at the time, and she was shot from behind as she left the barn and turned to close the door. Her body was dragged back to the house.

The brother, John, Jr., had gone to the home of his fiancee, to whom he was to have been married within a few weeks. He returned to the farm some time after midnight, and was shot after he had put his car in the garage.

The evidence of the murders was carefully cleaned up by the slayer. Blood-stains spattered over the room in which the father and daughter were slain were removed, and blood-stained curtains were taken down and replaced with clean ones. Splotches of blood were carefully removed from the furniture and the floor was scrubbed.

The authorities found the clothing worn by the woman at the time of the murders in an upstairs room. The clothing was smeared with blood.

WAR DEBT POOL MAY BE TALKED AT CONFERENCE

Churchill Reported as Intending to Inject the Issue at Next Week's Parley.

FRENCH POSITION

Contend They Can't Pay War Debts If War Claims Not Paid.

PARIS, Dec 31.— The conference of allied finance ministers here next week is expected by close observers to be far more important event than the original agenda indicated.

The conference, it is understood, will be called upon not only to estblish a bas[illegible] or sharing the proceeds of the Dawes reparation plan but will be asked to revise the percentage of distribution of reparations among the allies as fixed at Spa. An agreement between the French government and the leaders of the Socialist wing of Premier Herriot's majority in the chamber, as revealed in the chamber debate and discussions in the lobbies, requires the French delegate to this conference to raise these questions.

Solution Urged.

Whether war debts will also be discussed at the meeting depends, it is stated, upon the plans of Winston Churchill, the British chancellor of the exchequer, who is credited here with the intention of bringing this much talked of matter up in some form. Both reparations and war debts are now regarded in French political circles as having reached a point where they cannot longer remain without solution. French businessmen are particularly anxious to get the debt question out of the way since, they declare, it is now the only element that prevents the final stablizing of the international financial situation. The yield of the Dawes plan is still regarded as doubtful, but it has the advantage the businessmen say, of fixing definitely what France cannot count upon. They add that "when we know just what our creditors are going to insist upon, we can arrange accordingly."

The official viewpoint is much the same as that of the business interests. It is generall admitted in official circles that the debt quesition must not remain much longer in suspense, but there is a lingering inclination to link all war debts with reparations.

War Claims and Debts.

The position of the former Poincare government was that if France paid her war debts she must also be paid her war claims. This is generally expected to be the present policy of Premier Herriot, although expressed somewhat differently. Poincare talked about the rights of a debtor to demand full payment if asked to make full payment. Premier Herriot hasavoided the word "rights" but speaks of "equity." He brought back from London a promise of former Premier MacDonald to consider the question in that light.

Poincare when at the head of the French government, declared categorically that France could not pay her war debts unless she recovered her claims. Premier Herriot has avoided such a final summing up of the issue. But in the meantime, since his predecessor stated the French position, the French claims on Germany have been reduced by half under the Dawes plan.

The question of war debts, if brought up in Paris next week, it is expected will be technically outside of the finance minister's conference and confined to the French and the British, as it is understood that Mr. Logan will have no instruction to enter any sort of discussion on this subject.

PARIS, Dec. 31.—Since Christmas Eve social activities have been at a low ebb, but unusual gayeties are expected New Year's Eve, when the Americans here expect to outdo all previous records for festivities.

Two trainloads of champagne have arrived from Rheims cellars, following an alarming report that Paris stocks are not sufficent to assuage the thirst of the revelers.

Among the largest parties will be those given in Paris by the new Hollywood colony, Joseph Schenck, Rex Ingram, Gloria Swanson, Samuel Goldwyn, Minto Durfee and Sessue Hayakawa are among the film folk getting in condition to hail the New Year appropriately.

CANADA'S TOTAL TRADE DECLINED DURING 1924

Reduction of 45 Millions From Figures for 1923.

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 31— (Can-Press).—A reduction of approximately forty-five million dollars in the grand total of Canada's trade during the year ending to-day, as compared with the calendar year 1923, in indicated by figures available here.

Trade figures for the eleven months ending November 30th have been compiled by the Dominon Bureau of Statistics. The figures for December must necessarily be in the nature of an estimate as complete returns will not be available until about the middle of January. However, by assuming that the trade during the present month approximated that of December, 1923, it is possible to arrive at an estimate of the total trade.

THE WEATHER

Last year ended with overcast and dull weather in the forenoon, and snow and sleet in the afternoon and evening. The temperature was much the same as prevails to-day. The winter, however, had only begun, while this season it has already been with us for several weeks, with six days already of zero temperature. If appearances do not deceive we are in for a long and severe winter. This prediction is based on the fact if the winter does not get a good start, and an early one, it is generally not a severe one. To all readers I take the opportunity of wishing a Happy and Prosperous New Year, and in the words of a little verse which I recently read—

"Let the old life be covered by the new,
The old past, so full of sad mistakes,
Let it be wholly hidden from the view
By deeds as white and silent as snowflakes."—W. P.

PLANS OF ASPIRING ALDERMEN DECLARED IN PUBLIC MEETING CALLED BY COUNCIL OF WOMEN

Question Raised as to Whether Two Nominees for City Council Are Eligible for Election—Many Speakers Slam the Tax Rate.

GRANTS TO SOCIETIES UPHELD BY MAYOR

Tuggey Attacks Idleness of City Officials—Bradburn Has Cheerful Declaration on Hydro—Crowe Takes a Sporting Attitude With Greene and Denne.

Many subjects were discussed in the two and a half hour session of the public meeting last night under the auspices of the Local Council of Women when aspiring Aldermen were invited to display their wares. They ranged all the way from taxation to the building of sidewalks and from the alleged tripping of city officials in search of work for their idle hands to the power inquiry. But the most momentous from the point of veiw of the 7 women and 43 men present, as well as the citizens in general, was the question as to whether two names on the ballot must be ignored by the electors through a technicality in the nominations.

J. Mendell Greene and Roland Denne, it was said last night, were nominated for the Aldermanic Board while they were still members of this year's Board of Education, and this disqualifies them for election. Issue was joined by others who claimed that Peterborough municipal elections are conducted under a special dispensation and section 53 of the provincial act does not apply here.

After a great deal of discussion Ald. Maher suggested that to clear the question in the minds of the people City Solicitor Joseph Wearing be asked to give a legal opinion on the matter in time for publication in today's Examiner. Mayor Turner agreed to interview the solicitor..

It was later decided by six of the Aldermen that the matter should not be left to chance and that a special meeting of the City Council should be called this morning at which an order could be framed to the City Solicitor.

Mrs. Arthur Stevenson.

The meeting was presided over by Mrs. Arthur Stevenson, president of the Council of Women, who outlined the objects sought. The body that she leads had endeavoured to have the date of the municipal elections changed from January 1 to a more suitable date, but the City Council "had not seen fit to take any action." The Council of Women still believe the present arrangement unfortunate in that there is little opportunity in the holiday week for citizens to learn the plans of the candidates or for the candidates to make their ability known.

This meeting was the outcome of the desire of the women to hear the candidates and to meet them personally.

Ex-Mayor A. A. McIntyre, candidate for Utilities Commissioner, sent his regrets in being unable to attend, and Alderman J. W. Meyers also regretted his inability to be present. The candidates present were Aldermen Joseph Crowe, J. O. Fife, M. J. Maher and Robert Morrison, and Wilbert J. Hancock, Thomas E. Sargent, and Frederick T. Tuggey. The absent candidates who sent no explanation of their absence were Roland Denne, J. Mendell Greene, G. L. Hay, and John Hugh Spence..

What Was Said.

Mr. Tuggey told his audience that the citizens are bled to death by high taxation, and assured the electors that he would endeavour to stop some of the waste motion he said exists in the city offices where officials are falling over themselves because they cannot find anything to do.

Among the many bogeys that popped up in front of Mr. Hancock to meet his annihilating attacks were taxation, the power inquiry, the building of sidewalks, grants to societies, and the dustless sweeper because it wakes him up at four a.m.

Mr. Sargent declared that he finds everywhere in the city people crying out against excessive taxation.

Mr Bradburn brought out the ghost of the Hunter street bridge and made it walk the plank to illustrate the improvidence of the City Council in which his opponent, A. A. McIntyre, sat. More cheering was his statement that the city is now getting its power from the Hydro Electric Power Commission practically at cost, and has a more favorable contract than probably any other municipality in Central Ontario.

Alderman Fife expressed regret that his plan to build a rest room for women was abandoned to satisfy some new aldermen who thought only of lower taxation.

Alderman Crowe expressed a sporting attitude toward the two men who may be disqualified, saying if he lost and they were elected he would have nothing to say against their taking the seats. "They are really good men", he generously added.

Alderman Morrison expressed the opinion that the sewage disposal plant should be built by day labor, and defended the dustless sweeper against the attack made by Mr. Hancock. "It really cleans the streets," he said.

Alderman Maher took up cudgels in behalf of the societies receiving grants from the City Council, asking whether anyone would suggest depriving the Children's Shelter, St. Vincent's Orphanage, the Well Babies' Clinic, the Health Association, and other public benefits of the small grants made. He also pointed out that the City Council only controls about 26 cents out of every dollar collected in taxes, and declared that some were making a football of the word "economy," or drawing it, like a herring across the trail, to bewilder the electors.

Citizens Bled To Death.

Fred T .Tuggey, the first speaker, said he sought election because he thought there should be new blood in the council to do what the citizens want.

"I stand for city improvements to be done under competent men, capable of giving value for the money expended,' Mr. Tuggey said, citing Campbellford as an example of efficient administration in this regard.

Regarding the proposed technical school, the speaker said no money should be spent for the technical school at the present time when the citizens are bled to death by high taxation that burdens the working man beyond his strength.. "I stand on the ground of economy. The people should have a say in how their money is spent and you want men here in the Council who will do their business efficiently."

Attacks City Officials.

We have men in our city offices paid out of your taxes who are falling over themselves because they can find nothing to do. I would

ST. JOHN'S SUNDAY SCHOOL CONCERT

Prizes Presented to the Scholars—A Good Programme.

The children of St. John's Sunday school enjoyed a Christmas treat yesterday afternoon and evening. In the afternoon the primary department met at 3 o'clock and enjoyed a couple of hours of games, and a programme to which many of the children contributed as well as members of the staff. Miss Margaret English, who is in charge of this department, directed the entertainment and, together with her assistants, provided an interesting and colourful repast at which each child was generously remembered by Santa Claus. The Christmas Tree for the main school commenced at 7.30 p.m. Two trees were erected on the platform of the Parish Hall and prettily decorated with the usula Christmas tree and a bountiful supply of prizes and presents. Mr. E. Sorby was introduced to the audience by the vicar, Rev. Dr. Blagrave, and he then occupied the chair and took charge of the proceedings. The following programme of recitations and songs were rendered:

FATHER OF TWINS IS NOW BROKEN HEARTED

Both Children Died and Had to be Buried by Morgue Authorities.

NEW YORK, Dec. 31. — (United Press).—Dante Golfieri was very happy three weeks ago when he became a proud father twice in the same day.

But the stork that left twins at Golfieri's east side home did not leave money for doctor's bills. And when one of the babies became ill on Christmas day there was nothing the parents could do except pray.

The next morning the child died. There was no money for a funeral so the father sent the body to the morgue authorities for burial.

The other baby died yesterday. Still there was no money, so Golfieri wrapped the body in a blanket and started for the morgue again. After walking sixty-eight blocks without finding his destination, he came to the Thirty-Fifth Street police station, where he arranged to have the city take charge of the second burial.

Employment Situation Is Not Provincial Problem

Government Has Done All In Its Power to Help the Unemployed.

TORONTO, Dec. 31.—(Canadian Press).—The Ontario Governent will not regard the existing unemployment as a provincial problem in excess of recognition which has already been given it by the institution of public works in Toronto, in Northern Ontario and in other outside points. Intimation to this effect telegraped yesterday by Hon. George S. Henry acting premier to premier Greenfield of Alberta who had solicited Ontario's co-operation in plan of provincial relief and its participation in deputation to visit the federal government at Ottawa.

The stand of the provincial cabinet is that it has done all that can be reasonably asked from it towards the solution of the unemployment problem.

Its view is that the balance of the burden should be born by the federal government and individual municipalities.

LAKEFIELD'S AGREEMENT WIT THE CEMENT COMPANY DISCUSSED

Reeve Strickland Declared at Nomination Meeing That Municipality Had Kept Faith.

A LOCAL ISSUE

Dr. J. C. Smith Urges Parents to Assume Share in Control of Children.

LAKEFIELD, December 31. —At the close of the nominations on Monday evening, the clerk (Mr. T. B. Marling) who was appointed chairman for the evening, called on the reeve for a speech.

Reeve Strickland who was re-elected by acclamation to serve his sixth year as the chief executive of the village, thanked those who were responsible for his nomination, and assured them of his best efforts on behalf of the village in the future as in past years.

The council of 1924 was a good one, and in spite of heavy extra expenses during the year, the tax rate had not been raised, and the debenture debt was decreased materially, and the assets of the village increased. In passing, the Reeve paid a tribut the volunteer fire brigade, which he considers one of the best in Ontario. He also endorsed the work of the clerk and the chief police. The park commission have done splendid work and have made a big improvement in the park, which is now taking its proper place as a strong asset in the village. It is expected that next summer this will be a popular tourist camp and that in this way money will be brought into the village. Messrs Robert Duff and David Simmons deserve special credit in regard to the work at the park.

The village band, re-organized during the past year received a grant of $300, of which they made excellent use and are now a credit to the village in time views appe ding the Canadian Cement Co. here has been a great deal said for the council putting the company out of business in Lakefield, which is a serious mis-statement, as the reeve and council have stood right behind the Canada Cement Co., and will continue to do so. When the bylaw regarding the re-opening of the company's plant was put before the people in 1920 the company said that they would not open if the by-law did not pass, which it did with a large majority; and now the company says the council have closed them down. In 1922, Mr. Bailey said that in order to carry out the agreement they were putting on in the neighborhood of 100 men. If this agreement had been carried out the council would not have exacted the penalty. The agreement which is in the village vault sigend by the village representatives and representatives of the company, states clearly that in the event of the company failing to carry out their contract they will pay taxes on the difference between the fixed assessment and the school assessment. The council did not carry out this penalty in 1922 but at the court of revision the same year the assessment was made $75,000.

July and August of last year men were discharged in numbers from the plant and complaints came in regarding the breaking of the agreement. Messrs. Kilbourn and Bailey met the council which enforced the penalty, and asked what proposition would the Canada Cement Company put up regarding the matter, and the reply was that no proposition would come from the company. It was up to the council. Now a rumour is abroad saying that Mr. Bailey has a proposition which he won't put before the present council.

If that statement is true what can be done, the Council can do nothing without the will of the people. There can be no kick regarding the Council of 1924 from the Canada Cement Co., as they received everything they asked all year. Personally, the Reeve secured the contract for the cement for the new bridge for the Canada Cement Company when it was going to a firm in St. Mary's.

The Belleville plant, which is not nearly as large as the local plant, is assessed at over $700,000, and there is no fixed assessment, either; if the local plant was assessed at $300,000 the company could consider themselves lucky, but in any event the company have to recognize that they must pay the taxes justified. We can't give everything, for we must look to the future. It would be a serious matter if the school burned down and the Cement Company need pay no more taxes than at present, for a heavy burden would then rest on the ratepayers.

Mr. Marling deviated from the usual program to give Mr. Bailey, manager of the Canada Cement Comany's local plant, a chance to reply, but Mr. Bailey declined to speak at that time, suggesting that he might possibly say something later in the evening.

Finances Satisfactory.

Mr. E. A. Tanner, chairman of the Finance Committee, was the next speaker. He considers the financial statement for the year satisfactory. Two or three years ago the speaker warned the people against allowing the debenture debt to grow, and urged a policy of caution. At the present time the debenture debt has been reduced to about $67,700, and the current account deficit has also been reduced to a small sum. This is satisfactory as this has not been a lean year as regards expense—both ordinary and extraordinary.

The band and park have received grants this year. The park, which is known as Hagne's Point, has been much improved, and people are beginning to regard it as an asset.

This year the Provincial Government taxed the village $457 for roads, and the School Board were under heavy expenditure apparently. The Council recognized the importance of keeping employment for the men of the village, and endeavored to bring in industries, and, while their success was not as great as was hoped for, the town has not suffered in any way.

Regarding the Canada Cement Company, the speaker regards the trouble as local and does not regard it as serious, for the Council has given the company all the help they asked for. Regarding the present situation, the contract is in the vaults of the village. The village has lived up to the letter of the contract and think the company should do the same, but if they do not do so the Council must enforce the contract as the people expect. The contract may be modified if the ratepayers desire it, but the Council has no more power to change it than to change the O.T.A. (Laughter). Personally, the speaker felt that if the company made a mistake, they should come to the Council, and they would deal with it in a business-like way.

Other Speakers.

Mr. W. W. Leonard, chairman of the Roads committee, spoke briefly on the work done by the committee, which was the best they could do this year.

Mr. N. A. Moore, chairman of the Property committee, regards the improvement of the park one of the best pieces of work done. Regarding the Canada Cement Co., he can't see why there should be any difficulty as the company got all they asked.

Mr. Walter Madill, chairman of the Charity committee, said that in his opinion the council of the past year, had done its best to be fair to all and partial to none.

Dr. M. P. Kennedy was next called on, and related an amusing anecdote which evoked much laughter. He stated that at the moment he was not prepared to say whether he would stand but would reserve his decision till later.

Mr. J. W. Ridpath, the chairman of the school board, was absent, and Dr. J. C. Smith was called to speak on matters pertaining to his branch of the municipal activity.

School Crowded.

Dr. Smith admitted the possibilities of mistakes as the members of the board were only human, but that is one place where people are needed of the greatest and broadest humanity. People often made the mistake of thinking that the only people benefitted by the money spent on schools are the children and their parents, but this is a great mistake as the whole community benefits and this fact is recognized by the grant which are given. As Lakefield is educating a large number of children, the speaker feels the present grants are inadequate, but this year there will be a decided increase on the amount spent last year. During the year the number of children attending school was so much larger that the staff had to be enlarged and equipment increased. At present several of the Public school rooms are over-crowded and the teachers are unable to do their best work, so the ratepayers must not be surprised if there is a further increase in accommodation. This year the requisition to the county council is for $3,300, which is much larger than in the past and is caused by the decided increase in the number of pupils.

From time to time one hears complaints regarding the teaching staff and the discipline, etc., and this is not peculiar to Lakefield, but is in the main similar to other places. Youth has a great deal more liberty to-day than in the past and they are not impressed with the necessity of making their work count, but feel as if they should have a good time. Parents should realize that their responsibilities cannot be shouldered on to the teachers just because they are paid to teach. Parents should ask themselves, are they doing their share and are their children impressed with the right idea regarding their obligations in the matter of doing their best work.

Mr. W. J. Little spoke briefly, and while thanking his nominees, he felt he did not care to stand for election on the board.

Hydro Affairs.

Mr. W. J. Charlton, re-elected Hydro-Electric commissioner, was the next speaker.

This year has been a successful one as there were no losses to speak of and a good surplus. It is hoped to make a further decrease in the rate, but that is a matter for the head office. During 1924 there were 26 new services installed, making a total of 287. Two new street lights were put in, making 94. There are three power services, one running at present. There are 14 electric ranges; there has been a good deal of trouble connecting ranges this year as the heavier wire and metres have to be ordered. $1,120.00 covers the salaries and upkeep, financial and book-keeping, $57.50 for outside labor. During the past 11 months, till Nov. 30th, there was 1,104 h.p. received and in the same length of time $3,928.90 was cost of power. The system is valuable and an asset to the village. There is more than $4,000 in metres alone without the transformers, poles, wiring, etc. Mr. Charlton stated that the books of the commission could be seen any time at Mr. Tate's office.

The meeting then closed.

PREDICT TRADE BOOM FOR BRITISH EMPIRE

New Feeling of Stability to Benefit all Dominions Shortly.

LONDON, Dec. 31. — The New Year is expected to see a boom in financial trading here which will have its repurcussion throughout the Empire, particularly in Canada, say banking and money men here.

In the City it is reported that a sudden rise in securities all round will be visible on the stock Exchange about the middle of January, particularly in operation between London and New York and preparations are already being made to meet it. The feeling of stability induced by the return of the Conservative Government to power will begin to reap its full benefits in a few weeks time.

The Federation of British Industries, the largest organization of its kind in Britain and one of the largest in the world, predicts a world trade revival in the near future, while the Department of Overseas Trade, which is a branch of the British Board of Trade predicts "We should see a strong improvement in all Overseas markets soon."

The shipping revival, noticeable during the last few weeks, continues to show progress and Britain is today constructing one-half of the total tonnage of the world. Under the new policy fostered by Col. Amery, and supported by Premier Baldwin, of developing British trade within the Empire, British prosperity is bound to affect the other units.

Holders of Common Stock to Rescue Shares of New Company.

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—Directors of the General Electric Company Tuesday authorized a special distribution to stockholders, which will be accomplished through segregation of the electric bond and share company, one of the largest public utility holding organizations in the country. Common and preferred stocks of the electric bond and share company with a total par value of $25,030,000, owned by the General Electric Company, will be transferred to a new corporation which in turn will distribute 1,802,870 shares of capital stock, share-for-share, to General Electric common stock holders. The actual value of the distribution will be much larger than indicated by the par value of stocks transferred. Unofficial estimates placed the book value of Electric bond and share common stock, which has been 100 per cent. owned by General Electric at $100,000,000 or more. The company last year earned a balance for its common stock equivalent to $32.76 a share and its 1924 surplus has been officially estimated at more than $18,000,000.

Owen D. Young, chairman, and Gerard Swope, president of the general Electric Company, in announcing the plans for the distribution, said that dividends of not less than $1 a share annually on the new stock were warranted by the present eight per cent. dividend rate on Electric bond and share common. Dividends will accrue after January 1 and will be paid quarterly. General Electric stockholders of record January 15 will share in the distribution, which probably will be made around February 1.

TO BUILD HOSPITALS

American Red Cross Relief Fund to Build Two Hospitals in Japan.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—The memorial hospital to be constructed in Tokio from the unused portion of earthquake relief fund of the American Red Cross will be of reinforced concrete and will not exceed three stories. These features are designed to make the building as nearly earthquake proof as possible.

Reports to Red Cross headquarters in Washington reveal that the Japanese will build a branch hospital in Yokohoma. Work on the buildings will begin next spring.

The Japanese will spend $1,500,000 of the unused relief fund for the two buildings, reserving the remaining $1,500,000 as an endowment.

NEW LAMP BURN 94% AIR

Beats Electric or Gas

A new oil lamp that gives an amazingly brilliant, soft, white light, has been bettert than gas or electricity, has been tested by the U.S. Government, and 35 leading uniersities, and found to be superior to 10 ordinary oil lamps. It burns without odor, smoke or noise—no pumping up; is simple, clean, safe. Burns 94% air and 6% common kerosene (coil oil).

The inventor, F. S. Johnson, 246 Craig Street W., Montreal, is offering to send a lamp on 10 days' FREE trial, or even to give one FREE to the first user in each locality who will help him introduce it. Write him to-day for full particulars. Also ask him to explain how you can get the agency, and without experience or money make $250 to $500 per month.

FIRST BOOK ON FARMING.

"A Boke of Husbandrye"—believed to be the first book on farming printed in England—was bought recently for a sum equal to about $1,500 on behalf of the British Museum at Sotheby's salerooms. This book, so small that it could easily be slipped in the pocket, was printed in 1523 by one Richarde Pynson. It was written by Sir Anthony Fitzherbert of Norbury, Derbyshire, and is in excellent condition, though colored with age. It is bound in morocco.

C. A. Loucks Dead.

The late C. A. Loucks was born in Rawdon Township, but he lived in Seymour for the last fifty years. Thirty-six years ago he married Miss Euphemia Leeson. They have no family. He was a cheesemaker until about 18 years ago when he took up farming. He has lived on this farm in Seymour West for the last 13 years. His father, who is 91 years old, is still living. He resides at the home of his grandson, Mr. Roy Loucks, in Seymour East. There are two sisters living: Mrs. D. Brown of Stanwood and Mrs. Nicholas of Heeley Falls. His brother Mr. Ira Loucks, of Seymour, died in December of last year, and a sister, Mrs. Aikens, died in September of this year. The late Mr. Loucks was a member of the Methodist church.

E. D. Brunelle Dead.

Mr. Elie D. Brunelle died at his home on Front street, on Monday evening, in his eighty-third year. He will be buried on Wednesday morning at nine o'clock, service in St. Mary's church and interment will take place in St. Mary's cemetery. Rev. Father Phelan, of St. Mary's church will be in charge of the service. He leaves, besides his sorrowing widow and only four children living out of a large family. They are Elie, the eldest son, manager of the pulp mill at Campbellford, Victor and Antonio, both of Campbellford, and Miss Alexandra, also at home. He was born in the city of Quebec, September 8th, 1842. His father, Pierre Brunelle, who was a ship builder, married Madame Marguerite Duval. He completed his studies in Quebec High school.

In February, 1868, he answered the call of Pope Pius IX, and left for Rome with the first Canadian contingent, where he took part in the battles of Magenta and Loigny. In 1870 when the French government called their troops for Italy he followed them to France and saw duty under the famous General De Charette. The Glorious Epopee of these days left souvenirs which embellished his whole life.

In 1871 and 2 he was appointed by the Canadian government, together with his brother, P. D. Brunelle, to oversee the construction of the first two steamships in Canada to open up navigation between Lake of the Woods and Rainy Lake. For years he worked in the construction works of Louise Basin, in Quebec city, and was for years the government inspector of the works. In 1874 he married Miss Merilda St. Laurent, who survives him. He was knighted in 1913 in Rimouski by the Bishop of Blais in Rimouski. He was dressed in a beautiful uniform that he used while in service of the Pope and wore two solid gold medals which he had received from the Pope in honor of his services. It was his desire that he should wear the uniform that he has kept for fifty-six years and medals to his last resting place. The late Mr. Brunelle had never been sick in his life till about five years ago, when he had a stroke of paralysis which has prevented him from being the active man that he had been and he felt this very much. He was ill this time only about 12 days. Practically his whole life has been spent in the service of his church and country, and he had gathered many wonderful suovenirs during his eventful life. A kind and loving husband and father will be missed in the home.

Gum-Chewing Crowded Out By Cross-Words

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31. — (United Press).—Gum chewing may be dying out in the United States, its greatest stronghold. The gum-chewing stenographer may be in the process of being eliminated by the one who works cross-word puzzles.

At any rate, the imports of chicle, the raw material for gum decreased last year. Only $4,123,000 worth of the elastic substance derived from the milky juice of the sapodilla tree was brought in from Mexico, Honduras and the British West Indies —a decrease of a half-million dollars from the previous year, according to Department of Commerce figures.

Europe, however, may take up the gum chewer's burden. Nearly three million pounds of American-made chewing gum, valued at $1,385,000 was exported during the year, of which France took the largest part.

SOLVED

One of its greatest victories has just been won by the dyes industry. The secret of "golden orange" has been discovered in the laboratories. Inability to make this dye is why our troops went overseas in fading khaki.

Rapidly our chemists are rediscovering the secrets held so long by Germans. The cunning Germans would, for instance, take a dye that involved 16 different steps or processes, and patent only two steps. This protected them. When we "took over" the dyes patents, our chemists had to figure out the missing 14 links.

Where shall we go this evening?

FREQUENTLY you decide to spend the evening in town with some friend. The first part is easy. Dinner at a pleasant restaurant. But afterwards . . . What will you do to carry on this business of having a good time?

Easy! Three cents. An evening paper. A glance at the advertisements, Suggestion—agreement, and you're off!

You didn't go around to the different theatres, to be driven to an unsatisfactory choice by fatigue and time. If it's worth while to consult the advertisements about amusements, how much worth while must it be when it comes to the spending of he household money.

Read the advertisements. They place before you the full choice of the trustworthy goods in the market. They describe advantages, and give you full information before you have to stir out of your chair. Pursue for every article you buy the method you use when it comes to amusements.

The way to be sure of what you buy is to buy advertised goods.

Reading advertisements is an education in better buying

WHERE ECONOMY LIES.

Mayor Hiltz of Toronto, in a campaign speech the other day, hit the nail squarely on the head when he declared that genuine municipal economy consisted of spending a dollar at the right time and getting full value for the expenditure.

Around election times there are always devoted worshippers of economy who promise if elected to reduce expenditure to an unheard of extent.

Usually they are vague about how this saving is to be effected; and their plans, if they have any, are kept carefully out of sight.

To such candidates the Examiner commends the words of Toronto's chief magistrate.

In the long run people are more concerned over how their money is spent than over how much is spent.

They would rather see $1,000 expended wisely than $100 thrown away, and they have grown somewhat weary of the aspirant for office who merely shouts "Economy" as the youth passing through the Alpine village shouted "Excelsior."

There have been so very many of these candidates whose parrot-like slogan was heard in full force before elections and very seldom afterward that the electors can be pardoned for asking the economy salesman to let them see his samples in advance.

THE NEW YEAR.

In wishing its wide circle of readers the happiest and brightest of New Years, the Examiner is confident that they as Canadians, citizens of a great Dominion, can regard the outlook as bright with hope.

There is no reason for Canada on the threshold of another year to be despondent.

Nineteen twenty-four may not have brought the full measure of prosperity that some expected, but neither has it brought the depression and disaster that others predicted.

All in all, the good ship Canada has made a successful voyage through seas that were not always tranquill, and often threatening, and now is within easy sail of the harbour of prosperity, with favouring trade winds bellying out her sails and her crew happy and confident as the bad weather is left behind and the bright sun of better times sets the wave tops a-sparkle with diamonds.

The signs for 1925 are all auspicious.

Agriculture is coming back—increased values with decreased costs will give our farmers prosperity and everybody else must inevitably share in their success.

With the basic industry on its feet and thriving, there is bound to be a favourable reaction in manufacturing and business.

The year which opens tomorrow will not be a boom year, but it should be a good year, and will be if Canadians will resolve to have more faith in themselves and in their country and more sympathy for the problems that may seem only to affect the other fellow but in the closest analysis affect us all.

And if our legislators of all parties can be persuaded to think less of party advantage and more of their country's weal, if there was an earnest effort made to adopt the attitude of statesmen rather than of politicians whose chief concern is to get into office or stay there, nothing can hold Canada back in 1925.

TOMORROW'S DUTY.

During the recent municipal election campaign in London the Kiwanis Club of that city did much to arouse interest in civic affairs by asking voters to pledge themselves to use their franchise and by giving concrete reasons why they should do so.

Here is part of the appeal which, on the eve of Peterborough's election, should be of interest:

"Arouse to your duty, make a study of the men in nomination, select those you think best, and then if you love your city, do your duty fearlessly and faithfully. There is no other way by which we can have the things we should have except and save through the mighty power of the ballot, which makes of every man and woman in our land that thing which has so aptly and wisely been designated as the sovereign citizen."

That is excellent advice, and the Examiner hopes that it will be followed here tomorrow.

It will be if it is realized that our prosperity and our interests are tied up with the efficiency and conduct of our municipal government, and that if we are too selfish or indifferent to interest ourselves in such affairs we must pay the price of our selfishness or our indifference.

If there are men in our elective administrative bodies who are not capable, it is our own fault, for we either voted for them or we didn't vote against them.

The electors of Peterborough are asked tomorrow to select five Aldermen out of a field of twelve and to chose one of two men as a member of the Utilities Commission.

In the first case the five elected candidates will be members of the City Council for two years; in the second the successful aspirant will take part in the deliberations of the Utilities Commission for three years, so that upon the result of tomorrow's vote will depend to a great extent the general administration of Peterborough's civic affairs during 1925 and 1926 and to a considerable degree the administration of the most vital public utilities of light and water during 1925, 1926 and 1927.

Surely these things are important enough to demand not only a large vote, but a conscientious striving on the part of the electorate to make the best possible choice.

WHAT WILL 1925 BRING YOU?

Was 1924 a good year for you? Do you look back over it with pleasure? Or are you glad it has gone into eternity forever, and a new year is at hand that may bring better things?

Many will contemplate 1924 with satisfaction. It brought, to them, increased money or wisdom or happiness. Others were less fortunate.

An admirable institution is New Year's Day, on which we take stock of our condition and, tearing the old calendar down, start anew with fresh enthusiasm and ambition. It is the time to forget, as well as the time to make good resolutions.

We can profit by experience—especially by our mistakes.

Errors teach us what not to do again.

They pilot us safely through the future if we have learned our lesson.

Experience is to the individual what capital is to a business. Experience also teaches us what not to do. That is quite as important as knowing what to do.

It is unfortunate that so many people see in New Years Day only a reminder of errors. There is too much "resolving not to do," too little "resolving to do."

Ideal is the combination of both.

Good resolutions need not all be negative.

New Year's Day is quite as much a time to start as a time to quit.

What a man is today compared with a year ago is far less important than what he will be a year from now.

And his condition Jan. 1, 1926, will depend largely on himself—on his ambition, his efforts, his determination.

Some will resolve to increase their income in 1925.

Others will resolve to improve their knowledge and wisdom.

Still others will primarily seek greater happiness, and a few will realize that it is found in greatest abundance by making others happy.

Let mistakes and weaknesses die with the old year.

Let renewed ambition, determination and kindliness arrive with 1925.

Ahead into the unknown!

PUBLIC EXPENDITURE.

Every one knows that there has been a tremendous increase in expenditure, national, Provincial and municipal, within the last decade, and consequently a corresponding increase in taxation. Efforts to reduce in both respects are not only praiseworthy, but are absolutely essential, and there is no political platform which does not include pledges of economy and tax reduction as its principal plank. The piling up of public debt and the onerous burden of taxation are the favorite subjects of writers upon economics in this country, and in most other countries, and the cry is ever the same—that the era of extravagance and luxury must be brought to a termination and that the taxpayer must be relieved of the heavy load he is compelled to carry. In commenting upon a recent article of this nature in a popular Canadian magazine, the London Advertiser takes exception to the use of a phrase which has become almost inevitable in discussing this subject—viz., "orgy of expenditure." There is no disposition to deny that expenditures have increased to an alarming extent within the last few years; figures are quoted by the London newspaper, in fact, to show that local taxation has been almost quadrupled in the last ten years. But the point is, has value been received for the outlay? Has it been an "orgy" of expenditure, or has it been an investment in health, education, better facilities and conveniences, greater amenities and general improvement?

There is one effective way to cut down governmental expenditure, and that is to do without the things which have come to be regarded as necessities. It is a course, however, which would not prove acceptable. There is public education, for instance. In 1912 Londoners paid $4.96 per capita for all educational purposes, while in 1921 $13.14 per capita was spent. The reason for this big jump is found in the fact that London "has torn down old schools and replaced them with new; it has made them larger, brighter and fireproof, and it has cost money." Similarly, the construction of new sidewalks, sewers, pavements, etc., is responsible for expenditures on these objects rising from about $45,000 in 1912 to $921,000 in 1921. "It may be that London could have done without these things, or some of them," comments the London Advertiser, "perhaps they could have dispensed with walks and pavements, and been content with a strip of tan bark and a couple of loads of gravel to fill in the mud holes, but we doubt it very much. London might have said its schools were all right, when the people knew they were not; they might have allowed London's children to have been huddled together in unsanitary firetraps, but the spirit of the citizens fortunately did not find expression in that direction. It has not been a policy of dash away and spend, but a deliberate facing of actual needs of a growing city. The same thing that applies to London applies in some measure elsewhere. If there is wilful waste, if there is inefficiency, by all means jump on it; call it 'orgy' or any other name that will sting public conscience into rebellion and remedial action. But b eareful to draw the line of distinction between carefully considered, necessary expenditure, made by men who are trying to render a real service to their community in municipal, Provincial or Federal fields, and the other kind of expenditure that is open to censure."

The point is well taken. Hamilton's experience has been similar to that of London and all other progressive cities. We are spending more and living higher, but would we be content to go back to the old conditions; could we, in fact, do so if we wanted to? The standards have changed for communities, as for individuals. It is foolish to argue the question as if all this money had been thrown away, without any prospect of a dividend ever being paid on the investment. The advantage is already being enjoyed in numerous ways and it is of an enduring nature.—Hamilton Spectator.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The Examiner's best wishes to its readers for a happy New Year.

Start right by voting for a Utilities Commissioner and City Council tomorrow.

Remember, in the case of aldermanic candidates five are to be elected, and you must vote for at least four to make your ballot valid. You may vote for five if you wish, but not for more than that number and not fewer than four.

Peterborough's City Council will have some most important business next year. It is the duty of the electors to remember that fact when making their selection.

With strawberry jam in early summer, peach jam in the autumn and ice jam in the winter, Niagara Falls must be well preserved.

Weather sharps are predicting that 1925 will be a dry year, J. A. McCausland, M.P., notwithstanding.

NEW YEAR'S RESOLUTIONS.

By Mrs. A. F. Calder.

Into the silent, shadowy past the old year has winged its flight,
And to-day is turned, in the book of Time, a new year, fair and white;
However ill-written and blotted, and stained, the preceding pages have been,
A new chance is afforded us now to indite a page unsoiled and clean.
What, though resolutions many we've made, as ever the New Year came,
And had to own, when at length it had flown, that we'd fallen far short of our aim.

Yet because we thus failed, of our hopes and aims, so oft in the years gone by,
Shall we discouraged, faint-hearted,
grow, give over and cease to try?
Nay rather, more stern, let us set ourselves, every nerve in the struggle strain
To win the prize of our calling high,
the glorious goal to gain.
And resolve once more, that with Heaven's help, come this year, whatever may,
Its close will find us farther advanced on the straight and narrow way.

To forget past failures, and firmly on to greater achievements press,
Give to doubt no place, but run well
the race, on effort awaits success;
Let us promise ourselves to always preach the Gospel of Hope and Cheer,
To look on the sunny side of life,
disowning, down draughting fear,
To talk of health and of happiness,
and of bright prosperity,
Sure Providence will send us still,
its bounteous blessings free.

Let us promise ourselves to be to ourselves, and others, sincere and true,
To think the best, to seek the best,
and the best that is in us to do,
To be so busied improving ourselves,
striving our ways to amend,
That for the shortcomings of others,
is not a moment of time to attend
To be high of heart, and hold the faith, that the world is on our side,
And Heaven our friend, while we on the side of Heaven, and right, abide.

Let us promise ourselves to faithfully try, God granting us still the power,
Not to waste or misuse the time as of yore, but improve every sacred hour,
For O so much, so exceedingly much,
on the fleeting years depend.
To seal our fate, for weal or woe in the world that knows no end.
So may we in well-doing, weary not,
but strive on and persevere,
Helping make this as much, as we may, a Happy and Glad New Year.

IT ISN'T AN EARTHQUAKE

Looks like an earthquake. But it isn't. It's part of the havoc wrought by the bursting of a 36-inch water main in downtown Cincinnati. Cellars were flooded 10 blocks away. The automobile in the hole is a water works' service truck. Street lights were out of commission and the driver, unable to see distinctly, drove into the hole. Six men narrowly escaped drowning.

MAIN STREET GOES DEER HUNTING.

VANCOUVER, Wash., Dec. 31.—A two-point buck deer was captured alive on Main Street here recently.

The deer was ambling up the street from the banks of the Columbia River when several persons gave chase. He dashed down an alley, entered an abandoned building and leaped through a window, then jumped a high fence and started back toward the river. The pavement was wet, and the buck slipped and fell several times, finally crashing into a fence with his horns so entangled that he was held fast. Four soldiers from Vancouver Barracks took the deer to the reservation.

NOMINATIONS CAMPBELLFORD

Favorable Report From the Water and Light Commission.

NOMINEES SPEAK

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 31.—Mr. S. J. Abernethy, chairman of the Campbellford Water and Light Commission, speaking at the nomination meeting on Monday, said he had a very favorable report to present to the people. They had done their best. They had spent some money in replacing one set of wheels which with installation put in by the Hydro Electric men, cost two thousand eight hundred and thirty-six dollars.

As there was a drop in the voltage it was necessary to do one of two things, build a sub-station or build a power line. They decided on the latter. This had been done and was completed a few weeks ago with the result of better lights and power. They use their surplus in loans to the town and had loaned twenty-eight thousand and had twenty-six thousand on hand. This loaning to the town helped finance the two at less cost than it otherwise would have to do.

He spoke of the necessity of soon having to get a new pump. He has been chairman of the Board for four years and he had found it a pleasure to sit with the other men on the commission. They had carried the business on for the best interests of the town. As he had a desire to serve he will be in the field.

Deputy Reeve Dorie, the next speaker, said he had no intention of accepting the nomination for reeve but was in the field for deputy reeve and asked for the kind support he had been given in the past. He solicited their votes from the platform and would do his best.

Councillor Coles, again in the field for councillor but not for deputy reeve. As chairman of the roads and bridges committee he spoke of the work on sewers and claimed that some of hese sewers are the cheapest ever laid in Campbellford. He also spoke of the work it brings to the men of the town who need it.

W. J. Abernethy said he intended running for councillor and not for deputy reeve. He thanked the people for the large support of last year. He had tried to do what he thought was right and asked their support again for next Monday. He spoke in favor of buying machinery to make better roads.

Councillor Johnston said this was the first time he had appeared in a public office. He was in the field for councillor. He was in favor of building a monument but it was left to the people to say which. He asked for their support.

A. M. McDonald said he would stand for councillor again and spoke strongly in favor of a Community Hall.

Wants Explanation.

H. Redden the next speaker took exception to a great deal that was said. He said he did not see how they had been saving money and getting into debt more than ever. He spoke of the cheap sewers and said he had put some in cheaper still, at $1.25 and $1.50 a foot. Not much had been done on the streets. He said he was before the people as a candidate for councillor for Campbellford and would do his best for the town. Campbellford needs steadying for a few years.

New Nominations—Mayor.

C. W. Palliser said he was not a candidate for mayor but would be for deputy reeve. He said the people favor of machinery for the town and everything but a sewer. He is in favor of machinerw for the town and also in favor of a monument as a memorial. Asked for the votes of the people.

Nelson Stone had not decided at present what he would do.

J. A. Anderson said he is not in the field for reeve. He had served in 1923 to the best of his ability. He gave some criticism of the financial statement of the town and expenses. It was going in debt too fast. The present offers a greater chance to better our economy than we have ever had.

A. J. Wood a candidate for councillor spoke on the wonderful fine streets, good roads and sewers but thought one good thing had been left out. We ought to do something to secure industries. We have six power houses in the vicinity of Campbellford with a total of thirty-five thousand or more horse power. We should form an industrial committee and go after some of these industries. He said "I take this opportunity to solicit your vote and influence for councillor. I have the best interests of Campbellford at heart."

Captain Hyland considered it an honor to be nominated. He had been in town about a year, but two years previous he had heard of the possibilities of Campbellford and did not see why the town should not go ahead. We should advertise what we have and then we will have these industries come to us. He had been asked to come out for councillor and he had decided to do so. As to the War Memorial, he is strongly in favor of a monument.

Geo. E. Morrison the last one of the newly nominated men, said a great deal, mostly in happy vein. He said one good thing—"that no municipality could live and do much without unity." It is his intention to run for councillor.

Answers Criticisms.

Mayor Meyer had the privilege of speaking at the last. He spoke briefly, answering the criticisms. He said the money spent has been put in permanent work, such as sidewalks, sewers, water mains, etc.

On the whole with so many speaking and such a large number, the order was good and everything passed off quietly.

OSHKIGMONG NEWS

Time Recalled When Indians Knew Nothing About Christmas.

CHEMONG RESERVE, Dec. 31.—The annual concert and Christmas tree was held in the hall on Christmas night under the auspices of the Sunday School. A varied programme of music, recitations, drills and dialogues was presented by the children, interspersed with the orchestra by the young people, and much credit is due to Miss Bernice Tobico and Miss Mary Stinson, who devoted much time to train the children to perform their various parts so efficiently, even the smallest excelling themselves. The programme was carried out so perfect that it proved to exceed all previous concerts of its kind. Miss Edna Harris of Barrie, a former school teacher of this reserve, did not forget the children, who sent 150 Christmas stockings filled with assorted candies, which was greatly relished by the children.

Mr. Allen Taylor acted as chairman, who with his witty remarks set the children and audience in good humor and created much merriment.

The Superintendent, A. McCue, gave the children a word picture of the past, when Christmas was unknown to the Indian when they dominated the whole country, wandering here and there with his birch-bark canoe, living in tepees, and gradually brought their attention to the present with all the prestige of modern advantages. Mr. McCue urged the children to adopt and utilize the best privileges that surrounds them and qualify themselves for future usefulness.

OMEMEE STAGE TALENT ACTIVE

Produced Annual Play Under Direction of Rev. E. W. and Mrs. Rowland.

OMEMEE, Dec. 31.—The patrons of the Christmas night entertainment, which is an annual event, put on by L.O.L. 113, were loud in their praises of the splendid comedy drama entitled "Willowdale" and choruses put on by the young people of the Methodist Church in their behalf under the direction of Rev. E. W. and Mrs. Rowland, assisted by Miss L. Parsons. In fancy one was carried to a little country village called Willowdale where the general store and post office was the meeting place for villagers in general. The proprietor, Joel Bassett (Cecil Kennedy), meek and much hen-pecked husband had much against his own inclinations, but at the command of his wife (Violet McBain) and the village lawyer, Joseph Godfrey (Gordon Bradley) discharged his assistant, Tom Skerett (Russel Brooks) who was accused of stealing from a registered letter, forty dollars. The plot against Tom had been framed by Lawyer Godfrey in order to destroy the good name of the young man and to turn the affections of his fiance, Mildred Bassot (Marion Rea), whom Godfrey alone knew to be the heiress to fifty thousand dollars, toward him.

Lem Hackett (Evie Cornell) an old school friends of Tom and Rosetta Gates (Genevieve Sandy), girl friends of Mildred, succeeded in frustrating Godfrey's plans by doing a little amateur detective work.

The wedding day is set for Lawyer Godfrey and Mildred. The guests are all assembled. The ceremony performed by Rev. Mr. Prosser (Max Sandy) reaches the point where Mildred is to respond when her words ring out clear and cold, "I will not." The plotting mother and the crest-fallen Godfrey are dumb with amazement until Mildred announces to the company that she is already a wife, having been married half an hour previously to Tom Skerrett by Mr. Posser. Other characters in the play were a quaint old lady named Miss Hazey who had become insane though the death of her husband and little son. The part was very cleverly portrayed by Miss Marion Carey.

Teddy Marsh as Simon Pinner, was a scream and his rendition of "The Photo of the Girl I Left Behind Me" elicited rounds of applause.

Oleandar "the little maid who would giggle even at a funeral" kept the audience smiling in sympathy at every appearance. This character could not have been in more capable hands than those of Miss Evelyn Rea. Mr. Dinsmore, the young school teacher and lover of Rosetta Gates was cleverly acted by Mr. Oral Grandy. The extra wedding guests were Mrs. Rowland, Miss Mary Lowe, Miss Muriel McGinness, and Miss Eva Race.

The wedding scene was most realistic and a solemn hush fell on the onlooker as they witnessed it. The wedding march was played by Mrs. Rowland.

During the evening, Mr. Ernest Bushnell, who has been travelling with the Adanac Male Quartette in the States, was heard to good advantage in two splendid solo selections.

A chorus composed of the Misses Mary Lowe, Marjorie Connell, Eva Race, Edna Morcombe, Winnifred Bradburn, Muriel McGinness, Katie Weir, Helen Johnson, Florence Rutherford and Reta Kennedy, rendered three snappy choruses the first being, "Shall I Have It Bobbed Or Shingled". Miss Lowe sang the first verse in front of the curtain which then arose disclosing the chorus grouped around a barber chair in which sat one young lady, with curls about to be shorn by the barber in charge. The second chorus was the "Georgian Lullaby" when dainty little Betty Deyell was lulled to sleep by the sweet tones of the lullaby as rendered by the songsters. "Too Many Girls," was the closing chorus, the verse being rendered in good voice by Mr. E. Bushnell who was soon surrounded by a bevy of beautiful girls who came in on a dainty step in time to the music, each girl carrying a gaily colored swagger stick and singing, the following catchy chorus.

Too many girls! The thing's impossible
There can't be too many girls
There may be too many flowers and beautiful things in this world of ours
Too many girls! Why don't they tells us
The sea has too many pearls
The daily mail as a paper is a good 'un
But there can't be too many plums inside a puddin'
And there can't be, can't be, absolutely ca't be Too many beautiful girls.

Christ Church Sunday School held their annual Christmas tree on Dec. 23rd, 1924. A splendid programme was well rendered by the children, many of whom appeared in public for the first time. The rector, Rev. A. T. Weir, in his address, spoke in glowing terms of the work accomplished in the Sunday School during the year, the condition now being the best for many years. The enrolment has increased very much and the regular attendance is greatly improved. Six members have attended every Sunday, and thirty-three have attended 85 per cent of the Sundays which is a splendid record for a small school.

At the close of the programme Santa Claus arrived and in a genial manner distributed one hundred and fifty bags of candies and nuts and about one hundred gifts to the younger members of the Sunday School and the little ones of the congregation who are not old enough to attend Sunday School. Gifts were exchanged between scholars and teachers and the rector was also the recipient of a handsome present. A much appreciated gift to the Sunday School was a $10 cheque from the Women's Guild.

NEW YORK CHURCH SHELTERS JOBLESS

As the mercury did a nose dive in New York, Urbain Ledoux, better known as "Mr. Zero," led 200 of the city's jobless and homeless to the Camp Memorial Congregational Church, where they camped for the night. The trustees of the church who had decided on closing it due to a dwindling congregation are now expected to revise their decision. The photo shows some of the men sleeping in the pews.

WHEN EAST MET WEST LONG AGO

The Mediterranean Laws — Our Great Debt to the Arab.

RISE IN CIVILIZATION.

"It is worth while noting," says Marion I. Newbigin, D.Sc., in "The Mediterranean Lands" (Christophers), that when we speak of the East, with or without the addition of the adjectives Near and Far, the intention is, in part at least, to emphasise the possible similarity of crops, and thus of modes of life."

The book is an introductory study in human and historical geography. The writer continues:—

The fact that water could be obtained in abundance in the river valley areas (of the East), and applied to crops as they required it, made life much easier there than in the Mediterranean lands, where irrigation is rarely possible, and the natural rainfall is scanty or entirely absent in the summer, and often not plentiful at any season.

Great advances thus took place earlier along the banks of the great rivers than immediately round the shores of the Mediterranean.

Indeed, the rise of Mediterranean civilisation depended on the fact that the peoples concerned were able to borrow much from those who had had the advantage of an earlier start.

Thus almost all the plants they cultivate reached them in an improved form; their implements, including the plough, their domesticated animals, their knowledge of methods of tillage were, in the European part of the Mediterranean at least, for the most part derived and not original.

This is the reason why we must begin our study of man's progress within Mediterranean Lands by giving some accounts of the regions from which he borrowed.

Egypt and Tigris.

These were especially the Marignal Lands of Egypt and of the Tigris-Euphrates area. . . . Because both Egypt and Mesopotamia lie quite near to the Mediterranean Lands, intercourse has always been easy.

The importance of the nearness of the Marginal Lands may be stbe realised by contrasting their contribution with that of the Far-Eastern Lands.

Though it is generally believed that the civilisation of China is derived and not original, in the sense that the people who first occupied the valleys and plains of that country had made considerable advances before their arrival, yet there can be no doubt that at historically a very early date much was earnt there.

During the course of the ages also, the Mediterranean folk got much both from India and from China. But the vast stretch of waste land, mountain, and desert, which separates the western area of winter rainfall from the eastern one with a heavy summer fall, made transference either of knowledge or of useful plants and animals a slow and difficult process.

Even rice, which we are apt to think of as characteristic of both the Tigris-Euphrates and the Nile Valley, did not reach the former till more than two thousand years after its cultivation had been practised in China, that is not till some time before 400 B.C., and was much later in reaching Egypt.

Our Debt to the Arabs.

So far as the Mediterranean proper is concerned, it may be said, broadly, that it was the Arabs, at the period of their great movements, who introduced some of the more valuable crops of monsoon lands to the western world. This is true of rice, sugar cane, cotton and oranges, all plants demanding both water and heat simultaneously.

Summing up, then, we may say that the Marginal Lands were of great importance in the history of Mediterranean civilisation, first, because they were easily accessible from the Mediterranean, and, second, because they had a climate of broadly similar type, with the added advantage of greater supplies of available water.

But in the very early days that floodwater could not be taken full advantage of, so that the plants first cultivated were probably of a water-economising character, well suited for direct transference to the Mediterranean area.

As irrigationwas more and more made use of, and capital accumulated, experimentation could be carried on on a great scale. The results of these experiments were transmitted to the European peoples.

The question whether civilisation arose first in the Euphrates valley or in that of the Nile is not one which can be definitely answered meantime. But there can be no doubt that for our purpose the former area is the more interesting.

PORCUPINE, NOT BEAR.

SARANAC LAKE, N. Y., Dec. 31.—(United Press).—A cattle buyer recently came into the hamlet of Mountain View with teeth chattering and a tale of a big bear he had seen in the barn of an abandoned farm. The local Daniel Boones immediately unlimbered their artillery and hastened to the barn, with high hopes of bear skin rugs and bear steaks. All they found was an extra large porcupine asleep on a rafter.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

NEW YEAR GIFT FROM FOX RANCH

Patte and Wolff Foxes, Ltd., Declare First Dividend to Shareholders.

DIRECTORS MEET

At a meeting of the Directors of Patte and Wolff Foxes Limited yesterday afternoon an initial dividend of ten per cent was declared. While the net earnings will be in the neighborhood of twenty-five per cent still the Directors feel that the best interests of the shareholders of the company will be served by paying only this amount and building up a good reserve for improvements and extensions.

This occasion marks the conclusion of the first year of the company's existence, and it is recognized by the Directors and shareholders that the optimism of the organizers was fully justified. Starting with the best equipment and stock as dictated by their previous extensive experience ,the founders of the ranch have gone steadily ahead to this most successful conclusion of the year's activities.

As a part of their extension programme, they have added 18 large breeding pens to the original installation of 44 to care for the natural increase in stock and the additions of several pairs to their foundation stock.

Part of the building programme under discussion for next year is the adding of sixteen more breeding pens and specially constructed large runways, 300 feet long by 50 feet wide, for the special conditioning of pups and high grade animals for show purposes.

Feasibility Shown.

The success of the enterprise of raising silver foxes this year demonstrates fully the foresight of the men who engaged primarily in the propect and discredits the opinions of some who maintained that the climate, topography, and general conditions in this part of the country are unsuited to the business. The quality of Fur, the genuine health of the animals and the small per cent of losses through death has proved this to an exceptional degree. The ranch, situated near Chemong in densely wooded land is ideal from the fox rancher's point of view. It was visited last summer by hundreds of citizens and visitors, who were delighted with the experience.

VIENNA BARS JAZZ

City Council Forbids Jazz Bands in All Dance Schools.

BERLIN, Dec. 31.—Vienna, queen city of women, wine, song and dance, has declared open war on jazz, the city council passing an ordinance forbidding jazz bands in all dance schools.

Since the days of Johann Strauss, the great composer, known as the "waltz king," the Austrian capital was the city of the dreamy waltz, and later the city of the beautiful operettas, motivated largely in waltz strains and, and whose king, is Frank Lehar, of "The Merry Widow" fame.

The modern fox trot, tango and one-step have almost driven out the waltz. Vienna has more dance schools than any city of its size and more than any continental city.

Jazz bands, imported from America, with their "tom tom music," have gotten on the nerves of the Viennese. The dancing teachers held a conference and asked the city council to forbid jazz music in dance schools, as an opening of their offensive against jazz.

COLLEGE GRADUATES HAVE FEW CHILDREN

Persons of Social Position Committing Race Suicide.

CHICAGO, Dec. 31. — College graduates and persons of higher incomes and better social position are committing race suicide, Prof. Warden Thompson, of Miami University, declared here at the annual meeting of the United States Statistical Association.

Thompson said that his investigation among some women's college alumnae showed 20 deaths occur to 11 births.

The average number of children born to Vassar alumnae has never exceeded 1.5, he said.

A study at the University of Wisconsin indicates the same trend. A study of the families from which college students come indicate that twice as many children appear in the second generation as in the third.

"Protestants are not so prolific as the Roman Catholics. The latter have families about 27 per cent. larger than the former.

"The improvement of the standard of living has decreased the birth rate, particularly among families with good incomes."

The super-engine, which is under construction at his Highland Park plant, will weigh 340 tons and will have sixteen 250 horse power motors. It will be capable of hauling a train of 150 loaded cars, Ford Engineers say.

Voice Of The People

A. A. McIntyre writes the Examiner on his attitude on the Hunter Street Bridge, referred to at last night's public meeting, by Mr. Bradburn:

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir: At last night's public meeting, which I was unable to attend, owing to a previous engagement, Mr. W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P., candidate for Utilities Commission, opposing me, made the statement that I was preaching economy but had not practiced it when a member of the City Council, and that when the Hunter street bridge was built it cost $600,000, when it should only have cost $300,000.

I took that stand at the time the Hunter street bridge was being first considered, and the resolution printed below, which is a copy of the minutes of the City Council of June 2nd, 1919, goes to show that I moved a resolution, which, if carried, would have secured for the city a price of $251,639.35, and a saving to the city of about $350,000, on the figures quoted by Mr. Bradburn. Mr. Conroy's tender was accompanied by a bond from the Royal Bank, Peterborough, for $50,000, guaranteeing the fulfillment of the contract:

The following is an extract from the minutes of the a meeting of the Council of the City of Peterborough, held on June 2nd, 1919:

"Moved by Ald. McIntyre, seconded by Ald. Garside:

"That the lowest tender for the construction of the Hunter street bridge, that of Ed. Conroy, be accepted, namely, his lump sum tender amounting to $251,639.35, and that an agreement be prepared for this purpose, and a bylaw to authorize its execution."

This resolution was lost.

S. R. ARMSTRONG, City Clerk.

The resolution giving the contract to the Russell-Townsend Company,on a cost-plus basis, was opposed by me at the meeting of July 7th, which was supported by six aldermen and opposed by myself and four others.

The following is a copy of an extract from the minutes of a meeting of the Council of the City of Peterborough, held on July 7th, 1919:

"Moved by ——— seconded by ———

"That the contract for the construction of the Hunter street bridge be awarded to the Russell-Townsend Company on their tender of cost plus a fixed sum of $29,500.00,their estimate of $228,600.00 as the cost of the bridge, including their fee, and their guarantee of the arch over the river, with the privilege to the city to substitute a steel span for the concrete span over the river if the Council so desires, in which case the company's fee shall be reduced in proportion to the amount of the work of which they will be relieved."

"The motion carried on the following division:

"Yeas: Six.

"Nays: Five," (of which A. A. McIntyre was one.

S. R. ARMSTRONG, City Clerk.

Mr. McIntyre has brought into The Examiner office copies of the two resolutions above referred to, showing the names of those who voted Yea and Nay, and at his request the names, other than his own, are omitted.

With Mr. Bradburn's experience in Council, he should have known better than to have made the statements about the Hunter street bridge where they reflected on me. I always thought he was posted on municipal affairs, but find he does not know as much as I gave him credit for; or if he did know he was very unjust to me in my actions on the Hunter street bridge.

If I am elected to the position of Utilities Commissioner I will give you the best of my ability, and of my experience as an Alderman, and the above should settle in the minds of all the electors that I have been careful of your finances in the past, and would continue to do so in the future.

Yours faithfully,

A. A. McINTYRE.

CORRIGAN

Something made him turn toward Fellowes. The assistant had the Black Witch covered with his automatic and was within an ace of pulling the trigger. Corrigan lunged sideways and got possession of the weapon. Fellowes, white to the lips, tried to snatch it back.

"No, you don't, son," whispered Corrigan grimly. "It's my funeral, and I can conduct it how I like!"

Softly as he had spoken, it was not soft enough. He clapped his eye to the hole just in time to see the Black Witch rise to her feet. Clutching the gorgeously hued sarong over her breasts, she pointed majestically to the dividing wall.

"Brothers of the Seven Stars," she hissed, "my magic tells me there are spies—there." Her dark eyes seemed to flash fire, blazing with the fury of a panther. "Kill! Kill!"

He caught the beginning of a wild stampede, heard the clashing of weapons that seemed to spring from nowhere. He seized Fellowes by the arm and forced him through the doorway. Together they sprang to the ground and raced for dear life into the jungle.

By the wire boundary of Corrigan's estate they paused for breath.

"Lord!" gasped the planter, holding his side. "I'm damn glad we came. As I told you this morning—the devil you know——"

"Ran like rabbits," broke in the assistant. "Armed to the blessed teeth, too! That's what gets my goat! Why didn't you let me pick her off. We'll never have a chance like that again!"

The two men sat long over the last drink before turning in.

"I mean to get 'em both—red-handed," declared Corrigan suddenly.

"But, my dear fellow——" protested Fellowes. "The risks are far too great. She's as cunning as the devil himself; the methods of an unscrupulous Chinese cook are notorious and varied. You haven't the least conception how the blow will fall. Apart from the possibilities of dispatching you in your sleep, there are a hundred and ther varieties known to these people. There's powdered glass, for example and split bamboo!"

Corrigan did not appear to be listening.

"Supposing he were to succeed," he pursued calmly. "D'you think she'd accept his word for it?"

Fellowes shook his head.

"Not for one moment. She'd want to see for herself."

The assistant's eyes never for a single moment left Corrigan's face.

"Fellowes," said the planter suddenly, "you're losing your nerve. You're even doubting me. Just get this into your head, once and for all. I'm coming through this affair as I've sailed through every other since you've known me. Things have been quiet lately, and you've learned to forget that Corrigan against a Tamil girl and a Chinese confederate: Corrigan, moreover, th his eyes open!" He let one huge rest on the other's forearm. "Now, listen to me. I'm going back tomorrow—first thing. Don't leave this house after sundown, unless you hear from me."

A curious light came into his eyes and he tapped the table with the nail of his forefinger to emphasize each word. "If for any reason you should decide to come to my place, take the disused path through the trees, enter by the back and go straight to my room. Above all, touch nothing. Leave everything just as you find it—and wait—in the dark. Think what you like, but leave everything in its place. And don't forget your pistol."

He rose to his feet and crossed the veranda deliberately, making for the door of his room. Fellowes watched him, open-mouthed.

"But——!" he gasped uncomprehending.

"Good night, old son," said Corrigan cheerily, and stepped in, closing the door after him.

* * * * *

At eight on the following evening Watchman No. 4—a Ghurka with face as expressionless as an idol—stood framed in the doorway of Fellowes' living-room. He saluted respectfully.

"What is it?" demanded the first assistant.

"The Tuan-Besar is dead," he said simply.

Fellowes sprang to his feet, his brain reeling.

"Good God!" he muttered, hoarsely. He plunged for the veranda, then, remembering something, went to a drawer and drew out his automatic.

He staggered on to the flat ground between the rubber and the house, and crept in by the back way, in strict obedience to the planter's spoken word. There was a light in the living-room.

The table was still covered with a white cloth. An almost untouched plate of curry stood in Corrigan's place. He saw a half empty bottle, an overturned glass. Doubled up on the boarded floor lay the motionless form of the great planter. His fists were clenched, his head resting on one arm. His face was turned to the floor. His serviette was crumpled beneath him—and his chair had tipped over as he fell.

As he stood there, hesitant, a slight sound from the outer darkness broke upon his ears. He listened intently. It came again—from the direction of the veranda. He raised his eyes to the open doorway and they fell upon the crouching form of the villainous cook boy—Lip-See.

A pause!—a faint whispering, and then—the Black Witch, her arms folded, came swiftly in on her bare toes. The gold at her neck, her wrists and ankles, flashed in the lamp light. There was a strange glint in her dark eyes; her whole expression was one of triumphant scorn. Lip-Sec, watching her with undisguised admiration, leaned against the partition. The foot of the Black Witch poised for a moment over Corrigan's neck. Fellowes felt in his pocket. Flesh and blood could not tolerate that!

And then—one great hand shot upward and closed on a black ankle. The Black Witch fell screaming to the floor, her hands to her ears. Corrigan, leaning on one elbow, had the cook boy covered!

Fellowes wrenched open the intervening door and burst into the living-room, laughing hysterically.

"Love and curry," said Corrigan, grinning, "don't go well together! If I hadn't been ready for it, I believe I should have spootted something from the way he piled on the noxious ingredients!" He rose painfully. "I've been in that same position for roughly two hours," he continued. "But wasn't it worth it, old son?" He turned fiercely on the grovelling girl. "Black Witch," he cried, contemptuously; "presently the vultures will peck out your eyes. Who were the fools in the House of the Seven Stars who did not tell you that the magic of the Tuan-Besar Corrigan is greater than all other magic?"

Fellowes picked up a coil of stout rope from one corner.

HASTINGS, Dec. 31.—Rev. J. H. Hess becomes reeve of Hastings by acclamation. The councillors who qualified follow: R. C. Doxsee, Fred Dodd, Neil Macdonald and Samuel Hatheriy. All four were elected by acclamation.

Shot Large Eagle.

A large eagle was shot on the south side of the river just below the village by Mr. Aubrey Clapper. It was first noticed hovering in the air by the workers of the Hastings Tanning Company. Aubrey, going home, procured a gun and started off across the bridge, and reaching the place where the bird was resting in a tree top. Just as the bird was about to take flight a shot wounded it enough to cause it to fall. A second shot was fired which brought it to the ground. It still showing signs of life he instantly threw himself on it, gripping it by the neck and holding it in this position for some time. Thinking it dead he started homeward with his game but suddenly the bird regained its senses, using force enough to throw its captor a few times around. By this time other help had crossed the river in a boat and managed to keep hold of the bird. The eagle is thought to be a species of the golden eagle family. It weighed fourteen pound and from the tip of tail to tip of back measured thirty-six inches. The spread of the wings measured eighty-nine and three-quarter inches.

Mr. Clapper intends having it mounted.

ARE COUNTY COUNCIL MINUTES CORRECT? MR. ARMSTRONG ASKS

Indian River Critic of Recent Replies to County Clerk Elliott—Suggests That Norwood Road Was Not Decided Upon by Provincial Engineer.

INDIAN RIVER, Dec. 30.—Who Did the County Council and Suburban Commission issue distorted and misleading statements?

In the County Clerk's reply to my last letter, he claims he is giving correct copies of statements in the minutes. It is not very important whether the statements are correct copies of the minutes, but it is important to know whether the minutes themselves are correct. We will discuss this as we go along.

Mr. Elliott says in Friday's "Examiner" that the Norwood Road was approved by the Department. He does not tell that this approval was obtained before the Department decided to cut out parallel roads, and only then by mis-representing the facts as to the volume of traffic and the city's attitude toward this road.

He says that the city has paid, but he does not tell that the County has no option but to hand this money back, if the Department does not give its approval to the job which it has not yet done, and is not likely to. He says that the work done on this road in 1923 cost $8,190.70. The chairman of the Commission told on the platform at Keene that the work on a little over one mile cost $9,400, while the Auditor's report shows the work to has cost $10,800.

Which was right?

He would lead one to believe that Mr. Muir had given a decision for the Department that they favored the North Road as the leading highway. Mr. Muir flatly denies that he ever made a statement in Peterboro from which such a conclusion could be drawn. This will be referred to later.

Alderman Morrison is reported in Examiner to have said at the nomination that the engineer advised that the North Road was the right road to build. There are but three Government engineers who have to do with those roads; Mr. Muir, Chief Engineer of Highways for the Province, Mr. McVicar and Mr. Smythe, District Engineers. All these three deny that they ever advised the North Road as a leading road.

Who was the engineer?

The Suburban Commission have freely told that they took a Government engineer over both roads during the past summer and that he condemned the South Road, and commended the work done on the North Road. The Department flatly deny this statement, and say that neither this past summer or at any other times have any of their engineers been over the place that we want; the South Road.

Any distortion here?

Coming back to Mr. Muir's decision, Mr. Elliott reports him as saying.

"The old Norwood Road is, in the opinion of the Minister, the proper road for heavy expenditure on a road running east from Peterboro. The North Road or old Norwood Road, Mr. Anderson."

After consulting a number of people who heard what was said, the following is gathered:

Mr. Muir did use the words credited to him, but not in the sense reported. He was not discussing the Norwood Road at all at this time, but another subject altogether, and to make his point clear, he used the Norwood Road as an illustration. He was not giving a decision but an illustration. The clerk then evidently picked part of a sentence here and there from his illustration, pieced them together, and then broadcasted them as a decision of the Department. Was this a faked decision and did the Council go ahead and spend over $6,000 of the people's money on the strength of a faked decision before they were suddenly stopped, leaving the work in an unfinished condition.

A Frank Statement is Wanted

What stopped them?

Here is the full story, as gathered: On February 8th, 1924, Mr. Muir, Chief Engineer for the Province, and Mr. McVicar, District Engineer, came to Peterboro to meet the County Road Committee, to ask the to try and shorten up the mileage of county roads from about 350 to about 160 miles. Both gentlemen stressed the point that where two roads ran parallel to each other, one of them must be cut out as a leading highway. As there are a number of such roads in the county, the question then arose how it was to be decided which was to be left on. Mr. Muir said the policy of the Department was to look back over a series of years, say ten years, and when they found a road which was drawing the traffic away from other roads, a road which the people were gradually choosing, that road in the opinion of the Minister is the proper road for the heavy expenditure of money.

For instance there are a number of roads coming from the east into Peterboro, but the road running through the village of Norwood has been gradually taking the traffic away from the roads on either side (the Hastings and Boundary Roads). The traffic comes up to the Sixth Line of Otonabee, then turns north to the Norwood Road, and into the city. Then looking at the deputy reeve, he said: "The North or old Norwood Road, Mr. Anderson."

Now, his argument was sound and based on reason, while his illustration was based on information from people who are supposed to know the local conditions. His information? The right place is the Suburban Commission, the County Council, and especially the Clerk. These are all paid to funish reliable information. We have the records of the kind of stuff they sent. On Page 180 of minutes of the County Council of 1924 we find the following resolution:

Moved by J. A. Middleton, Reeve of Smith, seconded by E. Corkery, Reeve of Ennismore, that the Department of Highways be again solicited to designate the North Road a Provincial County Highway . . . . . giving among other reasons why the change should be made "that on this road 25 vehicles travel to one on any other road leading to the city from the east."

Let us look at this. The block road leads into the city from the east. On the block road a traffic census was taken in August. From two o'clock until ten o'clock one afternoon, the enumerator says there were over 300 vehicles passed. Multiply this by 25 and you get 7,500 in eight hours, or 937 rigs every hour or 12¼ every minute, or one about every five seconds.

This motion was carried and later approved as a correct report of the proceedings of the County Council.

We also have records of the information furnished by the Suburban Commission and the County Clerk. They state that the Keene road and the North Norwood Road accommodate 98 per cent of all traffic originating in the east. There are three roads lying between those two, and it is fair to assume that each of them would take about the same amount of the two per cent, that is left. That is 2--3 of one per cent. for each road. I am sorry that I have not the official figures of the census, but we know that there are days when the traffic is well over 100 on the block road, east of where the Keene road joins it. Then of 100 is 2-3 of one per cent. one per cent must be 150. That, multiplied by 98, gives 14,700 rigs on the two roads per day, or 7,350 on each road.

Can we wonder that the Department said that the bulk of the traffic went north at Graham's Corner from choice, when they were fed up on that kind of food. But the Department now knows, as they have been investigating all summer, having taken two census on this road, that as soon as there comes enough snow and frost to make a road, that the great bulk of the traffic does not turn north, but goes straight over Graham's Hill, from choice, going around O'Brien Hill through people's fields, and when spring comes traffic then again turns north, not from choice, but from necessity, as there is not any summer road unless by a detour to the south. This detour on the block road is one that we don't like.

Give us a summer road around O'Brien's Hill, and one is quite safe in making the prediction that grass will soon be growing on the road where the Suburban Commission is spending so much money.

—SAMUEL ARMSTRONG.

PLANS OF ASPIRING ALDERMEN

eliminate where I could eliminate and save your money.

I stand before you as a citizen who has his all staked in the city.

If you want to put in somebody who's not a scared to stand his ground and fight for your interests, vote for Tuggey. My name is Tuggey and it will be the thirteenth on the ballot. I will try to serve you faithfully and honestly."

Thomas E. Sargent said his ideas entering municipal politics were to give a sane and sober thought to the matters of civic business to advance steadily and surely along the line of progress for this fair city. "We are not looking for a boom, but steady progress. The people are crying against the excessive taxation and against the aldermen involving them in further expenditures. This comes from almost every sane citizen and they are asking for a breathing spell."

Mr. Sargent advocated fall work to help out of work citizens.

The Council should go particularly careful in settling large issues and should view them from all angles. Personally he would give all matters their due thought and a sober second consideration.

The second idea he had was to take into consideration the principles of right. The Council of Women is looking for men who will stand for moral right as well as administrative honesty.

On these two grounds he appeals for the support of the citizens.

Knocks Power Inquiry.

Wilbert J. Hancock said he would not ask the citizens to look too far back if he were like some of the older councillors who are seeking re-election, in view of the increasing tax rate during the past ten years.

Referring to the power inquiry, Mr. Hancock said he did not think it advisable to prosecute the affair if the city solicitor is unable to carry on the work himself. Nothing has come of any other investigation in Peterborough and an expense of $8,000 or $12,000 will get the city nowhere.

The capital expenditure of the city—sidewalks, sewers and so on—must be curtailed. The taxes for these are no light thing.

Attacking the Dustless Sweeper, Mr. Hancock said "I don't believe it is any good or ever will be. It is $15,000 of your good money squandered. You had to borrow the money, and the debentures of the City of Peterborough are a first mortgage on your property. I pay $157 taxes. This sweeper business cost $15,000 and will cost $4,000 a year to operate. That makes $5,000 a year. That would hire such men as we have had on the streets whom we will have to support this winter. Still we have to have 8 or 12 men on the streets following the sweeper.'

Changing his tactics as Mayor Turner entered, the speaker said he did not attack the sweeper so much but he did not think the time opportune to try experiments with the people's money.

The sweeper is a nuisance on the street, waking people up at 3 or 4 o'clock in the morning. Then they lie awake the rest of the morning thinking of the tax bills coming due.

The giving of grants has grown absurd, he said. "Perhaps most of the Council belong to one or more of the societies that apply for help. I will not be satisfied if I am elected unless the societies show that the grant will be a financial benefit to the city."

Mr. Hancock declared in favor of all public work being done by city men under city engineers. In soliciting votes he said he is not held by any strings.

Proud Of Utilities.

W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P. candidate for re-election to the Utilities Commission, where he has sat three years, outlined his work. "We have two Utilities of which we have reason to be proud," he said, predicting a growth in the city in the next few years, when the vacant lots which are now served by water mains will produce a revenue.

"The gentleman who is opposing me, ex-Mayor McIntyre, states that his policy is one of economy.

Mr. McIntyre was in the City Council at the time Hunter street bridge was constructed. It could have been built for $300,000, but it took $600,000 and over. He didn't practice economy then but today he is going to start out to preach it. You had better be careful in selecing your commissioner for the next three years.

Mr. McIntyre says he will investigate the water powers around Peterborough. In 1923 we investigated and found that dame 4 and 5 would cost $35.30—a horsepower to develop. To-day we are paying $22 a horse power by purchasing from Hydro.

A further investigation was made by engineers acting for a body of which most of the business men are members and it was reported that the development of dams 4 and 5 would cost $32 per horse power."

Full Investigation.

"I am not going to say a great deal about what will take place on January 26. The matter is before the courts.

Seeing that the Council has gone into the thing I would ask them to go into it thoroughly and leave no stone unturned to uncover all facts."

Mr. Bradburn referred back to the 75 horse power figure in the Campbell Flour Mills accounts and said that this year the minimum figure has been 58 horse power, the maximum 439 and the medium 161. In four years, Mr. Bradburn suggested, some City Council may ask an investigation into the 58 horse power.

"You are getting your power from the Hydro Electric Power Commission practically at cost, and you have a more favorable contract than probably any other municipality in Central Ontario."

Referring to suggestions by Mr. McIntyre that he should be satisfied with his position at Toronto, Mr. Bradburn said this will be of great benefit to him as a commissioner and to the city in the discussion of the taking over of the street railway and gas works.

Urges Big Vote.

Alderman J. O. Fife, chairman of the Property Committee spoke in a happy fashion of his candidature and expressed the hope that the women electors would shame the men by turning out to vote on Thursday.

"I have given my best during the past two years," he said. "There is no one more anxious to see men of vision elected to these chairs than I am. We need such men to occupy these chairs.

We must have a council that will weigh all matters carefully in the best interests of the citizens. I will consider all matters above board, fairly and fully before giving my decision. I have always in my mind that I am here as your servant."

Mr. Fife regretted that his plan to build a rest room for women was cut out to satisfy some new candidates whose only thought was lower taxation.

The Dean of the Council.

Alderman Joseph Crowe, chairman of the Legal and Reception Committee, said he hoped the women having got the vote, would not prove so unenthusiastic about it as the men did. After fighting for ages to obtain a share in government men forgot the struggle and now fail to register their franchise.

"Men ought to know pretty well how to use their votes without being canvassed,' the dean of the council opined.

"There is suspicion that some may be disqualified I hope that will be cleared away to some extent. If the candidates who are under that cloud would announce how they intend to get around the disqualification we would know where we are.

If they are elected and I am not I will not say a word, for I would be glad to see them sit in council, for they are really good men.

Fire Department.

"I have been instrumental in bringing the Fire Department to its present high efficiency. We have one of the best at present which its record goes to show. The total loss this year is about $28,000. I was chairman when the council come to the conclusion that something had to be done, as it was not giving the service that was required, so by constant effort, and hard work, and real support of my colleagues, we were successful in bringing the department to the state it is in to-day, at a much less cost to the city.

The decipline, the equipment, and the men are of very best, and the results show for themselves.

I take some of the credit only.

"Policed To Death."

I was the first to take up the question of an elective police commission and was not succeessful in having that method adopted, though many other cities sent delegations to wait on the legislature which was opposed to giving us that legislation

However, we kept after legislature year after year, until finally we got legislation giving us control of their appropriation. But even then the commission would not allow us that privilege, until at last this city alone made a test case of it and won. Now this is law for the whole Province, and many cities are taking advantage of it We had to do something, we were being policed to death, always adding more men at greater cost till we could stand it no longer. So we cut off $5,000 last year and we have never had less disturbances in our city's history than last year.

I am told that not one case was on trial at the Fall Assises from the city which never was the case before.

There is no reason, whatever, that we should have so many policemen. Take Belleville 12,000; Cobourg 4 to 5000; Port Hope the same size and on the front whose populations would be about the same as this city.

Those places combined have not the number of police we have and you could add Lindsay, 6000; Orillia 12000; Barrie 7000, and combine them all. Though with a population of upwards of 50,000 they have no more police than here. Surely that is convincing enough to any ordinary citizen that there was room for a change.

I am in favor of paving our streets by our own staff and employing our own men with the same results that are attained by other cities. We on the other hand have given the handsome profits into the pockets of the contractors, one of which amounted to in the vicinity of $9,000.

Those profits would very soon pay for a plant and the work would be of the best needing no guarantee, such as referred to so often, which in reality is worth nothing which is the case here at present. The 5-year guarantee is only a fake. They ignore it entirely

Taking this stand for city work done by the city men under the city engineer, Alderman Crowe cited the saving of $25,000 in the work of the outfall sewer.

Alderman Robert Morrison

Chairman of the Board of Works, said the point taken by Mr. Tuggey regarding sidewalks and sewers was not in order since all Peterborough sidewalks and sewers are built by the city through day labor, not by contract.

Hunter Street Bridge cropped up in Alderman Morrison's address when he said he was in the minority when it was built, but did his best to see it done right. It had been laid at the door of labor where it should not have been placed.

The sewage disposal plant should be done by day labor under the city engineer.

Defending the dustless sweeper, the speaker remarked that the street car passes the houses and people grew accustomed to it after a few days as they will to the sweeper.

The concern that manufactures the sweeper is in the city, employing at one time 70 men. The machine does good work and the $15,000 was well spent. The city is at a time now when sanitary conditions must be carried out. The streets are cleaner since the sweeper came, and the fine dust has disappeared. Everyone must admit the benefit of the sweeper.

Alderman Morrison said that if elected he will do his best in the city's interests, as he always has done.

No Increased Crime.

Alderman Michael J. Maher remarked that no great questions had come before the council during the past two years. He had done his best in all issues for the good of the people.

The present is an occasion for caution in asking new public works, in view of the condition of federal and provincial finances.

Alderman Maher said he had supported the trimming of the police estimates by $5,000 last year and this and crime is not any more rampant now than before.

The school question would be submitted to the people for their decision

Economy Football.

The City Council has only control over 26 cents of every dollar brought in by taxes and yet the question of economy is being made a football for everyone. It is drawing a herring across the trail to fool the electors.

"I don't think it is right to attack a member of the council who is not present—Mr. Meyers—on the power question. I am a strong supporter of public ownership, but from facts placed before the council and considered by me in common with my colleagues it appeare I that the step we took was necessary.

I was glad to hear Mr. Bradburn's sentiments and with him I hope that there will be no stone left unturned to solve the problem.

Regarding the changing of the election date Mr. Maher said that there would be considerable change necessitated in the tax rolls and in other ways. He could promise that he would give his best consideration o the matter when re-opened in council, were he re elected.

Mrs. Stevenson expressed her regret in the absence of other candidates, especially J. M. Greene and Roland Denne in view of the doubt she said surrounded their candidature.

"It doesn't seem quite right to juggle with the public," she declared.

Fred Gandy asked whether it is possible for these two candidates to take their places. He thought it due the citizens that an announcement should be made so that their votes might not be lost.

Mayor Turner said two members had been nominated and qualified for election in good faith. If elected Mr. Armstrong will have no hesitation in swearing them in when they will be councillors for 1925.

It is said the law states that a member of the Board of Education shall hand in his resignation ten days prior to nomination for the city council..

On the other hand it has been said that Peterborough has an act of its own providing for a special form of voting.

Whether that applies or not, if some citizen wishes to unseat them I suppose it could go before a judge who might order a new election.

These men say they were pressed into accepting the nomination and through not being acquainted with the law they made this technical error. If they are elected they will take their seats unless someone moves to unseat them, when other action will be taken.

His Worship expressed thanks for his election by acclamation and told of his work as Mayor.

"The matter of grants is perhaps not properly viewed," he remarked, "but the word "investments" should be applied to these things. These investments return interest in many ways from community work."

Whoever are elected will give him the support he needs, the Mayor said, and he requires the help of the citizens as well..

Expressing that spirit of optimism that has galvanized the council during his term of office, the Mayor predicted an increasing success and prosperity for the city in 1925, and sought to enlist the citizens in a united effort to this end.

Voting Date.

W. H. Howard expressed the hope that the change in voting date is not sought with the idea of having women dominate the poll. Men would not be able to vote on other than a holiday.

Mrs. Stevenson denied any desire to shut out men, but said the aim of the Council of Women is to serve all classes.

Mrs. Stevenson asked whether the city would be put to the expense of a new election in the event of the two seats being contested.

Mayor Turner replied that the Judge might instead order two lower candidates to move up into their places.

Alderman Maher said it is the people's duty to obey the law and expressed the opinion that if anyone is violating the law the ratepayers are entitled to know so that they may use their judgment. He asked that the Mayor obtain and publish the city solicitor's opinion, and His Worship agreed to consult Mr. Wearing.

UNDERCOATS.

Undercoats are worn under many of the new type of coats, giving the warmth that is necessary without the use of heavy, bulky materials.

BOY BABIES BORN WEAK

Scientist Says They Have Not the Strength of Girls.

CHICAGO, Dec. 31.—Boy babies have not the same chance of living as girl babies, they are the weaker sex, according to Prof. S. J. Holmes, zoologist of the University of California, speaking here today before the American Statistical Association.

"In the first year of life many more boys die than girls, the proportion of boy deaths being greater in the first month and gradually decreasing through the rest of the year. Studies made in places, periods and social strata where the infant death rate is low, show the ratio of boy deaths to girl deaths is high. As we go back in embryonic life this ratio steadily increases. The male apparently, is the weaker animal, at least at the start of life."

Boutonnieres of real flowers are worn on the shoulder of the evening frock by the smart Parisienne.

LOCAL LAWYERS DECLARE THAT J. M. GREENE AND ROLAND DENNE ARE ELIGIBLE TO HOLD OFFICE

Strickland Believes That Elections Are in Class by Themselves.

MR. HALL CONCURS.

Only Provision of Local Act is that Those Polling Highest Are Elected.

These are the opinions of J. F. Strickland and R. R. Hall, K. C., both holding that Messrs. Denne and Greene are entitled to take their seats for which they have been nominated, and explaining their grounds:

Dear Sir:

I have your letter of the 29th instant. In looking into this matter I find that 8 Edward VII, 1908, Chapter 104, the Legislature enacted that unless and until changed as hereinafter provided, the Council of the City of Peterborough shall continue to be composed of a mayor and twelve aldermen to be elected by general vote and beginning with the municipal election for the year 1909, the six aldermen who obtain the highest number of votes at the said election shall be elected and hold office for a term of two years, and the six aldermen who obtain the next highest number of votes shall be elected and hold office for a term of one year, and thereafter one-half of the aldermen composing the Council shall be elected each year.

This section of this Act goes on to provide for the method of election, and it further provides that the provisions of the Consolidated Municipal Act, 1903, and any amendments thereto or of the Municipal Act then in force, contrary to and inconsistent with this Act, shall not apply to the corporation of the City of Peterborough.

8 Edward VII., Chap. 104, Section 1, was amended by 10 Edward VII., Chap. 123, by adding certain subsections dealing with ties between candidates and filling vacancies, but makes no amendment as to qualification of candidates.

8 Edward VII., Chap. 104, is further amended by George V., 1918, Chap 75, which provides for the election of all members of the Council by general vote, after the repealing of the Bylaw providing for electing members by wards, and reducing the number of aldermen from Twelve to ten, but makes no further amendment.

8 Edward VII., Chap. 104, mentions no qualification for the office of alderman other than providing that the candidate be among the first six and as amended the first five elected by the largest number of votes and distinctly sets out that the provisions of the existing Municipal Act contrary and inconsistent with this Act shall not apply to the City of Peterborough.

In view of these facts I am of the opinion that you are eligible to take your seat in the City Council if you are among the five receiving the largest number of votes cast at the coming Municipal Election. I have submitted this opinion to R. R. Hall, K.C., and I enclose you herewith his view in connection with the matter.

Yours very truly,
J. F. STRICKLAND,
Roland Denne, Esq.,
City.

Dec. 29th, 1924.

J. F. Strickland, Esq.,
Barrister,
Peterborough, Ont.
Dear Mr. Strickland,

RE ROLAND DENNE.

I have carefully read your opinion contained in your letter of the 29th instant addressed to Mr. Denne in which you say that you are of the opinion that he is eligible to take his seat in the City Council if he is among the five receiving the largest number of votes cast at the coming election. After careful consideration I agree with the opinion that you have expressed.

Owing to the special Legislation that has been passed respecting the election of members to serve in the City Council, it places Peterborough in a unique position, because the only qualification required for a member to be duly elected for a term of two years, is that he shall be one of "the five aldermen who obtain the highest number of votes at the said election." And hence by reason of the Legislation you mention, section 53 of The Consolidated Municipal Act, 1922, does not apply.

Yours faithfully,
R. R. HALL.

EXAMINER BULLETIN

The Examiner will bulletin the municipal election results to-morrow night as they are received from the polling places, and will also bulletin the Peterborough-Aura Lee Hockey Game.

Telephone queries will be answered on both, the election returns starting shortly after five o'clock and the game about 8.45.

Make your enquiries brief and give others a chance.

Candidates Will Remain In Aldermanic Contest They Tell The Examiner

Probably J. M. Greene and Roland Denne are the least exercised citizens today regarding their eligibility for election to the Aldermanic Board, judging by their statements given The Examiner in which they re-affirm their intentions to contest the election and take their seats in the City Council.

Following the statements made last night at the public meeting under the auspices of the Local Council of Women and after the meeting closed, when one lady was heard to say she considered the other candidates "softies" if they allowed Messrs. Denne and Greene to "get away with it," these gentlemen and several solicitors were asked to explain the situation for the benefit of the public.

Mr. Denne declared his firm determination to contest the seat and to maintain his right to it in face of any opposition that may later develop. If elected, he will be sworn in by City Clerk, S. R. Armstrong, since he has complied with all the regulations demanded by the City Council, and will take his seat as a properly constituted Alderman for 1925 and 1926. Then, if any person desires to question his right to the position, Mr. Denne will defend any action brought to unseat him, believing that he has a good case in law and that if the people desire his representation they should be given it. That he has good grounds for his position is evidenced by the accompanying two opinions by prominent and competent lawyers—R. R. Hall, K.C., and J. F. Strickland.

Mr. Greene takes the same stand. He did not solicit in any way a nomination to the City Council, he said, and was only prevailed upon to accept through the importunities of several prominent citizens. "I am determined to contest the seat and if elected I will hold it until an order of the court ejects me or the Mayor tells me to leave. I believe according to the law I am entited to accept the office if it is conferred upon me by the people."

FLOODS INCREASE IN GREAT BRITAIN

Huge Bull Breaks Loose and Plunges Into the Thames River.

LONDON, Dec. 31.— (Canadian Press.)—Floods caused by the recent storms in Great Britain are still increasing in many parts of the country and gates have been renewed in the past day or two. Hundreds of telephone poles are down and in a number of towns mail is being delivered by a punt owing to the flooded condition of the streets. At Monmouth, occupants of numerous cottages are marooned by the flood and are being served with food by boats. Men on horseback are busy rescuing women and children from the flooded areas.

A huge Aberdeen bull being taken to the Kingston Fair, broke away and plunged into the Thames and was carried over a mile down stream by the fast current before it was able to scramble up on the bank. It then entered the grounds of a large residence and held the family indoors fourteen hours in spite of the efforts of the head of the family and servants who tried to "shoo" the bewildered animal away.

Eventually it made off on its own account.

Aldermen Discuss Issue Behind Closed Doors In Secret Session To-day

Following an attempt by several Aldermen last night to call a special meeting of the Council to debate the question of the eligibility of J. M. Green and Roland Denne to contest and hold the positions of Aldermen, a gathering was held in the City Clerk's office this morning. All the Aldermen were present, but Mayor J. J. Turner, having no notice of a meeting, was not in attendance, and the City Clerk took no part in the conference.

The meeting, which was unconstitutional in not being properly called, was closed to the press, and the participants refused to divulge any of the proceedings or the outcome. To convene a special meeting of the City Council, it is necessary for six Aldermen to apply in writing to the Mayor, who issues the order. This not having been done in this case, the meeting was not a meeting of Council, and no minutes were taken or would have been received, and any resolutions framed were abortive.

City Solicitor Joseph Wearing was called into conference, but his opinion on the issue was not made public. "No further along; nothing for publication; and no definite conclusion," were the replies Aldermen gave The Examiner.

It was evident from the demeanour of the members of the Council after the hour-long session that some Aldermen are seeking to disqualify Messrs. Greene and Denne.

Failing a declaration from this pseudo-meeting, held behind closed doors, the electors must make their own choice as to whether they will give the candidates an opportunity to demonstrate their right to the seats or whether they will ignore the names on the ballot.

SCIENTISTS HEAR TALK ON RESEARCH

New Form of Copper Conducts Electricity 13 Per Cent. Stronger.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—(Canadian Press).—Delegates to the convention of the American Association for the advancement of Science today heard further presentation of papers and discussion of latest scientific achievements. The subjects treated in scores of papers prepared for to-day's meetings of fifteen sections of the association ranged from improved copper for electricity conduction to hiccough bacteria.

The paper by Dr. W. P. Davey of the research laboratory of the General Electric Co., Ltd., told of the production of a new form of copper that conducts electricity with 13 per cent more efficiency than ordinary copper.

The discovery of bacteria that appears to be responsible of the present epidemic of hiccoughs was reported in a paper prepared for the medical scinece section by Dr. Edward C. Rosenow of Mayo foundation at Rochester, Minn. Bacteria are of a sort known as Streptococci and produced hiccoughs when injected into the brains of animals.

This decrease of about twelve million dollars, is attributed by the collector to lower duties on some things and the reduced sales tax.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—Although three of the Aldermen voted "Nay" when Mr. Armstrong, our City Clerk, asked for the "Ayes" and "Nays" at a meeting of the Council, held on December 8th, 1924, when the final vote was taken as to whether the Council should ask for an investigation in connection with the Campbell Flour Mill's power accounts, I have not yet lost faith in the people of Peterboro, men and women alike. I believe there are enough people in Peterboro who will stand behind the Mayor and the majority of the City Council and will back them up in their honest efforts to have an open, full and thorough investigation in connection with the Campbell Flour Mill's power accounts, as found in the books of the Peterboro Utilities Commission for the years 1919, 1920 and 1921.

The cost of the investigation will be a very small amount when compared with the amount, which I believe the Peterboro Utilities Commission has failed to collect from the Campbell Flour Mills Company during the years in question, and if we can avoid a repetition of what I believe to have been a gross error on the part of someone, it will be money well spent.

I consider it unnecessary to go into details in connection with the account in question at present, but I wish to draw the attention of the people of Peterboro to one or two outstanding facts. I would point out that in 1922, when the few machines were added to the mill proper, which Mr. Fisk, manager of the Peterboro Utilities Commission, told us in his evidence did not increase the capacity of the mill and therefore could not increase the amount of power required to any great extent, yet, the Peterboro Utilities Commission collected from this company $5,149.89 more for the year 1923 than they did for the year 1921; in other words, they collected nearly three times as much for the year 1923 as they did for any of the other three years in question. Can anyone explain why this difference? Again, the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario say they found that it took 250 H.P. to 270 H.P. to run the mill alone, while the books of the Utilities Commission show that the average maximum demand charged was less than one-third of this amount. Then again, while it required 312 H.P. to run all the machinery on a flat rate, the maximum demand dropped to 162 H.P. when the meter was installed.

I am drawing the attention of the citizens to these facts so that they will be in a position to decide for themselves whether the Council has adopted the right course when asking for a judicial investigation. To me, it is one of the vital, if not the most vital, issues in connection with this election and my honest opinion is that the voters would do well to make sure that the candidates for whom they cast their ballots are in favor of this investigation.

J. W. MEYERS.

To the Editor of the Examiner,

Dear Sir,

Mr. A. A. McIntyre in last evening's paper very foolishly tries to make out that I am trying to block an investigation into the local power privileges, when what I did was to point out to him the proper course for him to take for undertaking such an investigation, if one is wanted. The Utilities Commission has no power to spend money in the way he suggests. The City Council is the proper body. Mr. McIntyre should not have got peeved because I tried to set him on the track he said he wished to go.

He is wrong again when he says the Commission buys the power for the city. The City Council negotiated and completed an agreement for the power and is entitled to the whole credit for it. The Commission takes and pays for the power the Council bought. The Commission cannot do otherwise unless the Council makes a new contract and procured power otherwise. If Mr. McIntyre thinks he would like to try to have that done, he should as point ed out in my former letter, be endeavouring to again get a seat in the Council and not on the Commission where he will have no voice in the matter. If he got into the Council and wished to procure power elsewhere than from the Hydro Electric Power Commission he would have to ask the Commission to cancel the agreement now in force and which was made for thirty years. If the Commission did that it would annul an agreement under which the citizens have saved and are saving hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Yours truly,
W. H. Bradburn.

The Editor of The Examiner,

Sir,—I have been carefully perusing your papers of the past week and note the various promises of each aspirant for civic honors. Some of them are laughable and ridiculous, to say the least. Why, only a year ago this worthy city made one of the greatest mistakes, probably due to the limited number of candidates, in returning Aldermen who are and would be a detriment and a nuisance to any village, let alone a city that should be now on an equal footing with Ottawa and Hamilton, and at the very time I speak of, Peterboro was being made the laughing stock and by-word of the whole Province, for what reason. By our citizens going to the polls in a careless and indifferent manner, voting for Mr. So and So, because he shows them up, he is a man that will have the last word, viz., an agitator. In other words, a man who by his constant interference with matters that do not concern him and are of no importance, such a man destroys the efficiency and wastes the time of the whole Council, the majority of whom have the city's welfare at heart. Let the year 1925 be a banner year. Let every right-minded citizen turn out and use their franchise, according to their conscience. Listen not and pay not the slightest attention to fanatics' hobbies, such as, if I am elected I will get this municipal servant or that one. Surely the brains of an alderman have greater problems to solve than petty spite, of which this city has seen too much this last two years. Now is the time? Vote all new blood and give them a trial, and by doing so I think our city's interests will be well served. Cut out politics. Vote for a better and more prosperous Peterboro.—Yours truly,

STANLEY BANKS.

Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—This letter is being written to voice a protest against the present condition of things in our municipal elections and in our city council proceedings. The body of aldermen who during 1923-24 spent most of their valuable time in discussion concerning a useless investigation would be able to continue this discussion with quite as much efficiency in a private capacity. A few nights ago the council deadlocked on a motion which would have started a lawsuit with the Maple Leaf Milling Co. Because this company did not require as much power as the mill which Mr. Meyers operated. Mr. Meyers endeavored to force an investigation where none is necessary. An effort was made to employ another lawyer as well as the city solicitor, to enter on a lawsuit which would linger on for quite a length of time, would cost a large sum of money and would result, almost certainly in defeat for the city. According to last evening's paper Mr. McIntyre who is running for the Utilities Commission is also in favour of this probe. It is claimed that the city should recover the sum of $15,000 from the Maple Leaf Milling Co. But even if, as is quite unlikely, the city should recover a small sum of money, such a sum would be soon decreased by the costs of the undertaking and the payment of the lawyers. The advantages of the investigation are small in any case, the disadvantages are numerous.

What city wants is a council that will concern itself more particularly with the industrial development of our city. At the present time, manufacturing and business concerns are practicaly at a standstill.

The city has been in the habit of giving considerable concessions to such large industries as have desired them. In the Campbell Flour Mills we have an industry which is a credit to the city and which provided employment for a comparatively large number when running at full capacity. Is it the intention of the council to completely discourage honest industry by thus attempting to revive ancient history?

I, for one, would be in favor of putting in four new councillors who would throw out this probe, settle down to business and aim at a prosperous city rather than a contentious one. In the city at present, there is a great deal of unemployment. Houses are empty, people are moving away. The citizens do not desire a useless investigation. If put to a vote the probe would undoubtedly be defeated by an overwhelming majority.

This probe is Mr. Meyers' platform. But there are other candidates for councillorship who are less troubled about such unnecessary questions. We have before us sensible business men, such as Mr. Hay, Mr. Denne, Mr. Hancock and Mr. Spence. To my fellow citizens I wish to say that it is my firm conviction that such men as these could be trusted to forward the prosperity of the city rather than to involve it in lengthy lawsuits.

The new aspirants for the Board of Education ought also to be carefully considered. Mrs. Morris is in favor of putting the city further in debt to the extent of $500,000 for the purpose of a new school building. In depressed times such as these, ought the city to incur any more debt than necessary? Why not aim at a more prosperous city before we plunge once more into the impoverished treasury?

Trusting that every citizen will exercise his right of franchise tomorrow and hoping for a more prosperous and happy New Year, I am, yours truly,

E. A. STINSON.

COMMUNIST ACTIVITIES

THE HAGUE, Holland, Dec. 31. —Communist activities in the Dutch East Indies were indicated in a recent dispatch from Batavia, saying that the governor-general had been in consultation with the Council of State of the East Indies to concert measures to deal with Bolshevik agitation.

Colonial newspapers just arrived here throw some further light on the movement of the Sarekat Rajat, the East Indian communist organization, which seems to have branches throughout Holland's Indian archipelago.

According to the Batavia Nieusblad, these native communists strictly follow the Moscow programme. They conduct secret meetings, but seem to have met with but scant success in or near the bigger towns. Their latest plan seems to be to approach the Javanese individually in the small scattered villages, and so make propaganda for communism.

The newspaper notes that the Chinese, who form an important part of the trading population in these islands, are leaving Bolshevik propaganda severely alone.

A fascist movement has also sprung up in Java lately, colonial papers state.

I was also pleased to see a number of good citizens taking a lively interest in our city affairs by offering themselves for service. But what has transpired since, has given me some reason to reflect on what appears to be the formulating of plans with the object to upset what members of past councils and I were successful in carrying through, namely, re the police commission, etc., legislation which the citizens in general approved of.

I am still in favour of giving the people what they want and are willing to pay for. But, if elected, will not be bound by any ring or clique that takes advantage of or dominates the Council.

LATEST-FARM-NEWS — A Happy New Year — FARM-PROBLEMS

AGRICULTURE LEADS CANADA FROM SLOUGH OF HARD TIMES TO HILL OF BETTER BUSINESS

Steady Recovery Was the Big Feature in Events of 1924.

SPRING PROSPECTS

Farming and Industry Move Hand in Hand—Farms a Step Ahead.

Nineteen-twenty-four will be marked in Canadian business annals as a period of gradual though by no means sensational expansion. The year has been a failure if we judge by the early forecasts by certain professional business prophets. On the other hand, the doleful opinions of the pessimists have been utterly disqualified. The truth is midway between the two extremes. Commerce has been building gradually on a firm foundation which is infinitely better for the country than a business boom. Agriculture has had a singularly successful year, and undustry is becoming adjusted to the changed set of conditions which have to be faced. We have not achieved that degree of industrial expansion experienced by the United States, nor have we to fear the degree of reaction which seems invariably to succeed these rapid upward movement.

The actual contribution made by 1923 towards commercial and industrial progress must be taken into account in any attempt to characterize the present position of business and to judge of the probable trend of conditions during the coming months. The agricultural situation offers the greatest degree of encouragement. The rise in grain prices has brought about an adjustment between the farmer's position and that of the industrial and professional groups, which was a necessary prelude to business recovery. It is difficult to measure the full importance of this situation in a gradually rising grain market. The Bureau of Statistics estimates the value of the principal crops of Canada at $948,663,200, but this total represents the value to the farmer only, and is, therefore, much below the market value of the crop, which is really the pertinent figure in so far as business is concerned. Grades of wheat, incidentally, have been rather low. During November only about 54 per cent. of the Western inspections graded No. 3 Northern or better, as compared with 84¾ per cent. during the corresponding period last year.

Foreign Trade Revival.

The next most important contribution of the year was the revival in foreign trade. During the second half of the year there was a steady advance in exports and a limitation in the volume of goods bought from other countries. This places Canada in a favorable position with relation to the balance of trade and exchange. It is true, of course, that the decline in imports is due partly to the slackening in the purchase of raw materials for use in industry, as a result of industrial depression, but the present state of industry indicates that this is a temporary situation only.

In general, the year has been somewhat disappointing from the standpoint of the manufacturers. The burden of taxation has been such as to impede progress in this field particularly. Foreign purchasing power has been low, and Canadian manufacturers have found it difficult to compete with rivals in countries where the standard of living is lower and where a production lowers overhead costs. Notwithstanding these handicaps there has been a definite improvement during the past month. A number of manufacturing plants are speeding up nearer capacity. A leading corporation in one of the basic industries reports profits much larger than those of 1923, and is planning to double the 1924 output during the coming year. Stocks are low and the outlook in many of the industries is brighter than at any time since 1920.

In general business, indications of revival abound. Spring orders in dry goods are reported to be larger than those of last year. The clothing trades are doing a larger volume of business than for some months. Increased building is under way, and this has enlarged the volume of hardware business. There is much less unemployment than was forecast some months ago and a general strengthening of confidence has done much to pave the way for genuine business expansion.

Why Lorretta Morrissey Will Stay On The Farm

Prize Winner in a Recent Competition Appreciates Work of Pioneers.

I am quite sure almost everyone has some inclination to remain on the farm. When you read the Farm Page, about the old farming system, you will wonder how did those people ever live and support their families. But they lived, and in peace and happiness. They were all alike, and none of them felt they needed any more happiness or any more of the pleasures of life and of luxury. They never thought of it. I only wish the farmers were as happy now-a-days.

The only trouble with the farmers in the present age is they have not half the work to do as had these old pioneers of Ontario.

But I intend to stay on the old farm where I spent my childhood days. A farm stands as Nature makes it. There are many advantages to farm life. To farm, you need all the farm implements, and as the old farmer says, you should not either lend or borrow. I do not agree with him. You should lend, because some day you may want to borrow. But you should never try to farm with the idea I will borrow my plough from Mr. Jones, my seed-sower from Mr. Brown, and then, at the end of the year, you laugh at the idea of Mr. Jones and Mr. Brown buying all those implements. But let me tell you, Mr. Jones and Mr. Brown are farmers and money-makers, not sponges as others are. When you say, I am going to go to the farm, you mean, I am going to buy a good farm with at least two hundred acres of good soil, and all the necessary implements for farming.

Housekeeping goes hand-in-hand with farming. If you have a wife that will throw out more with a spoon than you can bring in with a shovel, why, you may as well leave the farm and go to the poorhouse. Farming is almost another name for arithmetic. If you do not use your brains and judgment you are not a farmer; you are a money-waster and time-loser.

My one reason for staying on the farm is, because I realize what it is to make money, and if you are farming on a large scale you gre making money.

How The Farm Can Be Made More Attractive

Clifford Graham Writes Interestingly From the Viewpoint of a Boy.

Being a boy of 16 years, and having spent most of my life on a farm, I consider it the most attractive life there is.

I would say give a boy his share of leisure, but work enough to keep him in mind that he was put here for a reason. Thus he will grow up with a respect for his vocation which he was intended for.

Also I would suggest plenty of amusement in the house; have the boy know he is as welcome there as at the barn.

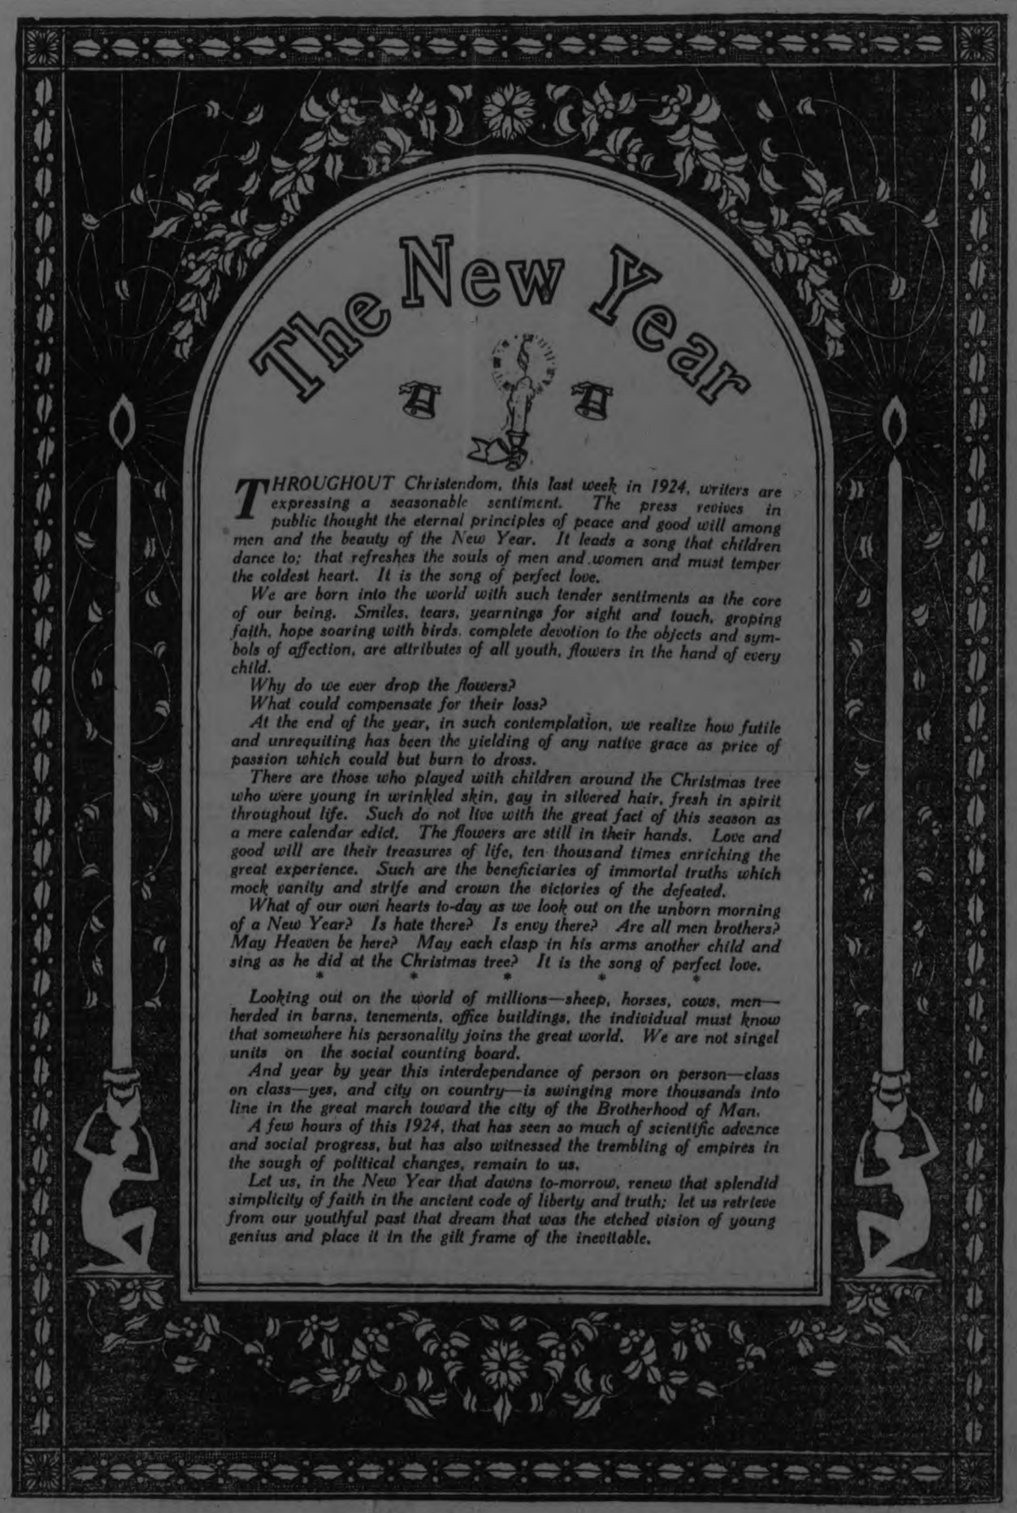
When work is done, nothing is more pleasant than a nice fireplace, with lots of music and games; and let him invite his boy and girl friends often for enjoyment.

Also we must remember life is a blank page to the boy who is denied pleasure, so we must see that he has a vacation once in a while to associate with people of his own age.

Thus, as a boy grows to be a man, the farm that is his home becomes more and more endeared to him; and as he climbs the ladder that leads to success, he will look back on the past and think of the happy days he spent when a boy.

PROTECTION FOR JAP FARMERS.

OTTAWA, Dec. 31.—Japan is likely to raise her tariff on wheat, according to advices here. Japanese farmers believe that higher duties on wheat would cause a 20 per cent. increase in the domestic crop.



THROUGHOUT Christendom, this last week in 1924, writers are expressing a seasonable sentiment. The press revives in public thought the eternal principles of peace and good will among men and the beauty of the New Year. It leads a song that children dance to; that refreshes the souls of men and women and must temper the coldest heart. It is the song of perfect love.

We are born into the world with such tender sentiments as the core of our being. Smiles, tears, yearnings for sight and touch, groping faith, hope soaring with birds, complete devotion to the objects and symbols of affection, are attributes of all youth, flowers in the hand of every child.

Why do we ever drop the flowers?

What could compensate for their loss?

At the end of the year, in such contemplation, we realize how futile and unrequiting has been the yielding of any native grace as price of passion which could but burn to dross.

There are those who played with children around the Christmas tree who were young in wrinkled skin, gay in silvered hair, fresh in spirit throughout life. Such do not live with the great fact of this season as a mere calendar edict. The flowers are still in their hands. Love and good will are their treasures of life, ten thousand times enriching the great experience. Such are the beneficiaries of immortal truths which mock vanity and strife and crown the victories of the defeated.

What of our own hearts to-day as we look out on the unborn morning of a New Year? Is hate there? Is envy there? Are all men brothers? May Heaven be here? May each clasp in his arms another child and sing as he did at the Christmas tree? It is the song of perfect love.

* * * *

Looking out on the world of millions—sheep, horses, cows, men—herded in barns, tenements, office buildings, the individual must know that somewhere his personality joins the great world. We are not singel units on the social counting board.

And year by year this interdependance of person on person—class on class—yes, and city on country—is swinging more thousands into line in the great march toward the city of the Brotherhood of Man.

A few hours of this 1924, that has seen so much of scientific advance and social progress, but has also witnessed the trembling of empires in the sough of political changes, remain to us.

Let us, in the New Year that dawns to-morrow, renew that splendid simplicity of faith in the ancient code of liberty and truth; let us retrieve from our youthful past that dream that was the etched vision of young genius and place it in the gilt frame of the inevitable.

NEW COMPETITION

Free-for-All With Same Attractive Prizes Starts New Year.

So successful have The Examiner Farm Page competitions proven in the last few months, that it has been decided to carry them over into the New Year.

The next competition will be entirely different from any of the others, and the young people who have grown accustomed to winning prizes will have to step lively, because this competition is open to their fathers and mothers. Watch the first 1925 Farm Page.

And right here the Competition Editor wishes to thank all the boys and girls who sent him Christmas cards and wishes.

Bertha Edmondson's card was particularly attractive, being all hand-colored. Anna McMurray's note was not received until after the prizes had been mailed, but we hope the address was alright.

Now, all on your marks, like little 1925 in the corner, ready for the new competition.

SALVAGE.

Synthetic lumber, now being manufactured from such substances as the waste fiber of sugar cane, will eventually take the place of forest-grown lumber. So claims Dahlberg, one of its enthusiasts.

Maybe he's a bit too zealous. But we are entering a period when the greatest fortunes and progress will be made through economies, especially salvage of waste. Chemistry will make the transition from our era of "mining natural resources."

Half a cup of strong coffee may be substituted for water when making boiled frosting.

FLOUR FOR RUSSIA

Canadian Produce Shipped in 120,000 Barrels—Two Cargoes.

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—Two full cargoes of Canadian flour, amounting in all to 120,000 barrels, were sold to the Amtorg Trading Corporation for shipment to Russia. Two Canadian houses figured in the transaction, the Maple Leaf Milling Company and the Hansen Produce Co.

FLYING.

American airplane industry last year turned out nearly 16 million dollars' worth of flying machines, says census report. This included 505 airplanes and 82 seaplanes. For each plane produced, the aircraft industry had about $22,000 of product. While this wasn't the average cost of planes (for the total must include a lot of repairs and extra parts), it's plain that flying still is a rich man's game.

If your auto stalls, you telephone a garage. If your flying machine stalls, your friends telephone an undertaker.

MINISTERS RESIGNED

ROME, Dec. 30.—Council of cabinet ministers being held this afternoon to discuss resignations of Liberal ministers, Senator Casati and Gino Sarrocchi, Ministers of Education and Public Works respectively.

LONDON, Ont., Dec. 30.— The Hyde Park Presbyterian Church, at a congregational meeting on Monday night, decided with but one dissenting voice, to go into union without taking a vote.

CANADIAN WHEAT IS JOCKEYED TO FAVOR FOREIGN INTERESTS, CHARGE DOMINION WESTERNERS

Complaints Are Being Made of the Elevator at Buffalo.

BLAME OWNERS

Foreign Buyers Hold Canadian Grain in Storage Here.

MONTREAL, Dec. 31.—There has been much criticism, particularly in Western papers, of the action of foreign wheat pools in holding Canadian wheat off the market. The feeling of the objectors is that wheat from other markets is being sold, and it is feared that the world's demand may be filled before Canadian wheat has a fair chance to be sold.

There has been plenty of evidence that it is the foreign buyers who are holding Canadian grain in storage in Canada, while wheat from other countries is in keen demand.

On the other hand, it is pointed out by grain men that the spring is likely to see a different situation. The European buyer does not want a large volume of Canadian wheat at the present time, but is filling his needs from other sources at lower prices. Next spring, as last year, he will require every bushel Canada has to spare, and should then take Canadian wheat in large quantities.

Why Build in Buffalo-

Further criticism is heard as a result of the action of Saskatchewan Co-operative Elevator Company in deciding to build a million-bushel terminal elevator at Buffalo, N.Y. The Saskatchewan Co-operative Elevator Company is an organization owned and controlled by the agriculturists of Saskatchewan. The development of this organization, which was launched in 1911, may be seen from the fact that it now owns and operates 434 elevators at Saskatchewan with a capacity of 13,900,000 bushels, in addition to operating terminal elevators at Port Arthur with a capacity of 15,100,000 bushels. This year the company has opened offices at Saskatoon and Vancouver, B.C., in order to provide more efficient marketing service for the grain producers of the province. The Buffalo plant, which is being erected at a cost of approximately $800,000, will have a capacity of 1,000,000 bushels. It is expected that it will be ready for operation August 1, 1925.

The Buffalo plant will be used as a transfer house to receive grain from the terminals at the western end of the Great Lakes. From Buffalo it will be passed on to the Atlantic seaports.

Are Ship Owners to blame

There is a tendency in flour milling and grain circles to lay the blame on the back of Canadian shipowners. The Canadian Milling and Grain Trade Journal puts it this way:

"It is quite clear that the agency which has led to the provision at an American port of an elevator which is to be built by Canadian money for the handling of Canadian grain, which ought to be handled in this country by Canadian workers and transportation interests, is the lake shipping, and it is enabled to do this because it has been given a monopoly in the carrying trade between Canadian ports in the expectation that the interests of Canada will thereby be furthered. Protected by this monopoly the Canadian shipping companies carry Canadian grain from the lake ports to Buffalo at the Duluth-Buffalo rate; and then, to increase their general receipts, they charge a higher rate on Canadian grain from the lake ports to the eastern bay ports, though the distance is about two-thirds that to Buffalo. The differential at its minimum is half-a-cent, sometimes it goes higher; but it is sufficient to turn Canadian wheat more and more into United States channels, thus starving the Canadian ports and depriving Canadian railways of traffic.

Bird Orchestra Makes Farm Life Worth While

Lena McCauley Tells in Prize Story of Beauties of Country.

Farming is the most interesting occupation I know of. We are nearer to nature on the farm than in the city. We see such a variety of animals, birds, bees and flowers. In springtime, when the bird orchestra comes from the south, it is like living in a Paradise. The country is very healthy, with its abundance of fresh air and suns also the fresh vegetables, fruits, eggs, butter and milk. To stroll through the woods and fields, and to watch the lambs, calves, pigs and colts play is a pleasure. In the spring, people find unlimited joy in watching for the first flowers of the season, and when they are out in full bloom, what a beautiful sight the woods are, and, of course, bouquets are picked. In autumn, children spend many happy hours playing with the leaves and gathering nuts.

Our farm is situated on the shore of a beautiful lake, which is dotted with islands. On the islands and shores, tourists from all over the continent have built cottages. There are many summer resorts and stores on the lake, and four dancing pavilions. The tourists and settlers fish in this lake—maskinonge, bass and other varieties are caught. In winter the people skate on the lake. Coasting and sleigh-riding provide great fun. We have concerts and moving pictures in the schoolhouse, and dancing parties in the private houses during the winter.

From May until November we get our mail daily, and always look for the good old Evening Examiner, full of the latest news. We listen on the radio in the evenings; we also have a victrola, with dance records to reduce the surplus flesh we gain on the farm.

Farmer Should Share In Hydro Advantages

Concessions to Rural Districts Are Reasonable, Editor Thinks.

While business men will not regard the proposal of the U.F.O., that power be sold by the Ontario Hydro Commission on a flat basis, as sound, they will appreciate that there is a good deal to be said for some concessions to the rural districts in this connection.

It is sound argument that the waterpowers of the province are owned by all the people and that, so far as possible, all should benefit equally. The business-like way would be to charge the Hydro Commission for the use of the water and set this revenue against general provincial expenditure.

Not only do we find that the communities served by Hydro are benefiting from the utilization of a provincial asset without paying for it, but the millions spent in the development have been secured on the credit of the province and the responsibility therefore is borne by all the people. This means that because of Hydro financing provincial borrowing for other purposes is at a higher rate than it would otherwise be, and this must be borne by the general taxpayers.

The Hydro should pay a fair price for the water it makes use of for the benefit of the whole province, and it should be called upon to provide ample sinking funds against the financing which has been done on provincial credit. And as this has not been done the farmers have a good case in demanding a share in urban benefits. Besides it might be good business to do something in this direction as an encouragement to agriculture.—Financial Post.

TRADE.

A fully stocked grocery store in any large city has to carry in its stock 6,000 to 7,000 separate items, according to an authority in this trade. In a town of 5,000 inhabitants, the grocer must 2,500 different articles to satisfy the wants of all his customers.

DEAD OUTSIDE HOTEL.

LETHBRIDGE, Alta., Dec. 31.—A. E. Joacham, secretary-treasurer of the rural municipality of Warner, was found dead outside a local hotel Tuesday morning, clad only in his underclothing. He had come to the city for medical treatment. An inquest will be held.

CANADIENS AND HAMILTON MEET

National League Leadership Will Be Decided in Holiday Game.

PLAY AT TIGERS.

MONTREAL, Dec. 31—(Canadian Press).—Montreal's chances of remaining in undisputed possession of third place when the first third of the National Hockey League schedule concludes this mid-week will be settled here to-night when the new local team meets the changed Toronto St. Patrick's. A victory over Charlie Querrie's sextette will guarantee Cecil Hart's club a certain hold on the berth, no matter what the outcome of the Boston-Ottawa tilt at the capital.

Canadien's game with the Hamilton Tigers, originally scheduled for Wednesday, has been switched to Thursday evening, when the two leading clubs will battle to decide which club is to go into unquestionable leadership.

The champions will leave here this evening for the crucial tussle, and after their comparatively easy defeat of the Tigers here earlier in the season, anticipate a win, though they do not underrate their opponents.

It is likely that Lou Marsh, of Toronto, will handle the tilt at Hamilton. Dr. O'Leary, of Ottawa, has been named for the game between Montreal and St. Patrick's.

HARRIS WILL KEEP SENATORS INTACT

Washington Manager Intends to Make No Changes Next Year.

WASHINGTON, December 31. — Bucky Harris will stand pat with his world's champion baseball combination.

When the Senators take the field April 15th, the same fielders will be at their posts as finished the season's victories in the American league and against the Giants last fall.

Roger Peckinpaugh will be at his place in the short field; Ossie Bluege will be back at third, Joe Judge at first, and Bucky himself at second.

There will be no switch in the outfield. Earl McNeily, whose two-base swat put over the winning run in the last thrilling encounter of the world series will be in centre.

When it comes to pitchers the changes will be in additions, not subtractions. Walter Johnson will pitch the opening game and take his turn all season, according to present indications.

Zachary and Mogridge, old-timers, and young Marberry, the demon relief hurler, will be on deck.

The newcomers are: Coveleskie, late of Cleveland; Dutch Reuther, of Brooklyn, and Vean Gregg, star of another day, rescued from the minors. All three are hardened veterans, and some say beyond their prime.

To critics who rap Harris for "starting an old man's home," Bucky retorts: "I have won all the honors of baseball, and now I must defend them. It was necessary to get pitchers who could give me immediate results and I believe I have succeeded."

Harris will have two promising youngsters on his mound staff: Geo. Kelly, a winner with Memphis, last season, and Benson Brillhart, who was with the Senators two years ago. The redoubtable "Muddy" Ruel and young Bernard Tate will be on the receiving end of the siants.

Mike McNally, the ex-Yankee, will bolster up the infield, and may become a regular at third, if Peck's leg fails to come through.

Harris will start training early in the spring. The veteran pitchers will go to Hot Springs late in February, with several of the young regulars, including Goslin, for whom Harris predicts a big season. They will join the rest of the squad at Tampa later.

Has High Praise For Australian Sportsmen

EVANSTON, Ill., Dec. 31.—(United Press).—Australia produces the greatest sportsmen in the world. So say Ted Mertz, captain of the Leland Stanford University tennis team, which toured the Antipodes last fall, cleaning up on all of the southern youngsters and bagging victories from Davis cup racqueteers. He returned to his home here recently.

"They cheer the visitors and not their home team," Mertz declared. "They applaud good strokes by a youngster and an underdog and let master strokes by their own champions pass by, unnoticed.

"They throw away every stroke that they think the umpire has awarded them by mistake, and they do it in a manner which will not offend the official, who, after all, has some feelings. They treated us college players like we were Davis Cup men.

"They play a smart, shifty game of tennis, and the net game is to them what baseball and football are to this country," Mertz concluded.

The Stanford ace, in addition to playing a great tennis game, scored scholastically at Stanford, leading his class in scholarship, and "making" Phi Betta Kappa, honorary scholastic society.

CURLING AT KEENE

Veteran Skip Continues to Train His Opponents.

KEENE, Dec. 31. — Curling is now in full swing and already some of the skips have tasted defeat. J. J. Moore, the veteran skip, still continues his past record by beating Skip Gilbert Howson Saturday night 12-0. Chas. Mathers rink defeated David Armstrong's rink 12-4.. The two ices are about ready for use and this will mean 4 games per night and a lot of stiff joints for a few days. The younger curlers are a terror with the brooms and every ounce of vigor is expended by them in sweeping, to the great satisfaction of their skip and themselves.

The New York Boxing Commission has ordered Gene Tunney to step out and do some fighting .... There is something ironical about this when you consider the fighting Tunney went through in France.

The baseball magnates have decided to do nothing about the O'Connell-Dolan scandal....Doing nothing is one of the best things a baseball magnate ever does.

BASKETBALL STAR.

Tom Pogue, of Chicago "Y" Team, a Leading Scorer.

TORONTO, Dec. 30.—When the Chicago Y.M.C.A. College basket ball team met West End Y.M.C.A. of Toronto, Eastern Canada champions, in the first match of a two-game series Tuesday evening, they will be captained by an Ontario boy, T. R. Pogue of Peterboro'. One of the most brilliant players on the team is Pogue, who is for the third year playing for the Chicago "Y." College seniors. His position is on the forward line, where he is an adept at clever passing. His shots are accurate, and he is one of the team's leading scorers. Any Canadian who not only wins a position, but becomes captain of the first team of a United States college must have ability and a likeable personality.

SCOTT'S ENDURANCE RECORD

New York Americans' Short stop Gives Ten Reasons Why He Has Played 1,291 Consecutive Games.

BY BILLY EVANS.

Everett Scott, frail shortstop of the New York Americans, has played 1291 consecutive games. He started his "iron-man" streak June 20, 1916, and is still at it.

No position on the ball field is more dangerous to play than that of shortstop. This, coupled with the fact that Scott is far from husky, makes his endurance record all the more remarkable.

Here are 10 reasons why Everett Scott has been able to hang up a record for endurance, that will probably stand, even after Bable Ruth's 59 homers in one season has passed out of the picture.

1. Takes great care of his physical condition .Follows training rules more like a college player than a professional athlete.

2. Never hurries himself in the spring. Conditions himself slowly regardless of how well his rivals for the position are showing.

3. Makes careful study of his batters, figures no two alike, enabling him to make plays easiy that other wise might call for a foolhardy effort.

4. Never forces his arm except in the pinch. Times his runners so that he throws the fast and slow ones out by the same margin.

5. He made a careful study of touching runners.This is the most dangerous of all plays on the ball field and no player is called upon to make it more often than the shortstop. watches the runner closely and, being familiar with his mannerisms, positions himself accordingly in making the touch, also taking into consideration the direction of the throw.

6. Gets the signal for every pitch and then tries to figure what he will do in advance. Says this is most important and saves many a "bonehead play."

7. Doesn't believe in fussing with the umpires unless he has a real grievance. Then expresses his objections in a way that results in the umpire giving him much consideration rather than pointing to the exit sign.

8.—Guards constantly against being temperamental. Says a player must accept the good and tough breaks as part of the game.

9. Insists on being an optimist, believing that everything is going to be all right and says it usually turns out that way.

10.—Fight hard but always tries to play the game fair.

HASTINGS WON ANOTHER GAME

Exhibition Game at Campbellford Was Featured by a Good Brand of Hockey.

CAMPBELLFORD, Dec. 31.—The Junior O.H.A. team opened the local hockey season by dropping an exhibition game to the fast-travelling Hastings Intermediates by a 5 to 3 score at Covert's Arena last night. It was a fast, clever bunch 'Dad' Clapper dropped over the boards, and they opened up from the first face-off, and kept the puck in Campbellford's end most of the time, but Saunders in goal was unbeatable. He stopped them from close in, and far out, and from all angles. Cowell and Copperthwaite did the brunt of the work in this period; the forwards couldn't get away from the persistent back-checking of the Hastings front line, and their shots on the Hastings net were few.

Howard Wood was injected into the fray near the end of the period, and with half a minute to go, he carried the puck the length of the rink, was checked in front of the Hastings net by "Dit" Clapper, but "Skinny" Flint swooped down and batted the loose puck past Scriver, for the only score of the period. Wood was just about the best puck carrier the locals had, and should have been used more.

Wood, Blue and Ayrhart formed the front line at the start of the second period, and they had more success than the former trio. Ayrhart grabbed the puck from the face-off and went down the side and circled in front of the net to score in the first half-minute of play.

At the next face-off Ingram repeated the performance, the Kids were three goals to the good, but it didn't last long, for Hill picked the puck out of a scramble in front of Saunders and dumped it into the net. "Dit" Clapper got the only easy goal of the night, when he fooled Saunders with a long shot. Stevenson earned a pretty goal when he got the puck in the corner, and carried it behind the net, to slip it in the corner to even the score. Just at the end of the period, Doonan tried to shove his knee through Copperthwaite, and the local defence man retailiated with his fist. Both were given a penalty. With Wood, Blue, McArthur and Copperthwaite doing sub. duty, Hastings hemmed the local kids in their own end, and raised shot after shot on Saunders. But he kept his goal intact till two men drew penalties, then "Scottie" Clapper and Hill came down together and "Scottie" beat him from close in. While still a man short, and the rest up the ice, "Dit" Clapper broke away and went in alone to make it 5 to 3 at the finish of the game.

The Hastings boys are all fast skaters and clever stick handlers and showed the results of practice and good coaching. They should make it interesting for the other Trent Valley League teams with championship aspirations.

If the Campbellford boys want to make a showing in the O.H.A. they will have to get a little more system to the attack. Blue, Wood and McArthur looked the best frontline and Lemyre will makea a big improvement. He is away for the holidays but will be back in time for the game at Belleville on Friday night, Our old star goalkeeper, Tommy Stuart, blossomed out as a referee and he did it to the King's taste. There wasn't a complaint from either team.

The line-up:

Referee— Tommy Stuart, Campbellford.

AT THE ROYAL.

REAL WRESTLING MATCH STAGED FOR PHOTOPLAY.

Victor McLaglen and William Russell Test Strength on Mat.

Sport and motion picture fans will be treated to a rare bit of action in the visualization of Kenneth Perkins' novel, "The Beloved Brute," which will be shown at the Royal Theatre on Thursday. In one of the sequences there is a very realistic wrestling match between Victor McLaglen and William Russell.

Mr. McLaglen, who is portraying the title role, for several years has been one of the foremost amateur boxers and wrestlers of the world. He is also a champion swordsman, having qualified for this title in the British army both mounted and dismounted. His record as a horseman reads like a romance.

His opponent who appears in an equally important role is well-known for his athletic prowess. Mr. Russell is a young Hercules in size and strength. He regards McLaglen as his superior and describes him as "strong as a bull," and "quicker than chain lightning."

For several weeks before the big wrestling match was filmed the two men went into training; daily between scenes they met each other in sparring and wrestling contests to prepare for what was to be a real battle on the screen.

In the story McLaglen, as the Beloved Brute, is the protector of Jacinta, a dance hall girl, portrayed by Marguerite de la Motte. He has a brother whom he has not seen but who has been declared by the father to be the superior of the two. The Brute, to disprove the statement, challenges the brother to a wrestling match. The brother, portrayed by Russell, is unaware of the Brute's identity. A fierce battle ensues which has been transferred to the screen in such a manner as will appeal to every lover of sports. It is one of many thrilling situations in a picture which is a happy combination of the old wagon show, blended with outdoor scenes and a novel love interest. The picture has a surprise ending. It is one of those pictures which keeps an audience guessing until the final fade-out.

A Gain of Over Forty Millions in Deposits—Increase of Forty-One Millions in Holdings of Securities.

The outstanding features of the annual statement of The Royal Bank of Canada for the fiscal year ended November 29th are the increase of over $40,000,000 in deposits and a gain in high-grade securities of $41,231,935, of which amount nearly $34,000,000 is in Government and municipal bonds.

As was to be expected under the conditions that have prevailed, making for lessened business activity, there is a decrease in current loans, but on the other hand the bank has added materially to its quick assets, these now standing at $278,024,739, as compared with $233,125,474 at the end of last year.

This compares with $538,358,554 at the end of the previous year, representing a gain of $45,430,955 for the twelve months. Liquid assets of $278,024,739 are equal to 54.5 per cent. of liabilities to the public and the largest gain in them is represented by the increase in the value of the different accounts comprising high-grade securities. WHERE PRINTERS ARE SCARCE

A trade journal having to do with printing tells us that the Minnesota State prison at Stillwater is short of printers, so short indeed that, unless there are soon some new boarders who understand the business, it will be necessary to publish the "Prison Mirror" outside the prison walls.

At present, says this journal, the prison contains only two printers, and one of these is old and decrepit, a lifer. They could, runs the account, equip a church of almost any denomination or a college with a full list of instructors. They have, moreover, a sufficient force of trained bankers to operate half a dozen banks, but there are not enough printers to equip one tiny print shop.

C.P.R. EMPLOYEES RECEIVE MESSAGE

1925 is the 40th Year of the Company's Operation on Paying Basis.

MONTREAL, Que., December 31. —Over one hundred thousand employees of the Canadian Pacific scattered all over Canada, and in various other parts of the world, yesterday received the annual New Year's message of the president and chairman, E. W. Beatty.

In it Mr. Beatty draws attention to the fact that 1925 is the 40th year of the company's operation, and gives due credit to the officers and men whose loyalty and work have enabled it to perform its task of serving Canada. The message reads:

"On this, the first day of the 40th anniversary of the driving of the last spike at Craigel Lachie, which linked the Dominion of Canada by one railway from the Atlantic to the Pacific, we look back on an era of steady growth, and look forward with optimism to new opportunities for service to our country. The year just past has not been without difficulties, and the company's operations have been conducted for a considerable portion of it under depressed commercial conditions and consequent lesser traffic. The loyal service of the officers and men has enabled the company to maintain its position and perform its important and diversified public duties with credit. Two factors of great importance, however, stand out as necessary to our operations during the coming year, namely, the maintenance of the reputation of the company's employees for efficiency and courtesy in the performance of their duties and the reduction of costs of operation in every way possible. It is my sincere wish that each officer and employee of the Canadian Pacific Railway may enjoy abounding health and happiness during 1925, and the years to come."

KING GOVERNMENT BEGINS 4TH YEAR

June Election Rumor Ridiculed—May Come in Fall.

OTTAWA, Dec. 31. — The Mackenzie King Government on Monday finished its third year in office, having taken over the reins on December 29, 1921. This fact suggests the query in political circles as to whether this coming year will be the last of the present Parliament and if, before it ends, dissolution will occur.

The consensus of opinion at the present time, is that the general election will be held in 1925, although the story from Quebec that voting will be between June 15 and 25 sounds ridiculous, in view of the practical certainty that at that time, Parliament will still be in session. If there is an election, it will be in October or November.

Influences will work both ways, for and against a dissolution in the coming year. Practically all the precedents are for dissolution at the end of four sessions and where this has been exceeded, the Government has rarely fared well but, in point of fact, Parliament's tenure expires in January, 1927, five years from the return of the writs of the 1921 election.

Members, now secure in their seats, and not relishing the hazard of an election will be against dissolution and much will depend upon the economic and Parliamentary situations. If business looks up, crops are good, improvement abroad is reflected at home and the Government weathers the session, there will be every probability of a general election next fall.

If conditions, economically and otherwise, are not good, the influence will be strong to stay on for another term. Subject to these contingencies, present prospects are indicative the coming session ending the career of the present Parliament and of an appeal to the country well before next Christmas.

HORSE AND CANINE STAR PERFORMERS IN NEW MIX FILM

Great Dane Sets Fast Histrionic Pace for Star's Famous Mount in "Teeth."

If the picture-going public thinks it has seen the so-called "last word" in animal performances on the screen, it is said to be mistaken and due for a genuine surprise tomorrow, Friday and Saturday, at the Capitol Theatre, where the ever-popular Tom Mix will be seen in his latest triumph, "Teeth," in which his wonder horse, Tony, and a handsome brute of a dog, a great dane, vie with each other in displaying histrionic intelligence which compares favorably with the most brilliant efforts of the best human actors of the day. The remarkable part of it is, "Teeth" is not advertized as an animal picture, nor does William Fox, the producer, emphasize this feature of the film at all. Yet, it is doubtful if ever two beasts manifested such consummate skill in interpreting a fine art before in all the history of amusement.

Tony long since has earned a place high among leading stars of the silver-sheet, but this stellar mount of the stellar Mix found it necessary to extend itself to keep up with the amazing thespian pace set by the dog selected to play opposite it in this photodrama of the great west. In fact, it is a race for honors in which every audience is sure to take a lively interest from beginning to end.

Meanwhile Tom Mix gives one of the most admirable performances of his career and he is sure to increase his popularity through the finished artistry which distinguishes his characterization of a virile, young prospector. He is given capable support, especially by Lucy Fox, his leading lady, and George Bancroft, who enacts villainy in a style not easily forgotten.

Still another feature of "Teeth" is destined to be given widespread praise. Indeed never could a forest fire be shown on the screen with a greater degree of realism, because in this instance the director, J. G. Blystone, risked the lives of all concerned by placing his company in the centre of a real forest fire and photographing this thrilling episode right in the midst of dangers of unmistakable reality. All in all, "Teeth" seems sure of winning a place among "the best pictures of the year."

AT THE ROYAL.

"BELOVED BRUTE."

Special Production For Royal New Year's Day.—A Circus Romance.

"The Beloved Brute," which will commence a three-day engagement at the Royal Theatre on New Year's day, is a visualization of the famous novel by Kenneth Perkins. It has been made into a photodrama by J. Stuart Blackton from a continuity prepared by Marion Constance.

The film is unique in many respects. It has a wealth of scenic backgrounds which have never before been used as motion picture locations. There is a peculiar love interest introduced in the plot which holds the suspense to the final fade-out. Marguerite de la Motte is cast as the pretty dance hall girl, who joins a travelling circus or wagon show and has many adventures, one of which is a narrow escape from a wildcat. Victor McLaglen, a physical giant and athlete, has the title role. He goes out in quest of a soul which he feels he does not possess. In his travels he meets, protects and falls in love with the dance hall girl. Together with a fortune-teller from the dance hall, a role assumed by Mary Alden, they form a travelling circus, adding a trained bear to their number. Stuart Holmes is cast as the bad man, a half breed called "China" Jones, who keeps the dance hall and who is always looking for vengeance.

William Russell, also a physical giant and athlete of repute, portrays the Brute's younger brother, an evangelist. The Brute has never seen him, but longs to prove that he is the greater man through a physical encounter. The two meet in a wrestling match, which is one of the most realistic ever produced for screen purposes. The plot here takes a peculiar twist in which all the characters get involved in a web of circumstances from which it appears almost impossible to extricate them. Thrill follows thrill in rapid succession, with the love element becoming more and more involved, until when it is least expected the author by a clever twist untangles the threads as rapidly as a slight of hand performer and leaves the characters and audience perfectly satisfied and happy.

SPECIAL MUSIC AT ROYAL ON NEW YEAR'S DAY.

The Royal Orchestra are busy these days rehearsing special music for the New Year's programme. The varying moods of "The Beloved Brute," a thrilling romance of the old west and circus life, will tax their ability more than any picture since the new orchestra was organized. "The Beloved Brute" has not played a Toronto theatre as yet. The Royal secured one of the first runs in Canada. Every New York paper gives it high praise, and no doubt it will be as well received here.

Andy Gump will again supply the comedy.

AT THE GRAND.

"THE ROSE OF PARIS."

To-morrow, New Year's Day, for matinee and evening performances, and on Friday evening, the Grand Opera House attraction will be the big moving picture. "The Rose of Paris." This is a screen story filmed from the noted novel, "Mitsi," written by "Delly,' the pen name of a brother and sister who collaborate in writing some of the most sensational fiction that Europe has acclaimed in years.

The story has a Cinderella twist. Mitsi, the heroine, was left an orphan in her infancy. Her mother had been disowned because of the marriage and the child's relatives were unaware of her existence. The child's grand-father, on his death-bed, pledged his business partner to find the disowned daughter and place her in possession of her fortune, which, if there were no heirs, was to go to the business partner.

Mary Philbin, a Universal star who became famous of her work in "Merry-Go-Round," and also starred in "The Gaiety Girl," is the heroine Mitsi, Robert Cain, with an impressive stage and screen career behind him, is the hero, Christian; John Sainpolis, who played with David Warfield for many years, and had a notable part in "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," is Andre Du Vallois; Rose Dione, famous European star, is Madame Bolomeff.

"MUTT AND JEFF"

While the employment of superlatives or overworked adjectives are sometimes necessary in voicing the praise of a new theatrical offering the net attraction at the Grand Opera House due on January 3rd requires but little additional advance exploitation. It is a musical comedy in two acts and five scenes introducing those two famous destroyers of gloom and depression, Mutt and Jeff. The popular Bud Fisher comics are to appear in the flesh, abetted aided and endorsed by a group of bewitching and fascinating young women, a corp of capable comedians, singers, dancers and vaudeville headliners, J. P. Mulgrow is the author of the book, with Leo Edwards responsible for the melodies. The contribution will introduce the universally popular cartoon heroes in new escapades, adventures and frolics.

FRENCH

France is growing in better shape to carry out any agreement she may make to pay her war debts.

French taxes have been pouring into the central treasury at a rate of nearly 23 billion francs a year. This exceeds her budget by about a tenth, and leaves considerable surplus that might be used in payments on debts.

Ability to pay and willingness to pay are Siamese Twins of finance.

BRIGHTER OUTLOOK.

New Year Expected to Bring More Employment in England.

LONDON, December 31. — Most of the leading industries of this country anticipate the New Year with unqualified optimism. There has been a large increase recently in money circulation and the overseas trade is showing a gradual expansion. There are hopes of reduced taxation, better Dominion trade, and improved European conditions, and these encourage the feeling of cheerfulness on the eve of New Year's.

The coal trade, however, remains in the depths of depression. Nearly 80 mines are idle in Northumberland alone. The Sheffield steel and iron works are cheered by substantial contracts for British railways.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of our dear father Robert McCauley, departed from us on December 31st, 1923.

Quickly and suddenly came the call.
His sudden death surprised us all
But only those who loved can tell.
The sorrow of not saying a last farewell.
Only gone a while before us
We shall meet him bye and bye
If we are prepared to enter
The bright mansions in the sky.
For their hope a blessed hope
Which our dear Lord has given
When days and years are passed and gone,
We all may meet in heaven.
Gone but not forgotten.

Inserted by his loving wife and Daughters.

Let Us Light Another Candle

1925

THE NEW YEAR brings new ambitions, new opportunities. No year ever closed with a greater glow of promise for prosperity than 1924. The economic and political situation throughout the world is distinctly favorable to business growth and expansion.

SO LET US light another candle for 1925. The power of the light will depend on the character of the fuel, rather than the quantity. Let us inject a new vitality into our efforts to make the New Year 1925 A HEALTHY, HAPPY AND PROSPEROUS ONE.

Yours faithfully,

J. J. Turner,
Mayor.

WE TAKE THIS OPPORTUNITY of wishing our many customers and friends a very happy New Year. We would thank anyone having accounts against this Firm or individual members of the Firm to kindly send them in promptly for payment. Anyone owing us accounts will also confer a favor by arranging for payment without delay.

New Year's Greetings

This day closes the year 1924, which has brought us many new friends as addition to our host of old ones, making it the most successful in the forty-four years of business—not in the amount of money made—but in the volume and quality of goods turned over at a big saving to the consumer.

We take this opportunity of thanking the customers for their co-operation, for making successful a system that has put thousands of dollars in their pockets, and placed us in a position to buy in large quantities direct from the manufacturer at a big saving, which is passed on to our patrons.

In 1925 we want to be of greater service to all and we welcome any criticism or suggestion whereby we may serve better.

We extend our sincere wishes to all for a Happy and Prosperous New Year.

OCCUPATION BY ALLIES CLOUDS GERMAN VISIONS

Leaders of Nation Grateful for Progress During 1924, But Doubt Future.

ARE DISAPPOINTED

Continued Occupation of German Soil Intolerable Because Country Disarmed.

BERLIN, Jan 2.—The German valedictories to 1924 and the greetings to the incoming year are largely colored by the ill-feeling over the prospective failure of the allies to evacuate the Cologne area on January 10, as forecast from Paris. While the retrospective views expressed concede that the past year has been one of economic and social progress the new year prophets are none too sanguine over the immediate outlook for the continued improvement of the nation's internal affairs and its foreign relations.

"The year just closed has been one of conspicuous and progressive convalescence and internal consolidation for our sorely tried Fatherland in that our curency, our state finances, and our economic life has been liberated from the vicious manifestations and effects of the inflation period and given more secure foundations," President Ebert told a delegation of government leaders headed by Chancellor Marx on the occasion of its new year visit to the executive mansion yesterday.

Thanks Due to Marx

President Ebert said he believed thanks were due Chancellor Marx and his associates in the Cabinet for the progress that had been achieved, and he declared Germany owed it to the government's energy and perseverance in the face of heavy odds that a tangible step forward had been made.

Discussing the subject of the evacuation of the Rhineland, the president continued:—

"Whatever their political faith, the Germans everywhere are to-day one in their feeling of bitter disappointment and their consciousness of a new and painful injustice. Under pretexts with which we are as yet unfamiliar and which we therefore are unable to examine, but of the inconsistencies of which we are all convinced, we are to be deprived of the sole advantage vouchsafed us in an immeasurably oppressive peace treaty the evacuation of occupied German soil."

Says Nation Unarmed

This condition, President Ebert observed, was all the more intolerable because Germany was the only truly disarmed nation in a Europe bristling with armaments.

Germany's new year's wish, he added, was that a spirit of justice and desire for reconciliation among the nations might prevail over the ideas of might and force, and that the German citizens along the Rhine and in the Ruhr would be accorded their rights and freedom.

President Ebert's reception to the diplomatic corps occurred at high noon. It was attended by the chiefs or acting heads of all the foreign diplomatic missions whose greetings to the president were expressed by Monsignor Pacelli, the papal nuncio.

LEAN A CANDIDATE

Will Contest Burleigh Reeveship With Duncan Brown.

APSLEY, Jan. 1.—There will be a municipal election in Apsley after all. Norman Lean's supporters were insistent upon his contesting the Reeveship, so his hat is in the ring and a keen fight is anticipated between him and the former Reeve, Duncan Brown. As was stated at the nomination meeting, the new Reeve whoever he is, will find the municipality in a strong financial condition, there being a balance of between thirteen and fourteen hundred dollars to start the year on, while it is claimed the present tax rate of 26 mills is as low as any municipality in the county.

A reception in honour of Mr. and Mrs. Melville Tucker (nee Miss Mary Windsor), a popular local couple who were married in Peterborough on the 28th inst., was given on Tuesday evening at the home of Reeve Scott and was very largely attended. The bride and groom were the recipients of a large number of presents. The evening was devoted to dancing, which was kept up till the early hours, and a very pleasant time was enjoyed by the crowd.

CENTENARY OF HALIFAX PAPER

Special Edition of 84 Pages Issued by "The Morning Chronicle."

HALIFAX, N. S., Jan. 2.— Celebrating one hundred years of continuous publication, the Morning Chronicle, in Association with the Nova Scotian, yesterday published an edition of eighty-four pages replete with matter of great historical interest to Canada. The magazine section includes articles by Dr. Archibald MacMechan and Dr. J. D. Logan on Joseph Howe, perhaps its most brilliant editor and the Chronicle's place in the history of Nova Scotia is graphically told by Dr. W. E. MacLellan a former editor. The story of right Hon. W. S. Fielding's career with the nowspaper is told in detail. The edition also includes a facsimile of the first issue of the Halifax Gazette, the first newspaper published in Canada.

G. Fred Pearson, managing-director of the Chronicle Publishing Company, concludes a retrospect of the services rendered by his papers during the past century with the following words:

"One hundred years is a long period of time. It has been given to few newspapers to attain that age, under the original name and with so few changes in proprietorship. It is with pride therefore that the present edition is issued from the press. Looking back upon the hundred years of useful service which the Nova Scotian has given the people of this province, it is with humility that he dedicate it and its younger brother, The Morning Chronicle, anew to the service of the people.

If these newspapers bulk as largely in the affairs of the Province which gave them birth, in the second century of their existence as they did in the first, they will have fulfilled the aspirations of their founders. It is with a firm resolve and with confidence in the future that we enter upon the second century of continuous publication."

BRITISH LABOR SEEKS EARLY WAGE INCREASE

Two Million Employees Intend to Make Concerted Effort.

LONDON, Jan. 2.— A concerted effort is to be made early in the new year by the skilled and unskilled workers in the United Kingdom for an all-round increase in wages, it is understood. The industries affected will include mining, engineering and shipbuilding. The employees concerned number about 2,000,000 and the claims, it is estimated, will aggregate about £100,000,000 a year.

The group of engineering and metal trades, involving about 500,000 men, want a flat £1 increase, the shipbuilding workers ask about the same rate of increase, while the miners will fight for a uniform minimum wage of 12 shillings a day.

ULSTER BARS POTATOES FROM UNITED STATES

Belfast Adopts London's Measure Against Colorado Beetles.

BELFAST, Jan. 2. — The Ulster ministry of agriculture yesterday issued an order on lines similar to the recent British action, placing a ban upon the importation of the United States potatoes.

The British embargo on United States potatoes, imposed last month, stated the action was taken for prevention of the introduction into England and Wales of the Colorado Beetle, or potato bug.

THE WEATHER

New Year's morning came in with 11 degrees below zero. The highest the temperature went during the day was 6 degrees above zero. This morning (Friday, Jan. 2nd), was ushered in with 2 degrees above zero, with snow falling. As the year 1924 has now passed into history, and as memory is proverbially untrustworthy, I give herewith a few items regarding the past year. The winter was late in beginning, but, contrary to the prophecies of some, was sufficiently severe to satisfy the most of us. The coldest day was Jan. 27th, with 28 below zero. January had 9 days below zero; February 13; and March 1. Good sleighing extended from Dec. 28th to March 17th. The most snow on the ground at any time was about February 15th, namely 34 inches. Most of the snow had disappeared by March 22nd. As the ground had not been frozen to any extent when snow first came, it disappeared in spring with no floods or freshets. The bulk soaked into the ground. This probably accounts largely for the good crops that generally prevailed, as the rainfall during the summer was somewhat short. Here is the amount of precipitation for each month:

January	5.01
February	3.47
March	1.83
April	2.93
May	3.06
June	1.92
July	3.00
August	3.18
September	4.49
October	.55
November	.86
December	2.10
	32.40

The summer was particularly cool. There were few really hot days, and with one exception last summer was the only one I know when we did not have 90 degrees in the shade. Perhaps it was a good thing for the agriculturist, but some others did not view it that way. Capt. Scollard, of the Stoney Lake, lamented to me on one of his last trips, last summer that we had really had no summer, and people had no desire for boat trips when overcoats and heavy wraps were needed. The last appearance of ice was May 19th. The first appearance in the fall was September 24th. What 1925 has in store no man knows. Several well known forecasters, such as Foster in the U. S., and a number of government weather officials of England, claim that we are in for a prolonged drought this summer. We shall see. In the meantime, let us look forward with confidence to the future, believing that the rains will continue to fall on the just and unjust, and that seedtime and harvest will continue as of yore.—W. P.

ST. THOMAS FIRE DAMAGE $35,000

Flames Spread Rapidly in Old Business Building on New Year's Day.

FIREMEN HAMPERED

ST. THOMAS, Ont., Jan. 2.—Fire of unknown origin caused a loss of about $35,000 yesterday afternoon when the building on Talbot street occupied by the Eureka Shop and the St. Thomas Bargain House, was practically gutted. The building occupied by MacKenzie's plumbing shop, Dr. Turner's office and McDonald's News Stand was also badly burned. Living apartments of Mrs. MacKenzie and B. Young also suffered although most of the furniture was removed safely. The properties are located at 646 and 648 Talbot street.

The fire was discovered by Mr. Young at the rear of his apartment about 3:15 p.m. Flames made very rapid headway and by the time the firemen arrived the fire had spread to the second story of the adjoining building. Both structures were old and of frame construction and fell easily prey to the flames. Falling embers and cold weather hampered the firemen in their work. Several of the fire fighters suffered from frost bites and their hose lines and other fire-fighting apparatus became coated with ice. Heavy smoke also added to the difficulties and several of the firemen were almost overcome several times.

BANQUET TO HANNA

West Hastings Member Guest of Trenton Liberals.

COBOURG, Jan. 2.—During the Yuletide season Trenton Liberals took occasion to tender a banquet to the member of West Hastings, Charles Hanna, M.P., as a tribute of their esteem and regard. About one hunderd and twenty assembled in the Masonic Hall for the event.

Rought Trip On Lake.

The ferry Ontario No. 2 experienced a rough trip when the big boat left Genessee Dock on Sunday forenoon for Cobourg, having on board besides freight about thirty passengers, the majority of whom were returning from spending Christmas with friends in Rochester. When about three-quarters of the way across the lake, a wireless message brought the information that the waves were sweeping over the pier at Cobourg and it would not be safe to try to make the slip here. Capt. Forrest decided to turn about and return to Genessee Dock which was reached at 7.30 Sunday evening. The passengers on the boat were guests of the Company.

HONORS BY KING TO LITERATURE, AND ALLIED ART

Knighthood For Edmund Gosse and Francis Dickee, President of Royal Academy.

ONLY TWO PEERS.

Two Women Included in the New Year's Honor List.

LONDON, Jan. 2. — The King's New Year's honor list was issued Wednesday evening. As usual the honors are largely promotion of persons in the various government services at home in India and in the colonies. It is notable that in the list more than customary attention has been paid by King George to art, science and literature.

The anticipated appointment of Marquis Curzon of Kedleston to a dukedom did not materalize, but Admiral Viscount Jellicoe of Scapa was raised to an earldom. Only two persons are raised to the peerage, Sir John Bradbury, the retiring British delegate on the reparation commission and Judge Sir Henry Duke, having been made barons.

Most interesting to the world of learning is the appointment of two new members to the exclusive Order of Merit—Sir James George Frazer, fellow of Trinity College Cambridge, and Sir Ernest Rutherford director of the Cavendish Laboratory, Cambridge University. Two women, Ellen Terry, the actress, and Mrs. Millicent Garrett Fawcett, former president of the National Union of the Women's Suffrage Society, are made Dames of the Grand Cross of the Order of the British Empire.

Viscount Lee of Fareham, former first lord of the admiralty, is made a knight grand commander of the star of India. Included in the long list of new knighthoods are the artist, Francis Dickee, who was recently appointed president of the Royal Academy; Edmund Gosse, author; Professor Frederick Cleveland Hopkinson, and Andrew MacFadyan, controller of German assigned revenues under the Dawes plan.

PEGGY MARSH WEDS OFFICER OF GUARDS

Canadian Actress Who Claimed Share of Field Millions for Son.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—Peggy Marsh, the Canadian actress, was married at a registry office here yesterday to Captain Kelly Robert Geroge Fenwick, formerly of the Royal Horse Guards, says the Evening News. The groom's country seat is Witham Hall, Lincolnshire. He is a relative of the Duke of Manchester and his first wife was a sister of the Duchess of Westminster.

Peggy Marsh was married in 1921 to Albert L. (Buster) Johnson, who died in New York in January, 1923.

Affair With Field.

CHICAGO, Jan. 2. — Peggy Marsh, who was married the second time yesterday in London, was the Nova Scotia chorus girl whose romance with Henry Field, a grandson of Marshal Field, Chicago merchant prince, attracted international interest after the world war.

Young Field, brother of the present Marshal Field III was one of the heirs to his grandfather's estate, which grew to $200,000,000 or more. He was born in England and educated at Eton.

When the war broke out he became a Red Cross ambulance driver. He met Peggy Marsh in London at that time. He died in 1917, after attaining the age of 21, and after marrying a Miss Perkins, one of the famous Langhorne family of beauties of Virginia.

After his death Peggy Marsh laid claim to a share of the Field millions for her son, Henry Anthony Marsh admittedly a natural son of Henry Field. The boy had certain sums settled upon him by the Field family for his education and maintenance.

A friendly suit, with the Field family concurring, to construe the 25,000 word will of Marshal Field, was heard in court, but the Illinois supreme court ruled that the will specifically exempted from inheritance any illegitimate offspring.

HEADS THE POLL

ROLAND DENNE
Elected to the City Council yesterday by a large majority, leading a field with thirteen contestants.

WRECK WORRIED HIM TO SUICIDE

Engineer Not to Blame, But He Brooded Over His Spoiled Record.

HANGED HIMSELF

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Jan. 2.—Harry J. Colwell, engineer of the Minneapolis, St. Paul and Sault Ste Marie Railway passenger train whose rear coach fell into the Chippewa River near Chippewa Falls, Wis., on December 20, resulting in eight deaths, committed suicide by hanging, at his home here Wednesday night.

Colwell had been an engineer for 21 years and had never figured in an accident. On Dec. 2, he substituted for the regular engineer of the Soo line Minneapolis to Chicago train, he said he had looked back just in time to see the last coach of his train topple from a trestle into the river as they neared Chippeya Falls.

Although the accident was blamed to a broken switch bolt, Colwell worried over the affair, claiming that his perfect record with the road had been marred.

Wednesday he drew his wages, paid off the neighborhood storekeeper, returned home, ate his supper and went down to the basement.

Half an hour later his daughter found his body hanging from a beam with a clothes line around his neck. The coroner returned a verdict of suicide.

JAMES H. METCALFE, KINGSTON, PASSES

Was Close Friend of Sir John A. Macdonald.

KINGSTON, Jan. 2.—James H. Metcalfe, former member of the Ontario Legislature and of the Federal Parliament and ex-warden of Portsmouth penitentiary, passed away at midnight in the General Hospital having been bed ridden for several months. For many years he was prominent in civic and legislative circles and enjoyed a wide popularity being a genial and kindly man with a ready fund of humor. In his early years he was a school teacher beginning at the age of sixteen, and was the principal of various schools. He began his public career in 1873 hen he was elected an alderman for Frontenac ward continuing in this capacity until 1878. He then turned his attention to the political arena, and was elected member for Kingston in the Ontario Legislative serving for three terms when he resigned his seat on the death of Sir John A MacDonald, whose trusted lieutenant he was, and was elected to the Federal house in the bye-election made necessary by his chieftain's passing, defeating the doughty Alexander Cunn.

In 1895 he became warden of the penitentiary, but his stern duties were too much for his kindly sympathetic nature and after a short tenure of office he suffered a breakdown and was forced to resign, since which time he has followed a retired life. Before he entered parliamentary life, he was appointed Crown Lands Agent, and sold much of the land which now composes the city of Winnipeg. He was very popular with the people of that city and they made him a presentation and wanted him to become a permanent resident, but this he refused because of his great love for Kingston. He was a thorough Canadian and an intense Imperialist. His wife predeceased him. Mr. Metcalfe would have been 77 years of age a week from to-day.

DENNE HEADED THE CITY POLL WHILE FIFE BREAKS FROM TIE TO TAKE PLACE FROM HANCOCK

Bradburn Elected to Second Term as Utilities Commissioner, Leading in 31 Polls Out of 38 — An Off Year for Voters.

TWO NEW FACES IN 1925 COUNCIL

Crowe Enters on Eighth Year in Council — Maher and Morrison Were Defeated, With Spence, Tuggey and Sargent at Bottom.

Most of the hats in the municipal ring look more like footballs to-day, with five of the thirteen candidates for the City Council having polled nearly two thirds of the total number of votes cast in yesterday's election.

There will be two new faces in the Council this year, Alderman Fife's lucky star having been in the ascendent during the official count to-day that showed him elected by a lean majority of five votes over W. J. Hancock and 8 over G. L. Hay.

Roland Denne headed the poll with 1687 votes. Sixty-three per cent of the ballots cast had a cross opposite his name, and he led the field in twenty of the polling sub-divisions. This is a surprising achievement in view of the uncertainty that clouded his candidature, the agitation for his disqualification having been dispelled only in part by the publicity given in Wednesday's Examiner to two legal opinions that declared him eligible for election.

Joseph Crowe, dean of the Council, enters upon his eighth and ninth years as Alderman with the second highest vote. He was elected four years ago at the head of the poll and was third in 1923.

J. W. Meyers was third yesterday, running on his "power investigation" ticket. In 1923 he headed the poll with a plurality in all sub-divisions except number 1 where he tied with J. O. Fife. This year number 1 gave him 38 votes, one less than the leader and 15 more than Mr. Fife.

J. M. Greene, also under a cloud of uncertainty as to his ability to obtain the seat, or to hold it if he won it, took fourth place yesterday. Having won a position on the Council, Mr. Greene is ready to combat any measure brought to unseat him.

J. O. Fife, second in order in 1923, fell this year to a tie on the telephone returns with W. J. Hancock in fifth place. G. L. Hay was only three behind, and not until noon to-day, when the City Clerk completed his official count, was the status of the three candidates fixed. The discovery of an error of five votes in subdivision number 9, Fitzpatrick and Geraghty's store on Rubidge street, assured the seat to Mr. Fife.

From there the field tails off definitely, M. J. Maher, who had 1189 votes two years ago receiving less than a thousand this year, and Robert Morrison, with a record of six years in council and a vote of 1438 in 1923 getting only 921 yesterday. J. H. Spence, F. T. Tuggey and T. E. Sargent were near the bottom with 609, 461, and 303 respectively, while Arthur Blade, who asked citizens not to vote for him, received 199 votes. When Tuggey went down to defeat in 1920 he had 300 more votes than he received yesterday. On that occasion he was among the defeated Labor candidates.

Utilities Commission.

W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P. was elected by a substantial majority over A. A. McIntyre to his second term as Utilities Commissioner, receiving pluralities in 31 of the polls while his opponent carried 7. Bradburn's biggest majorities were in polls 19 and 24, each of which gave him 46 more votes than McIntyre. McIntyre's biggest lead was in poll number 2, where he had 19 more votes than Bradburn. Number 1 poll gave McIntyre a lead of 1, while Bradburn's smallest lead was poll 38 which gave him more than his opponent.

H. Allens' store, 113 Gladstone avenue (poll 1) was the first to report the Utilities result, giving McIntyre a lead of 1. The second report came from number 14 at J. D. Craig's, 441 George street, where Bradburn had a majoity of 16 and Fitzpatrick and Geraghtys', 196 Rubidge street was third with a lead of 4 for Bradburn. The returns for Utilities Commissioner came in fast, being first counted in nearly all subdivisions. Until half had reported it seemed that McIntyre might pull ahead of the sitting member, but Bradburn gained [illegible] until his seat was assured.

Alderm[illegible] Returns.

The first po[illegible] report the Aldermanic results was 25, at A. Blade and Sons, Dublin and Park Streets.

This sub-division gave Denne a majority of 7 over Crowe, his nearest competitor. Poll 21, at R. W. Eagleton's shop, 329 McDonnel Street, was not far behind, giving Denne 9 of a lead over Crowe, who was again his nearest neighbor on the score card. It was then a continuous see-saw between the two, with the weight most often on Denne's end, and only occasionally another contestant having a look-in with a small majority.

Interest shifted finally from first and second places, which were early assured, to fifth place, where it was evident there would be a close contest. With two polls to hear from Hancock was leading with 1052; Hay had 1,046, and Fife had 1,026. Number 2 poll, at T. Eakin's store, 227 Prince Street, near Fife's home, clocked in with 25 for Hancock, 19 for Hay and 52 for Fife, making the totals: Hancock, 1,077; Hay, 1,056, and Fife, 1,078. Then, after an interval in which the experts predicted the East City poll would give the seat to Hay, poll 37, at M. Kylie's, 556 Rogers Street, reported: Hancock, 1,110; Fife, 1,110, and Hay, 1,107. Alderman Nagle Phelan, who was the computer of the totals, appealed to the adding machine in the expectation that the discovery of an error might break the deadlock, but the same total was returned.

Vote Was Small.

The total vote, probably less than 3,000, was the lowest in some years. Last year upwards of 5,000 exercised their voting powers, and Alderman M. McIntyre, who headed the polls, had 3,533 votes, as compared with only 1,887 for this year's leader.

Despite this, however, there was a great deal of interest taken in the result. The telephones in The Examiner office were in continuous use from five o'clock until midnight, thousands of calls being answered, and a substantial crowd braved the cold to watch the results as they were placed on the bulletin board.

Among those who gathered around the busy City Clerk to receive the returns first hand were Mayor J. J. Turner, Aldermen Phelan, McIntyre, Maher, Morrison and Fife; Roland Denne, who started smiling with the first return, and left smiling when his lead was assured; Arthur Blade, who offered his 199 votes to whoever needed them, and many citizens who had less personal interest in the issue.

Mr. Armstrong was, as usual, the personification of courtesy in the face of many interruptions. A hundred calls for information as to the outcome held the telephone line busy when returning officers were besieging Central to give them the wire so that they might make their reports, and the result was being demanded of the City Clerk long before half the polls had reported. The last return was not in until seven o'clock.

Taking the total number of votes cast for Utilities Commissioner as the total cast, poll 19 at Mrs. Lyle's house, 301 Pearl Avenue, had the largest number of voters, 118. F. Merritt's, 363 Leslie Avenue, was second highest, with 112 voters, and the lowest vote was polled at T. L. Murray's store, 111 Rubidge Street, where only 48 registered.

ALDERMEN:
Roland Denne.
Joseph Crowe.
J. W. Meyers.
J. M. Greene.
IN DOUBT:
J. O. Fife and
W. J. Hancock, tied.
G. L. Hay, with 3 votes less.

OMEMEE NOMINATIONS

Three Men Nominated for Reeve—Lively Meeting.

OMEMEE, Jan. 2. — Nomination day, Monday, Dec. 29, drew a large crowd to the village to attend the township meeting in the afternoon and again the village nominations in the evening. The township meeting was held in the U.F.O. club rooms, while the village meeting was held in the council chamber.

Everything went very smooth at the township meeting, there being ony a very few seeking office.

At the village meeting, however, there were more nominations, and as each man responded, things became more interesting, and in fact a rather lively time followed, which was more humorous to the large gathering of those who take no part in public affairs than for many years previous.

The old council have all qualified and should there be an election in the village the contest looks very keen for the week which follows.

Nominations of the village of Omemee:

Reeve—W. D. Stinson, T. J. Parsons, T. C. Ivory (resigned).

Councillors—L. A. Southworth, Thomas Newman, James Magee, William Magee, John White, Richard Poast, Redmond Carey, J. J. Nichols, William Irwin.

Hydro Commissioners — Harry Lamb, Fred Evans.

School Trustees—R. H. Johnston, David Weir ,George Haygarth, John White.

EMILY NOMINATIONS.

Nominations for Emily township: Reeve—Thomas McConnell, Isaac Fee.

Councillors — Thomas Rice, Jeff. Ashmore, George Griffin, Martin Carroll, William Lowes, Ed. Chatten.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—With reference to Mr. McIntosh's remarks at Monaghan nomination. He asked as to the salary of the road superintendent. He stated that there was a resolution to fix his salary at $1,800. Not wishing to delay the ratepayers any longer than possible, I answered his queries briefly, not thinking the same would be published.

The same having been published, I am under the impression that the facts as recorded should be available to the ratepayers.

In looking up the proceedings of the County Council carefully, I find the following recorded, beginning at 1919, the year Mr. McIntosh was Warden; Minutes of County Council.

County Council Chamber, July 30, 1 p.m.—On motion of Messrs. Matheson and Holland, the matter of appointing a superintendent was left in the hands of Messrs. Warden, Anderson, Eason, Bell, and B[illegible]n, and that the Warden call a special meeting to ratify such appointment, salary, etc., and have a by-law passed necessary. On motion Council adjourned.

John McIntosh, Warden.

County Council Chamber, July 25, 1919. — Council met in special session called by the Warden for the purpose of ratifying the appointment of a county road superintendent, etc., pursuant to adjournment 30th June, 1919, to receive recommendations of committee re County Roads.

All present, the Warden in the chair.

On motion of Messrs. Anderson and Griffith, Mr. Nichols took the chair in order to give Mr. McIntosh a hearing.

Mr. McIntosh stated that he would accept $1,500, and bear expenses for such services.

On motion, Mr. Anderson was heard, and stated that he would act as superintendent at the rate of $2,000 per year when employed.

County Council Chamber, July 25, 5.50 p.m. — Council resumed, the Warden in the chair.

On motion of Messrs. Anderson and Middleton, substantially a vote of 7 to 5, Duncan McFarlane was appointed county road superintendent, at a salary of $1,900 per annum to cover all expenses, such salary to be paid monthly.

There is no other action or motion of Council on record, and the different members will bear out the statement save the following:

County Council Chamber, June 24, 1922. — Council resumed. The Warden in the chair.

Moved by Mr. Anderson, seconded by Mr. Nichols, that on and after 1st August next, the county pay the county road superintendent the sum of $2,100 per year.

On motion Council adjourned.

When Mr. Anderson moved that Mr. McFarlane be superintendent, he knew that he was taking chances as to efficiency, from the fact that Mr. McFarlane had been road superintendent for Otonabee for a number of years. At that time there were four townships in the system, that is, in 1919. Now there are eight townships and a suburban area, and has been since 1920.

Thanking you for your valuable space—I remain, yours respectfully,

H. B. RYE.

T. FOSTER ELECTED MAYOR OF TORONTO

Defeated Hiltz By Over Two Thousand Votes—The Liquor Issue.

TORONTO, Jan. 2 — (Canadian Press).—Civic elections in Toronto yesterday furnished a number of surprises, chief of which was the election of Thomas Foster as Mayor over W. W. Hiltz by a plurality of 2,448. Owing to the severity of the weather and the general apathy of the citizens, the vote cast was quite light. The actual vote cast for the Mayoralty candidates was 67,791, compared with 82,551 last year, a decrease of 14,760.

Hiltz polled 31,393 only compared with 44,265 last year

For the first time in 24 years, Toronto electors have denied a second term to the City's Chief Magistrate.

So far as the Hiltz-Foster contest was concerned, it is generally conceded that the voters balloted with an eye to the possible consequences of their verdict at Queen's Park. Mayor Hiltz has always been a strong advocate of prohibition, and has consistently supported the Ontario Temperance Act, while some Foster followers denied that the O.T.A. was an issue. Mr. Foster himself hinted on more than one campaign platform that he favored Government control of liquor.

Controller J. Gibbons again headed the poll for the Board of Control. His associates on this year's Board will be: Controller A. E. Hacker, ex-Controller W. D. Robbins, and ex-Alderman D. C. Macgregor.

Controller R. H. Cameron was the only one of last year's Board to go down to defeat.

The ratepayers voted 2 to 1 for an expenditure of fourteen millions for waterworks extension.

To the Electors of Campbellford

Ladies and Gentlemen, — In announcing myself as a candidate for re-election as a member of the Town Council of Campbellford, I wish to thank the voters for the confidence they placed in me on three former occasions, thus giving me the opportunity of serving three years as Councillor. I have, I believe I am justified in saying, always made the best interests of the people my aim. I trust I have been economical without being parsimonious.

I have been a consistent advocate of having all public works done by day labor, by Campbellford men, instead of by contract, and the results show that this system has saved the taxpayers thousands of dollars.

During my three years' term of service in the Council, the town has made steady progress, many public improvements having been put in, such as new sidewalks and sewers, and all this has been accomplished without increasing the tax rate.

If I am again honored by your support and re-elected to the Council, I promise to look after the interests of all the people to the best of my ability. Campbellford is my native town, and my ambition is to see it hold its place as one of the leading municipalities in Ontario.

Again thanking you for past favors, wishing you a happy and prosperous "New Year," and reminding you that polling day is Monday, January 5th, I remain,

Yours for a better and bigger Campbellford,

R. H. COLE

FRIDAY, JANUARY 2, 1925.

YESTERDAY'S RESULT.

Although the municipal situation as this is written is somewhat obscure, it is at least certain that two of the old members of the Council, Messrs. M. J. Maher and Robt. Morrison, will be absent from the Council Board when the inaugural meeting is called, while a third member of the 1924 Council, J. O. Fife, was tied for fifth place.

The feature of the aldermanic campaign was the very substantial vote given Roland Denne, who headed the polls by over 200 over the second Alderman elected. In view of the fact that the question of his ability to qualify for a position on the Council had been raised before the election—J. M. Greene's status being also questioned—the large vote polled for Mr. Denne and the substantial support accorded Mr. Greene are significant of the wishes of the majority of the voters.

It is evident from the returns that they not only believed that these candidates are of the right material for service on the Council, but also that they were not in sympathy with technical objections to the candidature of the two former members of the Board of Education.

The return to office of W. H. Bradburn as Utilities Commissioner is regarded as a personal tribute to that gentleman and as an indication of confidence in the management of the water and power departments.

TAKING A CHANCE.

Figures issued by the Board of Railway Commissioners go to show that, although the public is always ready t odemand protection when there is a level crossing accident, many people are far from careful in taking advantage of the safety devices that have already been provided.

For instance, the C. P. R. kept a record from October 16 until December showing the number of people who passed under crossing gates.

A few figures from one day's record are significant:

Main street, Farnham	37
St. Louis street, Farnham	38
Royce avenue, Toronto	111
St. Maurice street, Three Rivers	196
	382

If at four crossings on the Canadian Pacific 382 people in one day paid no attention to the dropped gates, it can be imagined how many people throughout Canada daily take the same chance.

These safety devices are installed to protect the public; yet thousands every day walk under the gates and cross the tracks in spite of the warning.

Actions of this kind weaken the demand for protection, and give the railways a chance to say that people are not sincere in their insistence that the menace of level crossings must be eliminated.

A very good New Year's resolution for Peterborough people would be to decide to follow safety first principles this year and only cross protected railway tracks when the gates are up.

PROTECT THE CHILDREN.

Two dispatches in the Examiner on Wednesday emphasize the desirability of Ontario municipalities providing facilities where children can enjoy tobogganing and coasting in safety.

One item from Toronto told of the death of a seven-year-old boy when his sled collided with a tree; the other of the killing of a Brantford youngster when his coaster was run over by a motor car.

Peterborough children are taking similar chances every day because there is no place where they can indulge in a sleigh-ride—the pastime so dear to young Canadians—without risking their lives.

If they use the roadways they are in constant danger of injury from the vehicular traffic; on the other hand, at Victoria Park, although safe from automobiles, the bottom of the slide runs through the trees and there is always the possibility of an accident such as took the life of the little Toronto victim on Wednesday.

The incoming Council should give this matter some thought.

Coasting, a typically Canadian pastime that is bot h exhilirating and health-giving, should not be made impossible for the thousands of city youngsters who enjoy it, but under the present conditions the recreation will either have to be provided for or prohibited.

The matter should not be delayed until a serious accident gives point to the demand for better facilities.

BARON GEDEON'S FLIGHT.

This will be a sight worth seeing: Baron Aladar von Gedeon will move to Western Canada from Hungary next spring. He will bring with him his 5,000 tenants who have been living on his European estates —1,100 families in all.

The Baron is buying 200,000 acres of Canadian farm land for his mighty flock. Canada is pleased at the prospect of immigration on such a big scale by hard-working, law-abiding people.

Baron Gedeon and his army of followers, it develops, are leaving Hungary because they are dissatisfied with the way the map has been redrawn. In sense, they are political refugees.

A greater inducement, we imagine, is the prospect of escaping from European war debts, which impose a terrific tax burden on peasants in particular.

This newspaper occasionally has predicted big-scale migrations of debt-wearied Europeans to other countries. It stands to reason that, especially in the former Central Powers, the people will not placidly continue to reside indefinitely where the economic pinch is so tight. It is human nature for a man to move on with his family when the task of making a living looks hopeless.

Baron Gedeon heads one of these predicted exoduses.

Millions will leave Europe—if they can get out. Getting out may not be so easy. Some countries over there already have the doors locked in an attempt to keep people at home. Russia is the most outstanding instance, with a gigantic smuggling organization to sneak emigrants over the border.

As time goes on and Europeans waken to the truth of their predicament and begin to depart in multitudes, Governments will take drastic measures to keep them at home. A resident lost is a taxpayer and soldier gone.

If the United States keeps the bars up, Europe's millions will flock to Canada, Mexico, South America, Africa and Australia.

How long would you, for example, continue living in Europe with impoverishing war debts grinding you down and the spectre of another war lurking just over the horizon?

THE HYDRO RATES.

Citizens of St. Thomas will be at one with the City Council in protesting against the action of the Ontario Hydro-electric Commission, says the St. Thomas Times-Journal, which demands that the local commission increase the hydro rates. The local commission is doing fine on the present scale; it has a surplus, and as a business principle there is no need for boosting the price of a product that is already on a paying basis. St. Thomas will not stand alone if a concerted move is made to limit the jurisdiction of the Provincial commission so as to prevent unnecessary interference with local rates. A great many municipalities are quite willing to run their own business, accepting their own responsibilities, and if they pay the Ontario commission's bills for electricity it should be no concern of the commission what the local rates are, provided they are such as to ensure the continued solvency of the local utility. The duty and authority of the Ontario commission could very well end at the point of delivery to the cities, leaving the local people to make the proper charges. Only when the local government falls down on its payments, or is obviously jeopardizing the security, need there be any ground for outside interference in local management.

Public utilities are very well managed as a rule. The best business brains are always at their disposal, and when they are making the service pay, there can be no moral or expedient ground to justify disturbing them. They should have complete autonomy over their own affairs. When th eOntario commission delivers the supply and gets the cash, that is all they need worry about. Time enough to butt in on purely local matters when the local commissioners are not doing their duty. St. Thomas is one of the places which is more than making good, and there are other cities which equally resent the domination of the Provincial authority.

THE BORROWINGS OF 1924.

Canada borrowed $560,603,034 during the year 1924. The mere statement of such a fact will not, however, awaken any particular interest, much less anxiety. We have grown accustomed to borrowing. Yet, by comparison, the sum just indicated is really stupendous. It is much larger than was our national debt 47 years after Confederation. Indeed, having begun with a liability of $93,000,000, as taken over from the Provinces, our obligations in that regard grew at an average rate of less than $3,000,000 per annum up to the outbreak of the war.

Of the total borrowings during the year, $234,991,400 was on account of the Dominion and Provincial Governments. In the case of the Dominion, however, a considerable part of the aggregate was in the nature of refunding. Municipalities took $90,391,335, corporations $65,095,299, and the railways $161,125,000. This last amount is suggestive of the peculiar accounting methods which have been adopted by the King administration, and which have the effect of deceiving the people as to the state of the public debt; for, instead of issuing Dominion bonds for the purpose of financing the Canadian National Railway, as had been done up to two or three years ago, it is now the practice to float loans in the name of one or more of the units and give them value by adding the guarantee of Government. This enables Mr. King to say the public debt has not been increased; but everyone must see that a guarantee is precisely the same thing as an ordinary capital liability. In other words, the difference is wholly a matter of bookkeeping.

One cannot look at the borrowing of 1924 without feeling that our courage in the matter may, after all, be a form of imprudence. No one may say that it is always a dangerous or undesirable thing to go into debt. It is not. But there may be very genuine danger in doing so, nevertheless. It all depends on the purpose for which the money is borrowed, and the ability of the country to carry the liability. To boast that we are no longer afraid to borrow may only show that we are foolishly disregarding the essential and fundamental disabilities attaching to debt in any form or degree. That we have thrown our fears to the winds is very clearly indicated by the enormous sums we have of late been borrowing.

It may be that a little of the Scot's horror of debt would do us good. Certainly no serious harm could come to national interests if we made an earnest effort to cut our coats according to our cloth. It might mean a slowing down of our pace; but, on the other hand, it would avoid the consequences of rashness. "Fixed charges" have come to have an ugly meaning in our national life, and yet they are always created by debt. To meet such charges, taxes have to be imposed; and, very clearly, all taxes which grow out of fixed charges can only be got rid of by wiping out the debt. Other countries are reducing their debts, and it is distinctly disturbing that Canada is doing just the opposite.—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Don't forget to write it 1925.

There were more candidates nominated for municipal offices in some of the nearby towns than there were people at Peterborough's nomination proceedings.

One New Year resolution that seems to be lasting is that in regard to the non-smoking of the Christmas gift cigars.

It is evident that a lot of Peterborough people have yet to learn that they are hurting their own interests when they refuse to take any part in the selection of the members of the city's governing bodies.

There is nothing selfish about the Canadian West. The Prairie Provinces have had four cold spells in a row and have shipped them all down into Ontario.

That cold may turn into "Flu," Grippe or, even worse, Pneumonia, unless you take care of it at once.

Rub good old Musterole on the congested parts and see how quickly it brings relief.

Colds are merely congestion. Musterole, made from pure oil of mustard, camphor, menthol and other simple ingredients, is a counter-irritant which stimulates circulation and helps break up the cold.

As effective as the messy old mustard plaster, it does the work without the blister.

Just rub it on with your finger-tips. You will feel a warm tingle as it enters the pores, then a cooling sensation that brings welcome relief. 40c and 75c, at all druggists.

A THOUGHT.

MARGARET CURRIE SAYS:

It is just as important that potential fathers should be pure, healthy men as that potential mothers should be pure, healthy women. Some day the world will really awaken to the economic waste of disease that affects future generations. Some day, and that very soon, the laws will not all be made by men, and then perhaps we shall see how criminal it is to expect that women should bear all the burden of immorality.

Some day women will demand a clean bill of health from a man before marrying him, and will refuse to bring children into the world with the handicaps of inherited disease.—Montreal Star.

Maxwell Anderson of Burnbrae Celebrated His 80th Birthday Sunday.

BURNBRAE, Jan. 2.—One of the oldest residents of the Burnbrae district, Mr. Maxwell Anderson, celebrated his 80th birthday on Sunday, December 28. Mr. Anderson was the recipient of many birthday greetings from a large circle of friends and relatives as well as a letter of congratulations from the session of St. Andrews of which body he has been a member for thirty-nine years.

Mr. Anderson is a native-born Canadian, his parents having moved here from Scotland several years before his birth. They settled on the farm in East Seymour, which was then pretty much wilderness and succeeded, as did many other pioneers in hewing out a home for themselves. A large family was reared, of which only Mr. Max Anderson and one brother Alec of Marmora survive. Mr. Anderson still resides on the original farm, which has been operated by descendants of the original pioneers for over ninety years. It is from many more such traditional inheritances as this that the well-known Scotch-Canadian community of Burnbrae has been built.

The Election Field.

A number of local men are in the municipal field this year. Mr. Andrew Milne, who has been a member of Seymour Council for three years is offering himself as a candidate for the office of deputy-reeve and Mr. Robt. Linn of Menie, is running for the office of councillor. Mr. W. A. Hume was also nominated as councillor but has not decided what course he will pursue at date of writing. We wish our local candidates every success.

Mrs. George Walkinshaw of Bloomfield spent a few days in the vicinity.

Miss Isabel Cleugh of Toronto Normal School is home for the holiday season.

A considerable movement in grain has been taking place with prices on the advance. Oats were quoted a week ago at 55 cents to 58 cents, but are going up. Rye is being delivered at $1.25 per bushel which is considered too expensive for pig feed. Mill feeds have also advanced in sympathy with whole grains, so that a number of dairy cows will have to be content with less than their usual supply of concentrates.

Eggs are somewhat easier, local dealers paying 45 cents per dozen at point of delivery.

Hogs are advancing slightly. Ten cents per pound is offered by all the drovers for this week. The price of cattle seems to be dull during the holiday market.

LEFT ANCIENT BIRD

Poultry Thieves Active in Newcastle District.

COBOURG, Jan. 2.—Poultry and grain stealing are stated to be carried on with vigor in the vicinity of Newcastle. Among those who have suffered by these depredations are Chris Low, Will Lake and Frank Bennett. One farmer, it is told, had his flock of birds depleted until only the grandsire was left for his own Christmas dinner. This is a signal disappointment after feeding and caring for fowl throughout the summer and autumn season.

Tattooing is on the wane, even among sailors. This isn't surprising, for the lure of the sea has also waned. Tattooing is a Chinese art. Sailors "took to it" to show that they had travelled landsmen, envying sailor life, aped them.

The American drift is away from the briny deep and toward the inland west. It has been demonstrated by the popularity of such fiction and movies as "The Covered Wagon" and by the national lack of interest in the merchant marine and navy.

TRENTON WOMAN HAS HAD 102 BIRTHDAYS

Born in Trenton in 1822—One of the Oldest Women in Ontario.

COBOURG, Jan. 2.—One of the oldest residents of Central Ontario Mrs. Susan M. Carman, who resides at Trenton, celebrated during the Yuletide season the 102nd anniversary of her birth. Mrs. Carman was born at Trenton in 1822, being the oldest of eleven children born to Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon Hawley. Her parents belonged to a U.E.L. family, and she is stated to be the first white child born in the Town of Trenton. Mrs. Carman is in possession of all her faculties and attributes her good health and longevity, it is stated, to wholesome food, proper dress and regular hours. She does not approve of some of the present day freaks of fashion and thinks the wearing of clothing that is not sufficiently protective is ruining the health of some of the younger generation.

Old Landmark Removed.

The old show building at Newcastle has just been pulled down thereby doing away with one of the old landmarks of the village. In it was located the first post office, used in the days when the stage coach delivered the mail, once, twice or thrice a week as the case might be, and before the building of the railways.

WIZARDRY.

Radio, to most people, is an invention of the last few years. Yet it is more than 23 years since Marconi received the first wireless signal broadcast across the Atlantic from England. Six years before, he had built the first practical wireless telegraph.

More than a quarter of a century has been devoted, by an army of genuis, to bringing your receiving set to its present stage of development. And it's still in babyhood. The super-het of today will seem very crude alongside the sets used a quarter century in the future.

NEIGHBOUR SAVES HOUSE FROM FIRE

Sa wBlaze Through Window of John Waters' Home at Trent Bridge.

TRENT RIVER, Dec. 31.—The ice harvesters have started work this week cutting in the back channel. The ice is very thick for so early in the season.

What might have been a serious fire was averted by the prompt action of Mr. W. Inkster last evening. Mr. John Waters built a fire in the front room stove at his residence and left some kindling near by which caught from the overheated stove. Mr. Waters had gone to near Campbellford to bring Mrs. Waters home. Seeing the blaze through the window Mr. Inkster broke into the house and soon had the fire extinguished. The only damage was caused by smoke.

Miss Gertie Longmuir of Toronto was home for Christmas week.

G. B. Airhart, proposed by D. E. Bell and seconded by Rev. P. Caiger-Watson was re-elected reeve unanimously.

There are many aspirants to the office of councillor as the following nominations testify.

Arthur Sweet, Frederick Johnston, A. T. Neal, F. N. Marett, John Jones, D. E. Bell, J. Reid, J. H. Wright.

Reeve's Address.

Reeve G. B. Airhart thanked the ratepayers for the honor they had again accorded him. With them, he also thanked the council for the assistance given in the interests of the village. He further thanked the Booster Club for its assistance and extra advertising of Marmora. He declared that the village had, through its Booster Club, benefitted financially and morally. He paid tribute to the work of Mr. W. F. Bowen in popularizing Crowe Lake. Dealing with local occurences of the past year, he reminded those present that there had only been two fires and in the case of one building destroyed thereby a better building now replaced it.

He remarked that while the tax rate was a mill less last year than the previous year, he fas not in a position to make any promises regarding a further reduction next year. Continuing, he reviewed some matters in connection with County Council activities. He concluded with references to the proposed park, Hydro developments, and Continuation School.

Candidates For Council

Councillor F. N. Marett, dealt with the work of the Fire and Light Committee. He considered the two essential things for any council to be progress and economy. He was in the fight again and he asked for support.

M. S. Doupe followed with a breezy little speech, soliciting support of his candidature for the School Board.

Councillor J. Reid dealt concisely with the work of the streets committee. He had warm praise for the work of Mr. McCoy and his men on the back streets. In common with other speakers, he congratulated the reeve on his re-election.

H. A. Connors declared that he had decided to resign his position this year.

Councillor Fred Johnston said he was in the field again and though he asked for support, admitted that there were men who were not in the council who would make as good councillors as the present ones.

Mr. J. Burns, ex-reeve of Madoc, who was present, addressed the meeting briefly.

Mr. D. E. Bell followed with a brief appeal for support and Mr. J. H. Wright the concluding speaker provoked mirth with a short humorous speech.

Quotes Engineer's Letter Approving Norwood Road for Suburban Area.

INVITES REPLY

Again for the benefit of the public for I can plainly see that Mr. Armstrong will jump at his own conclusions whether right or wrong. Copy of Minute of Sub-Area Commission dated April 25, 1922, Mr. Deyell in the chair. On motion of Messrs. Deyell and Brown the Commission assumed the following as extensions to the present system subject to the approval of the Highway Department. That is to say:

2 miles added to Road No. 19.
2 miles added to Road No. 17.
2 miles added to Road No. 14.
2 miles added to Road No. 5.
2 miles added to Road No. 8b.
2 miles added to Road No. 3.

Enclosed find blue print indicating such extensions. Awaiting your action in the matter, we remain,

Your respectfully,
E. Deyell, Chairman of Commission.
W. Brown, Member of Commission.
Ed. M. Elliott, Clerk of Commission.

Reply From Department.

Toronto, June the 30th, 1922.
Mr. Ed. M. Elliott,
County Clerk of Peterboro,
Court House, Peterboro, Ont.

Dear Sir,— With reference to your letter with respect to extensions of Suburban Roads under the jurisdiction of the Peterboro Suburban Road Commission, we wish to advise you that extensions of County Roads No. 14, 17 and 19 meet with the approval of this Department.

Yours truly,
R. C. MUIR,
Chief Engineer of Municipal Roads.

Toronto, August the 24th, 1922.
E. M. Elliott, Esq.,
County Clerk of Peterboro,
Court House, Peterboro, Ont.

Dear Sir,— With further reference to your letter of July 3rd, with reference to a resolution passed by the Peterboro Road Commission requesting extensions of County Roads No. 8-B and 3. As requested in my letter of June 30th, we have received a copy of resolution passed by the Commission designating the said roads as suburban roads and we now wish to advise you that the extensions of roads Nos. 8-B and 3 meet with the approval of this Department. These roads refer to the Norwood road and the road to Hale's bridge.

Yours truly,
R. C. MUIR,
Chief Engineer of Municipal Roads.

The above is the last correspondence this office has had with regard to the Norwood road nor has any intimation came from any member of the Department.

Mr. Armstrong stated in his first letter, "While not in the confidence of either the City or the Department the writer is strongly of the opinion that neither body have the slightest intention of paying one single cent."

At Keene nomination he is credited with saying that he had the order to stop work on the Norwood road in his pocket he also intimates such in his last letter.

Will Mr. Armstrong produce his authority as I have every resolution that I referred to here on file properly signed by either Chariman or Warden as the case called for.

He is credited with saying that I withheld communications from the Department. Come out with it, Mr. Armstrong or else retract to save your future troubles.

ED. M. ELLIOTT,
County Clerk.

Crowe; step dances by W. J. O'Leary, Sullivan Bros. of Lakefield and Messrs. Wm. Welsh and Max McKeiver, and musical selections by Messrs. Cuticura Heals Itching Eczema On Arms and Face

"My trouble began with red blotches and itching and burning on my arms and face, and then eczema broke out with a rash. My face was disfigured and my clothing aggravated the breaking out on my arms. I could not put my hands in water, neither could I do my regular work. At night I lost my rest on account of the irritation.

"The trouble lasted about a month. I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment and they helped me and after using two cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment I was completely healed." (Signed) Mrs. Leon Hallock, 104 Atkins St., Bellows Falls, Vt.

How Fat Actress Became Slender

Many stage people now depend entirely upon Marmola Prescription Tablets for reducing and controlling fat. One clever actress tells us that she reduced steadily and easily by using this new form of the famous Marmola Prescription. Now, by taking Tablets several times a year, she keeps her weight just right. All druggists sell Marmola Prescription Tablets at one dollar for a box or if you prefer can secure them direct from the Marmola Co., General Motors Bldg., Detroit, Mich. If you have not tried them, do so. They are pleasant to take and effective.

WEDDING BELLS.

WARSAW, January 2 — A wedding of unusual interest took place in the Presbyterian Church on Christmas Day at 11 o'clock a.m., when Mary Olive Violet, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Clements, became the bride of Mr. William John Laporte, both of Warsaw. Rev. W. Atkinson performed the marriage ceremony. Miss Rita Dinsdale, Peterborough, cousin of the bride, was bridesmaid, Ralph Hamilton was best man, and little Kathleen Dunford was ring-bearer.

The bride entered the church with her father, who gave her away. She wore a handsome gown of white canton crepe, trimmed with pearls, and had a corsage bouquet of Ophelia roses, and lilies of the valley in her hair.

Miss Dinsdale wore a pale blue silk gown, with paper-white narcissus corsage bouquet. The little ring bearer looked very sweet in a rose-pink silk frock, with white sash; on the little golden tray which she carried was a sprig of holly, on which was the ring.

Miss Elsie Tucker played the wedding march from Lohengrin. The church was beautifully decorated by Mesdames Munro and William Dunford, and was well filled, for Miss Clements was well known in the village and neighbourhood.

After the ceremony the bridal party returned to the bride's home, where they, with about forty guests, practically all relatives, sat down to a fowl dinner. The dining-room and parlour were gay with Christmas decorations.

There were many beautiful and useful gifts, including quite a sum of money, silver, and household linen.

The bride's going away dress was a suit of navy tricotine, and she wore a brown satin hat, brown shoes, and brown gloves, with handsome duvetyn coat trimmed with opossum fur.

Mr. and Mrs. Laporte are spending their honeymoon visiting friends in Millbrook, Lindsay, Fenelon Falls, and Toronto. After their return they will live near Lang, Otonabee.

SMITH—PHILLIPS.

COBOURG, Jan. 2.—The marriage took place at the parsonage, Cobourg, on Wednesday of Mr. Jas. Cecil Smith of Colborne and Miss Sarah Phillips, Cobourg. Mr. Thos. Percival Smith and Miss Marian E. Baxter attended as witnesses. Rev. R. F. Stillman officiated.

MORLEY SMITHSON TO OTONABEE RATEPAYERS

To the Ratepayers of the Township of Otonabee:

Ladies and Gentlemen,— In respectfully soliciting your vote and influence to re-elect me as Reeve, I should like to draw your attention to the fact that, during the past year, as Reeve, I carried out my promises of a year ago, in so far as it lay in my power to do so.

The financial condition of the township has been improved, and the situation frankly dealt with. The township has also received a fairer share of the county road expenditure, which is made evident in the better condition of such roads. Any county work carried out under my supervision has been done in such manner that it will not havce to be a continual charge in the way of repairs or replacement.

If re-elected, I assure the ratepayers a continuance of the same reasonable business course, and a reduction in the tax rate if possible, and a frank statement of the county and township affairs at all times.

Hoping for a continuance of your confidence, and wishing you a happy and prosperous New Year, I remain,

Yours faithfully,
MORLEY E. SMITHSON.

DUMB BELLE'S EXERCISES.

(By Cynthia Grey)

Even if a girl has absolutely nothing stirring north of her plucked eyebrows, she still can make a hit with the men, if only she has a good "line."

She may not know enough to come in out of the rain, or even that it is raining. But her collection of wisecracks gets her "by."

Her answer to all remarks is: "And you're the guy that knows it!"

She replies to all questions: "Hello Mr. Enquire-Within!"

When her partner can dance she calls him a "Non-Skid."

When he can't, she giggles, "Brier-Hopper!"

And yet there's nobody home, there never will be anybody at home, and honestly, nobody ever lived there!

N. DOUROS WAS HOST

Provided Merry New Year's Eve Party for Many Patrons.

N. Douros of the Albion restaurant was host to some of his patrons at an impromptu New Year's eve celebration, with the usual accessories, that provided a merry party for those who helped arrange it and also for other late-faring patrons who happened along.

An orchestra composed of Joe Nazimok, violin; Ted McCarthy, xylophone, and Stan Hensley, drums, supplied music for dancing and also solo numbers which were augmented by other guests. Songs and choruses stretched out a happy entertainment to the morning hours, and Mr. Douros is reported to have surprised his guests with "O Sole Mio", singing it in Italian with quite a pleasing baritone, although Caruso probably turned over in his tomb if his spirit was in hearing of that selection. Mr. Harry Dugan and Mr. Will Garden added great enjoyment to the party with several dancing numbers. The guests enjoyed the entertainment and conveyed a warm vote of thanks to their host.

STIRLING NOMINATIONS

C. B. McGuire and Charles Van Allen to Run for Reeveship.

STIRLING, January 2. — There was a fairly good attendance of the ratepayers at the nomination meeting here, and the usual large list of candidates were nominated. An election is to be held to determine who will sit on the council board for 1925. Mr. C. B. McGuire, who has held the office of Reeve for five years, and Mr. Charles VanAllen, who served as a councillor for five years, but was not a member this year, are the aspirants for the reeveship, and the following are those from whom the voters will have to choose four men to act as councillors for 1925: L. Meiklejohn, Earl Bailey, Hugh Morton, Sam Hatton, Jetty Thompson, Thomas Cranston, and Robert Christie.

Nominations were also held for three trustees for the school board, due to the two year term of Messrs. Bedford, Alger and Ward having expired. These three gentlemen were the only ones nominated and were therefore declared elected by acclamation.

All the nominees were called to the platform by Clerk Luery, who presided at the meeting.

The members of the 1924 council were called upon first. Mr. McGuire gave a very full account of the financial condition of the village; there was some criticism offered regarding the expenditures in connection with the schools, but the chairman of the board being absent, also the secretary of the board, the questions were not as satisfactorily answered as they might have been.

As the two largest items that have to be considered in the levying of taxes it seems reasonable—as one of the speakers stated—that the chairman of the school board should be present in order to answer any criticism that may be offered. The reeve is always on hand to answer the critics re the county expenses.

Mr. Meiklejohn followed Mr. McGuire. His theme was mostly regarding the working of the electric light department, which is certainly in a prosperous condition, having to its credit over $10,000.00.

The other members of the 1924 council, viz., Messrs. Bailey, Morton and Hatton, spoke briefly, and then the veteran member of the school board, Mr. John S. Morton, gave an account of the work of that body, but as he did not expect to speak for the whole board his remarks were brief.

Then followed the new candidates for office, the first being Mr. Van Allen, the nominee for the reeveship, and Messrs. Thompson, Harlow and T. Cranston. The other candidates were absent.

Personals.

Mrs. Clifford Hatton and children are visiting her father, Mr. L. Meiklejohn.

Neil Bissonnette is home from Seaforth to spend the holidays with his mother.

Mr. Will West has purchased a half interest in the Stirling creamery.

Miss Ida Marshall, who is at Macdonald College, Guelph, is home for the holidays.

SCOTS CELEBRATED "HOGMANAY" WITH DANCE AND SUPPER

Caledonian Club Held an Excellent Dance in Victoria Hall.

A PRESENTATION.

To Scots all over the world, Hogmanay, the old name for the last day of the year in Scotland before the New Year's Day (Neur dae) as said in the land of heather in their own dialect, is celebrated in many ways. Some prefer to bring in the New Year by attending a Watch Night service, or a Hogmanay dance.

Then there is the Scots family that spends the bringing in of the New Year at their "ain fireside" with a light burning to await, maybe, a 'first-fitter." If not, retire at the sma' hour recalling memories of the native heath and thankful for the many blessings.

Scots Celebrate.

In this city the Caledonian Club held their usual Hogmanay dance, which was largely attended by local Scots and families. The proceedings opened up with dancing until the hour approached—twelve—when the company gathered together in one big circle hand-in-hand to sing "Auld Guid New Year Tae Ane an' A'" in two verses and chorus which runs thus:

"A guid New Year tae ane an' a',
An' mony may ye see;
An' during a' th- years tae come,
O happy may ye be."

Thereafter, silence reigned a few minutes, then the assembly broke into the great song, "Auld Lang Syne" in the customary Scots fashion with many a heart full and eyes with a tear that could tell many a story of the years gone by while they went around the company to wish them the compliments of the year with a good grip of the hand. Dancing continued until the small hours of the morning.

During the evening excellent refreshments were served.

Presented with Umbrellas.

A very pleasant surprise was sprung on two enthusiastic local Scots by Mr. Andrew Jackson, president, on behalf of the Caledonian Club, to Mr. William Petrie, treasurer of the club for the past seven years, and Mr. George Low, secretary of the club for four years, when they received a handsome umbrella each as a token of esteem for their excellent work. Both gentlemen acknowledged the gifts in a few well-chosen words.

Caledonian Orchestra.

Excellent music was supplied by the club orchestra composed of Mr. Alex. Heaton, on the piano, who added the characteristic touch to the dancing, along with Mr. Donald Anderson, violinist; Mr. Tom Craig, cornetist, and Mr. Whalley, drums.

Falling Hair, Dandruff, Itching, Indicates An Unhealthy Scalp

Neglected hair soon starts to fall, far more than is natural. Dandruff comes and then baldness. Seven Sutherland Sisters' Complete Treatment is a new and entirely different hair preparation, containing as it does the new discovery Hair Fertiliser. Its one object is to get your hair in a healthy growing condition—and it does it.

Dandruff and the germ of baldness simply cannot exist on the scalp that is occasionally treated with our Hair Fertilizer, and the best part of it is you only use it quite sparingly two or three times a week. An inexpensive and thoroughly effective treatment. There is nothing like Seven Sutherland Sisters' Complete Treatment, $1.60 at Roos' Drug Store, or Shoemaker's Drug Store.

For sale at Bond's Drug Store and Giles, the Druggist.

CHRISTMAS TREE

Annual Entertainment of Gospel Hall Held Wednesday Night.

At the Gospel Hall on Wednesday night the annual Christmas tree service was held. The hall was too small to accommodate the large number. Some only got inside the door.

Every boy and girl of the Sunday School received some useful gift, and at the close a case of oranges were distributed.

A notable part of the entertainment was the recitation of every memory verse for each Sunday of the year, given by Miss Elsie Case, giving chapter and verse without mistake, and in order. Mr. J. A. Spink, of England, assisted Mr. Curtis in the stripping of the tree, which was loaded with good things for all.

"CORRIGAN" by EDMUND SNELL

VII.—PROTECTING PAMELA.

Fellowes—long, lean and hatchet-faced—looked up at his employer.

"Well?" he demanded, presently. "What d'you think of it?"

Corrigan set his feet wide apart on the springy turf and surveyed a squat, square erection of such startling newness that its yellow timbers glistened in the light of the noonday sun.

"There's only one thing wrong with it that I can see."

"Well?" snapped back the assistant, fully prepared to defend the slightest adverse criticism of a masterpiece of which he was not unjustly proud.

Corrigan laughed.

"It's the best bungalow we've got—and a deuced sight too comfortable for a mere bachelor!"

Fellowes winced. He could never get over the idea that the genial colossus he served was trying to get in a dig at him over the fair female crook he was once almost beguiled into marrying.

"That's not my fault. What chance is there, I'd like to know, of knocking across a decent girl in this forsaken wilderness?"

"Precious little," admitted the other cheerfully; "but I can't help thinking you had something of the sort in mind when you designed this palatial residence." He strolled leisurely to the foot of the steps leading up to a broad veranda that completely encircled the house. "It'd made a vast difference, Fellowes.

The assistant nodded.

"I know. I'm essentially a gregarious beast. I wasn't cut out for a single existence. When I look round at other fellers who don't even deserve the luck they've had in the matrimonial market—it makes me positively envious. Take young Boyce, for example. When you ran into him, he was coming east on spec.; he'd nothing in particular with which to support a wife and not the remotest prospect of qualifying for a job that'd enable him to do so. And yet, before you took him under your paternal wing, he'd persuaded one of the nicest women I've ever met to throw in her lot with him. It beats me!"

They gained the veranda together and settled themselves in newly arrived Sandakan chairs. Fellowes pushed across the cigarettes.

"Boyce was lucky," said Corrigan, helping himself, "and the fact that he married Mrs. Boyce went a long way with me when I decided to offer him a billet. There are all kinds of girls in this wicked old world, but, as far as our sort of existence is concerned you can safely divide 'em into two categories—the women who fidget, and those who don't. Fidgety wives negative any good work their husbands may do, they're never happy anywhere and always wishing they were somewhere else; that kind of restlessness is infernally catching, and the man who sees more of 'em than anybody else eventually succumbs to the infection. Now, Diana's just the reverse. From the first she made up her mind to like the east and she didn't accept Boyce with her eyes shut. She knows his weaknesses better than he thinks, and tackles them in a quiet, unobstrusive fashion that is a credit to her. An observant man can detect traces of it every day. He's dropped that confounded drawl of his already and that knife-edge crease of his slacks is pretty well a thing of the past. Now, if you could find a second Diana——!"

Fellowes looked up sharply.

"Thought you didn't approve of married assistants?"

"I don't; in the broader meaning of the term, I'm all against 'em; but there are exceptions—and Diana Boyce is one of them."

The first assistant clasped his hands at the back of his neck and yawned.

"It's no go, old son," he said. "I'm afraid I'm fated to appreciate the inner comforts of this bungalow alone! Boarded ceilings, Corrigan! None of your rat-infested sago thatches either! I caught Arundill observing it enviously from the other side of the wire. Queer beast, Arundill! I gave him a polite 'good morning'—and he turned his back abruptly and strode away. I don't fancy he cottons altogether to the idea of having neighbours. Millett says he wanted this strip of land himself, but started negotiations too late."

Corrigan flicked his ash over the rail and stared upward.

"Watch Arundill!" he murmured presently.

"Oh! Why?"

PRESIDENTS WON CURLING CONTEST

Yesterday's Curling Tournament Was a Big Success—The Scores.

The Presidents once more showed their superiority over the Vice-Presidents of the Peterboro Curling Club when they defeated them in the annual New Year tournament for the Kenner and Fitzgerald silver cup yesterday by the total score of 201 shots to 181 in one of the closest contested tournaments held in the local rink in a number of years.

The Presidents nosed their opponents out in nine games and tied them in two, while the Vice-Presidents tied two games and won six, making the contest very close and interesting.

In the morning's games the Vice-Presidents showed up well, taking three of the seven games played and tieing one, while on the total for the morning's play the Vice-Skips were three points up on their opponents, the score being 77 to 74 in their favor.

In the afternoon the tide changed and the Presidents took four of the seven games played and advanced four ahead of their assistants when they piled up a score of 80 shots, holding the Vice-Skips to 73.

There were only five games left to be run off in the evening, and it was evident by the large crowd present that much interest was being taken in the finish. The Vice Presidents took the first game when McDermid's rink lost to Taylor's quartette by 8 to 7. The Vice Skips were only three shots behind the leaders at this stage, and a little bit of luck might have done wonders here, but when Kenner came along and trounced Oke 16 to 7 all hopes for the Vices were gone. Lang and Chenhall played a tie game, the score being 8 all. Turner and Dobbin failed to make an appearance and their game was called off and Donaldson wound up the tournament in great shape when his rink doubled the score on Henry's quartette. The final score was Presidents, 201; Vice Presidents, 181. Bob Hicks, who is one of the Presidents, told one of the loosers today that it was time enough for the Vice Presidents to win when they became Presidents.

Progress Flag Flies High On Mayor Turner's Office

Flying from the flag staff above the Mayor's office on New Year's Day was a bargee flag, reading "1925. Progress." This thought is in keeping with the note of optimism contained in the Mayor's short address at the Women's Council meeting in the City Hall on Tuesday evening, and as contained in his New Year's greetings to the citizens. As pointed out, it is in the quality rather than quantity of oil which makes the best light—so with energy we will all pull together for a prosperous New Year.

Frank Adams Won Race Just Forty Years Ago; Is Now City Treasurer

How Peterborough's City Treasurer trimmed three of the best canoeists in Ontario forty years ago is told in a story in a recent Toronto newspaper, accompanied with a picture of the four contestants.

The race was held off Grindstone Island, near Gananoque, in 1884 Frank Adams, in his English Canoe the ADA M.S. (a play on his own name), was anything but stripped for the gruelling work ahead, the article says. Though his competitors wore trunks and sleeveless guernseys and he was in "longs" on both legs and arms, he figuratively, walked away from them. "He made a show of them," says Hugh Neilson who refereed the race and took the picture.

Mr. Adams' competitors were M. Fisk Johnston, member of the Senate Hansard staff, Ottawa; Edwin Gould, millionaire son of Jay Gould, and J. L. Weller, formerly of the Trent Canal, then chief engineer of the Welland Canal and now in Niagara.

Mr. Adams was rated as a first class canoeist at this stage in his career, and his athletic life has undoubtedly fitted him well for his onerous duties as Treasurer of the City of Peterborough.

Peterboro Defeated Aura Lee 3-2 - Hamilton Tigers Win From Canadiens 4-2

PETES WIN FIRST SCHEDULED SENIOR O.H.A. GAME IN TORONTO DEFEATING AURA LEE BY 3 TO 2

Fifth Successive Victory This Season at Arena—Close Checking a Feature.

AUSPICIOUS START

Peterboro Missed Scoring Chances in First Period.

(By P. D. C.)

The Peterboro Hockey Club made its Senior O.H.A. debut most auspiciously last night and hung up its sixth victory in a row by beating Aura Lee at the Toronto Arena, 3 goals to 2, after a hard fought game in which the blue shirts had twice to come from behind.

It was 1-1 at the end of the first period and 3-2 at the close of the second, the last twenty minutes being scoreless.

Bill Marsden's fast young team with a squad of speedy skaters and persistent checkers gave the Petes plenty of trouble. They laid down a poke checking barrage that the blue shirts found a lot of difficulty in solving, although without detracting anything from the game fight put up by Aura Lee, it was undoubtedly the case that the winners did not rise to the heights reached in the S.P.A. series, particularly against the Soo. Aura Lee's close checking had something to do with that of course, but, making allowance for that factor, the Petes' work was not as clean cut as usual and they lost scoring opportunities with the defence beaten that should have been cashed in for a substantial lead.

But they had punch enough to twice overcome a one-goal margin, take the lead themselves in the second period and then hold off the desperate Aura Lee sallies in the last stanza when the clan of Marsden came on at top speed in a fine effort to save the game.

Missed Chances.

Early in the battle the Petes were inside seven or eight times with nobody but Moore to beat but something went wrong at the critical moment. Moore fooled them on three or four occasions and they fooled themselves the rest of the time, with the result that it was hard going later on when the red shirts made a last period effort to wrest the laurels away from them.

Aura Lee will make plenty of trouble in Senior Group No. 1. They have youth, speed and determination and like all Aura Lee outfits they are never beaten until the timers have signed off. The Petes are satisfied to have grabbed off last night's fixture from them and expect Aura Lee to make it a tough argument for Parkdale and Varsity.

All Moore, the losers' net guardian made a flock of sensational stops of close-in shots and was a tower of strength. Jack Cain, checking with his usual vigor gave him plenty of protection and showed his old time speed in rushing while Walkem was not far behind him in effectiveness. The three regular forwards, Burke, Bond and Shaw all turned in nice games with the first named perhaps the outstanding star, while Clayton, former Toronto Canoe Club junior player and "Shrimp" Morris a graduate from last year's Aura Lee juniors were just as good as the players who started on the line. All the Aura Lee forwards used the poke check very effectively to break up Peterboro rushes and they broke fast themselves when the opening offered itself.

The Petes' Players.

For the Petes Joe Dwyer, although he had hard luck on a goal that slid in off his skate, performed in great style. Aura Lee did not get inside as often as the Petes but they gave him plenty to do and he made some beautiful saves. Parker and McLeod both checked well and Parker's rushing, especially in the first two periods was marked by clever stickhandling that should have been rewarded by more than the one counter he registered.

Up on the line Bailey's work was outstanding until he hurt his bad leg when Tracey Shaw "gave him the knee" in the second period. He finished the game under difficulties. Collins was always prominent and his play for the winning goal was a flashy piece of work while Rose had a finger in two counters and did some effective stickhandling. Burgess broke into the scoring column with the goal that tied the score in the second period and was useful whenever sent out. Ranger was under the weather and did not get going as well as usual, his shooting being off the target all night.

The Line-Up.

Aural Lee—
Goal—Moore.
Defence—Walkem, Cain.
Centre—Shaw.
Right wing—Burke.
Subs—Morris, Clayton.

Peterboro—
Goal—Dwyer.
Defence—Parker, McLeod.
Centre—Collins.
Right wing—Bailey.
Left Wing—Ranger.
Subs—Rose, Burgess.
Referee—M. J. Rodden, Toronto.

The First Period.

Aura Lee had the first shot of the game on a nice rush by Shaw who could not beat Dwyer. Bailey retaliated with a pretty dash but Moore was in the way. Bailey came back again with a rush that beat Aura Lee's defence but his shot was wide. The checking was close but the Petes were having more success working in close. McLeod nearly scored after a fine dash, missing by inches and Parker worked right through only to have Moore flop to his knees in time to avert a counter. Aura Lee were having plenty of shots but were not getting in as well and it looked as if the blue shirts would be first to score. Parker and Collins worked inside and a goal seemed certain, but Moore made a great stop and Walkem grabbing the rebound off the goalie's pads tore down the centre of the ice and shooting as he reached the Petes' defence line notched the first counter of the game. Dwyer got his pads in front of the low, swift shot but the puck carromed into the net. Peterboro 1, Aura Lee 1.

The Petes were not long in tieing it up. Two minutes after, Parker got away and passed to Rose, who drilled a fast one at Moore. The Aura Lee net guardian made a nice save but before he could clear Parker swept in to bat in the rebound. Peterboro 2, Ara Lee 1.

Come From Behind.

The Petes pressed at the beginning of the second period, driving hard to take the lead. Bailey engineered a fine rush and gave Ranger a perfect pass close in but the left-winger laid his shot on Moore's pads. Bailey came right back again and stickhandled inside but Moore saved sensationally. And finally it was Aura Lee who scored—a soft one. A combined rush by the red shirts was foozled, the puck drifting into the corner. Frank Burke followed in and taking a pot shot from there was lucky enough to register when the rubber struck Dwyer's skate and slid into the net. Peterboro 1, Aura Lee 2.

The Petes let out a link to get up on even footing. Parker fooled the Aura Lee defence but Moore saved again. Then Rose worked in close with a fake pass and the Aura Lee goalie made another fine stop. He fell as he did so, however, and the rubber rebounded in front of the net. Burgess saw the opening, tore in fast and drove the puck against the twine, tieing the score. Peterboro 2, Aura Lee 2.

Bond drew the first penalty of the game for tripping Parker and Bailey followed a few seconds afterwards, also for tripping. After three minutes fast hockey Collins broke away down left wing, circled across the Aura Lee defence and going at top speed scooped a beauty from the right boards which Moore could not handle. Peterboro 3, Aura Lee 2.

That was the last counter of the game but it did not end the excitement. The Petes pressed for the rest of the period trying to increase their lead but failed to hang up another counter. Shaw put his knee into Bailey who had to be taken off for repairs while Shaw went to the penalty bench. Just as the period ended Burgess was chased for tripping.

The Last Period.

He had most of his penalty to serve in the last period and with the odd man advantage Aura Lee kept the Petes busy. And when the sides were even again the pressure kept up. The Petes had been sent out to play three men back on the defence and the result was that Aura Lee did most of the puck carrying while their checking was effective enough to keep the Petes one and two man attacks from getting anywhere. Dwyer was a busy individual for the rest of the night but they could not beat him from outside and the Petes checking was usually successful in keeping them from working in. There were plenty of anxious moments for the Peterboro supporters but the Petes nursed their slender lead through the storm and the final bell found them victorious in their first senior clash.

Hockey Team Denies Rumor of Dropping Out of Intermediate Race.

HAVE A CHANCE.

OSHAWA, January 2 (Canadian Press).—All the hockey dope which has been printed by sport writers in the papers throughout the towns of the Lake Shore Intermediate group that Oshawa would not carry on the schedule as adopted at the first of the season, owin gto dissatisfaction which arose at the beginning of the season over the splitting of the box office receipts between the rink and the team management was given a knockout yesterday, when the local representative of The Peterborough Examiner was a spectator at a workout of the Oshawa Intermediates, and afterwards visited the dressing-rooms, where he was assured that they would not only keep their engagement in Whitby to-night, but all others as arranged in the schedule sent into headouarters of the Ontario Amateur Hockey Association.

The local team as a whole showed contempt at the remark, "That owing to Oshawa having lost their first game in Trenton, they were ready to drop."

They admit that Trenton and Port Hope have got the edge in the group race for the month of December, but it is a long way before the end of the schedule, and they figure on being up at or near the top when the group schedule is completed on 2nd February.

SENIOR SEASON WILL OPEN HERE TUESDAY NIGHT

Hamilton Rowing Club Will Be Attraction in Opener.

REAL OPPOSITION

Scullers Will Make Petes Step All the Way.

Peterboro fans will get their first local taste of Senior O.H.A. hockey on Tuesday night when the Hamilton Rowing Club team, the dark horses of No. 1 group will be the attraction at Brock Street Rink.

It should be a worth while game and promises to attract a record crowd.

The Hamilton team surprised the hockey world the other night by giving Parkdale, Harry Watson and all, a terrific argument which the Paddlers just managed to win by one goal.

That showing will give them lots of courage and with a couple of additions to their line up, including Nelson, who was with the Tigers last year, they will give the Petes plenty of opposition here on Tuesday.

The blue shirts got off to a good start last night by beating the hard-checking Aura Lee team and are hopeful of making it two straight at the expense of Hamilton, although they are not making the mistake of under rating the Hamilton outfit.

Reserved seats for the game will be in demand for the opening clash of the O.H.A. season.

AYRSHIRE BREEDERS MET IN LIBRARY ON TUESDAY

Menie District Club Was First of Its Kind Organized in Canada.

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 2. — The annual meeting of the Menie District Ayrshire Breeders Club was held in the auditorium of the public Library on Tuesday afternoon. President John Locke presided.

The president gave a brief but splendid address touching on the outstanding activities of the club, and of the dairy interests in general.

The Menie District Club has the honor of being the first club of its kind organized in Canada, and that we are fortunate in having two men still with us who were most active in organizing, namely Mr. Alex. Hume and our veteran breeder, Wm. Stewart. Mr. Locke also commended those engaged in R.O.P. work, stating that very creditable records were being made by members of the club. In regard to the accredited herd system nearly every Ayrshire herd in the district was either fully accredited or in the process of accredition. This was a splendid thing, although many fine animals had been sacrificed. Ayrshires are in good demand owing to their good milking and high testing qualities; also being economical to feed; they make a profitable acquisition to any farm. Mr. Locke also spoke of the Dairy Standard Act. This act had been tried out and in most cases had proved satisfactory. It is a splendid thing to increase the butter fat qualities of the dairy cow.

In conclusion Mr. Locke congratulated the members on the splendid achievements of the club and extended to them greetings of the season.

The usual routine of business was then taken up.

Mr. Alex. Hume, of 'Humeshaugh' farm, Campbellford, is a director on the Ayrshire Breeders' Association, of Canada, Board. He gave the breeders a very interesting address on some of the activities of the Association, mentioning the splendid work our field man, Mr. David Hunter is doing. He also stated that never in the history of the Association has it been in such a splendid financial standing. The clug decided to hold their annual field day in June, 1925, place and date to be decided by the Executive committee.

It will be remembered by those present at our field day, at Mr. Chas. Macoun's, Campbellford, in August last, that it was a great success and thoroughly enjoyed by all present.

Judging classes will be held every two weeks during the winter months at several of the club members' stables. This is a splendid opportunity for all interested in dairy cattle to get free information and expert training in judging of the dairy cow. The first class will be held at Alex. Hume's in January. The agriculture representatives for both Northumberland and Hastings Counties are expected to be present. Watch next week's paper for the day and date, and plan to attend this class. Whether you are an Ayrshire breeder or not you are welcome. Help to make the judging classes a great success.

The following officers were elected,
Hon. Pres.: William Stewart.
Pres.: John Lockie.
Vice-Pres.: R. H. Little.
Sec.-Treas.: F. M. Rutherford.
Directors: John Rannie, Charles Macoun, F. G. Hawes, E. A. McCook, John Thompson, Hector Wood, W. A. Hume, George H. Stokes, Geo. Campbell.

HAMILTON WON GAME.

Defeated Canadiens Last Evening Four Goals to Two.

HAMILTON, Jan. 2.—(Canadian Press).—Hamilton stepped into first place in the National Hockey League last night when they defeated the Canadiens four goals to two, in as rough a battle as has been witnessed on the Hamilton ice since the inception of "pro." hockey. For fifty minutes the teams battled with bodies and sticks. Then Hamilton got the break. Cleghorn and Coutue were too open with their attacks, and while serving penalties, Billy Burch ran in two goals in quick succession, to cinch things for Hamilton.

The Canadiens cannot be accused of slowing up in the final period, when they appeared to be hopelessly beaten, they sent all but one defence man up on the forward line in an attempt to cut down the lead, but the best they could get was one counter.

The Dead Sea is 25 per cent salt, so should keep if the weather isn't too warm.

The year 1924 wasn't exactly what we expected it to be, but then we all knew it wouldn't be.

RICHES.

The younger John D. Rockefeller, it's claimed, has "made" about 100 million dollars by the stock market boom, that sum being the estimated gain in market value of securities he owns.

However, it's a "paper profit." The extremely rich, as a rule, do not cash in. By selling, they'd lose control of industries back of the securities. And modern Croesuses are more interested in CONTROL than in immediate profit.

JOHNSTON WON BY K. O.

Defeated Freddy Vincent of Hamilton in Second Round.

TORONTO, Jan. 2. — (Canadian Press).—Jackie Johnson, heavy hitting local bantam, knocked out Freddy Vincent, formerly of Wales, but now of Hamilton, in the second round of their bout yesterday in the elimination series to decide an opponent for Vic Foley, of Vancouver, the present champion.

Johnson started off in the second round and sent his opponent to the canvas four times in rapid succession.

Three would have been enough, as Referee Marsh was about to award the bout to Johnson as Vincent came to his feet just as ten was being tolled, but Johnson stepped in and Vincent slept instead of dozed.

FROZEN TO DEATH.

Bootlegger Tried to Escape Clutches of Police But Failed.

WINDSOR, Ont., Jan 2.—(Canadian Press). — Bootleggers who attempted to deliver their last minute New Year's liquor loads from Canada early yesterday were met by a tight river front blockade of State police.

Automobiles loaded with liquor, for three days, had dared the ice and State police, crossing the Detroit River and landing seven miles below Grosse Isle. One bootlegger met death on Wednesday afternoon when he attempted to escape from the police, who were attracted by the sinking of his automobile which had crashed through the ice. By means of steel plates fastened to his shoes to prevent slipping on the ice, the bootlegger managed to walk a mile and a half to Pt. Moulle on the American side, but when he arrived there he collapsed and was frozen to death.

C. P. R. TRAINS CHANGE TIME FOR NEW YEAR

All Sleeping Car Specials to be Withdrawn Next Next Week.

LAST RUN SATURDAY.

Many Changes on Trans-Continental on Sunday, January 11th.

MONTREAL, January 2. — Canadian Press. — The all-sleeping car special trains which the Canadian Pacific placed in service early in December to take care of the eastern excursion traffic from the prairie provinces and holiday business generally will be withdrawn next week.

The last trip of the Winnipeg special will be that of Saturday afternoon Jan. 10, from Montreal, and Saturday evening from Toronto, and the last run of the special from Winnipeg will also be on Saturday, the 10th.

In announcing this to-day, Mr. C. B. Foster, Traffic Manager, stated that there would be a number of important changes, particularly in transcontinental trains, on Sunday, the 11th.

Commencing on that date, the "Van couver Express," which has heretofore left Toronto at 10.10 p.m., will get away at nine every night. While the earlier departure will make it necessary for passengers from some sections of Western Ontario to leave home a little earlier, it will mean that this train will arrive and depart at the "Twin Cities" of Port Arthur and Fort William between 10 and 11 o'clock the next night, instead of between 2 and 3 in the morning, as heretofore.

The "Twin Cities" will benefit in this respect. By arriving in Winnipeg at 10 in the morning instead of 2.30 in the afternoon, business men will gain practically half a day in Winnipeg. An earlier arrival and departure from Winnipeg will place the passengers, mail and express in Regina before 11 o'clock at night instead of 1.20 in the morning, and will give an hour for connection at Regina with the night train for Saskatoon at 6 o'clock in the morning instead of 4 in the afternoon, which will be a very great advantage to Ontario people going to Saskatoon for business or pleasure.

Continuing westward, the "Toronto-Vancouver" express will be at Moosejaw before midnight instead of 2.45 in the morning, and will reach Calgary around 4 o'clock in the afternoon, in time to connect with the afternoon train for Edmonton, reaching there the same evening instead of the following morning as heretofore.

Passengers who are destined to Vancouver on this train will reach there about seven o'clock in the evening, instead of 9.30.

There will also be important changes in the "Toronto Express," which Vancouver at 8.45 in the morning. This train stops at all points in the Fraser Valley and picks up the Okanagan connection at Sicamous. By a somewhat shortes schedule it will reach Winnipeg at 5.30 in the afternoon and get away from Winnipeg at 6, which is a very convenient hour for the business men of Winnipeg and the West, and the earlier departure will enable them to reach Toronto at 8.40 in the morning, with only one day's loss of business between Winnipeg and Toronto. Therefore by getting to Toronto at an early hour in the morning passengers from the Coast as well as from the Prairie Provinces, will be able to make connection for all points in Ontario served by the early morning trains out of Toronto, and thereby gain practically a full day for business at their destination in both Eastern and Western Ontario, as well as being able to connect with the day trains to Buffalo, New York, Pittsburgh, and other places which they have not been able to do in the past.

Coincident with these changes the Montreal-Winnipeg trains will be changed a little at the west end where the train from Montreal will reach Winnipeg at 8.15 p.m., 30 minutes earlier than at present, and the train from Winnipeg will leave 30 minutes later, that is at 10 o'clock in the morning, reaching Montreal the same time as at present, 9. a.m.

On the same date as the transcontinental changes, the night train for Chicago will leave Montreal at 11 o'clock instead of 10; and the local "Toronto Express," which has been leaving at 11 from the Windsor street station, will be sent out at 10 p.m. to make the intermediate stops ahead of the faster through train to Chicago.

The day trains between Toronto and Montreal, which run through to and from Chicago, popularly known as the "Canadian," will leave Montreal 30 minutes later, that is 9.45 a. m., and the connection from Ottawa at 10.40, and reach Toronto same as at present, at 5 minutes to 6.

The east-bound "Canadian", which leaves Toronto at 9 in the morning, will commencing Sunday, the 11th, reach Montreal at 5.10 p.m., and the connection will arrive in Ottawa at 4.25 p.m.

There will also be some minor changes in the train between Montreal and Sherbrooke and it is expected that the more convenient hours which have been arranged, particularly for the traffic between Ontario and Western Canada, will be very greatly appreciated especially by the people at the "Twin Cities" at the head of the lakes, at Winnipeg, and the three important cities in Saskatchewan, and particularly at Regina and Moosejaw, and at the commercial centres of Calgary and Edmonton, in the province of Alberta.

Commercial travellers will naturally appreciate the extra time for business at all of these cities.

MUTT AND JEFF, at the Grand to-morrow, matinee and night.

CLASHES INCREASE ON NEW YEAR'S DAY

One Soldier Stabbed, Two Reds Mortally Wounded and Many Others Slightly Injured.

(By Thomas B. Morgan — United Press Staff Correspondent).

ROME, Jan. 2.—Increasing disorder and sporadic clashes between the Fascisti and their opponents marked the arrival of the New Year in Italy. Fascisti carabiners killed two Communists at Genzano, while Government sympathizers in Florence partly wrecked the plant of the Nuovo Giornale, destroyed the Masonic Lodge and attempted to storm the jail to free the Fascisti under arrest there. The Mussolini Government, whose difficulties increase with each outbreak, has prohibited all Fascist parades and gatherings, including a proposed meeting here Sunday.

To-morrow, Mussolini will address the Chamber of Deputies, emphasizing the stern resolve of the Government to maintain order. Minister Federonzi sent a police investigator to inquire into the incidents at Florence. The Naovo Giornale, which had offended the Fascist sensibilities by its editorials, was guarded by the police and resumed publication. When the first number appeared, the police sequestered the property because of the nature of the new editorials.

The incident at Genzano was described by the Fascist Carbiners as follows:

"A large party of 'Reds' attempted to attack a small force of local Fascisti. The Carbiners tried to disband the Communists, who turned upon the soldiers, stabbing one. In self-defence, the Carbiners opened fire, pouring a volley into the 'Reds,' two of whom were mortally wounded and many others slightly."

Two Hundred Passengers in Life Belts Ready to Take to Life Boats.

Lewes, Del. Jan. 2.—(Canadian Press).—The Clyde liner Mohawk, with 200 passengers aboard, was afire off Brandywine Light in Delaware Bay near here today. Passengers were in their lifebelts and ready to take to lifeboats when reassured by officers that fire in the hold was under control. The Mohawk, with passengers aboard, is heading for Deleware breakwater.

HOUSES WRECKED.

Fierce Gale Struck Great Britain Yesterday Doing Much Damage.

LONDON, Jan. 2. — (Canadian Press). — Another fierce gale, the fourth within six days, struck Great Britain yesterday and reports of widespread damage are featured in the morning papers.

Telegraph and telephone wires are down in all parts of the country.

Rivers and valleys are flooded and a great number of houses have been inundated.

WANT HIGHER WAGES.

Both Skilled and Unskilled Workers in England Look For Increase.

LONDON, Jan. 2. — (Canadian Press).—Concerted effort is to be made early in the new year by skilled and unskilled workers in the United Kingdom for an all-round increase in wages, it is understood. The industries affected will include mining, engineering and shipbuilding. Employees concerned number about 2,000,000, and the claims, it is estimated, will aggregate about £100,000,000 a year.

STEAMER MISSING.

Mexican Ship and Five Schooners Not Heard of Since Dec. 23rd.

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 2.—(Canadian Press). — Attempts are being made to locate Mexican steamship Tamanilipas with one hundred passengers aboard, and five schooners which left Vera Cruz on Dec. 23, bound for Frontara and other Gulf ports. It is feared they may have been lost in the recent gale.

THEATRES

AT THE GRAND.

Mutt and Jeff in a brand new and delightfully staged attraction will hold forth at the Grand, commencing January 3rd. The affair, which introduces the famous comics of Bud Fisher, will be in the nature of an up-to-date musical comedy in two acts and five scenes by John P. Mulgrew and Leo Edwards. The supporting company is composed of talented singers, dancers, comedians and an ensemble of beautiful young women, who, on the strength of their pulchritude and ability alone, are sure to entertain on their own account. Mutt and Jeff promise an occasion out of the usual. Matinee on Saturday.

"THE ROSE OF PARIS."

There was a splendid attendance at the Grand Opera House yesterday afternoon and evening for the New Year showing of the big picture, "The Rose of Paris," starring Mary Philbin, with a strong supporting cast. With the feature programme is included a one reel novelty and an excellent comedy.

Adventure, romance and intrigue, in a beautiful setting, are the watchwords of "The Rose of Paris," which is the screen version of "Mitsi," a French best, seller written in collaboration by a brother and sister writing under the pen name of Delly. It has its last showing at the Grand this evening.

Irving Cummings, who directed Miss Philbin in "Fools Highway," made "The Rose of Paris," and he surrounded the star by a cast selected from the best known actors and actresses in filmdom, which includes ose Dione, Robert Cain, Mme. Daumery and John Sampolis. The locale of the entire story is France and some of them having principal supporting roles are graduates from the French speaking stage.

Weeks of research work were necessary before the settings were completed, and the principals were surrounded by extras nearly all of whom have lived much of their lives in France.

The story tells the experiences of a girl who from infancy to her eighteenth birthday had lived in a convent and is sought as the heiress to a big estate.

Mitsi is made the object of a mercenary conspiracy on the part of a Madame Bolomoff, the keeper of a dive in the Montmartre quarter of Paris, and Andre du Vallois, a false friend of her grandfather. It is the combined idea of these two characters to keep the identity of the little girl, who is taken from a convent in Paris, from coming to light so that they might divide the fortune which she is to inherit.

Because of her deep friendship for another little convent girl who is taken into the household of Christian de Farley, a rich Parisian bachelor, Mitsi is given a domestic position in the de Farley establishment after she had been picked up along the road by Christian, following her escape from the Montmartre district.

Andre, a friend and business partner of Christian's, is also staying at the de Farley home, so his sinister tactics for getting rid of the girl, Mitsi, is difficult.

AT THE CAPITOL.

There were large holiday audiences at the Capitol Theatre yesterday, and there was an excellent programme, with Tom Mix starring in the feature picture, or rather, companioned by his star dog, Duke, and his horse Tony.

The trio, composed of Mix and his horse and his dog, make a splendid combination for any production. In "Teeth," they provide an evening of wholesome entertainment. Mix is at his best in this picture, but the honors go to the Great Dane, who exhibits almost human intelligence in several of the scenes. The love that exists between the actor himself and his superb horse and dog is exemplified in marvellous fashion in many of the episodes.

"Pet," the Great Dane, and his small Pomeranian companion, "Curly," are the property of Paula Grayson, played by Lucy Fox, who is taking them to the big Los Angeles Dog Show. They run foul of Dan Angus, a brutal train employee, who beats up the two and pitches them off the train. Before the girl discovers her loss and goes in search of the dogs, Mix comes on "Pet" in the desert and appropriates him, changing his name to the more masculine cognomen of "Teeth."

The role of Dave Deering, enacted by Mix in this picture, is one of his favorite types, that of a lone rider, companioned only by his horse and dog, with circumstances twining a net of misfortune about him. He gives a forceful presentation of the part, which calls for the quick action and swift thinking characteristic of him, and his dog and horse are noble supports for a very entertaining production. There are thrilling chases, wild rides, a girl heroine who needs a lot of protection and a villain who mixes things up generally, in the person of Angus, the "bad" train man, later becoming involved in a forest fire with the girl and Deering. The quality of realism injected into an exciting picture by the work of the dog, and the horse has its evidence in the interested ejaculations with which the audience greets their appearance at critical moments. The sympathy of the watchers is always with the trio who fight against unequal odds. It is a very entertaining picture, one of Mix's best, and holds the attention from start to finish.

The hockey returns occasioned much excitement at the Capitol last night. The flashed results, momentarily interrupting the feature, found the fans enthusiastic to a degree.

The programme carries an excellent comedy, an Al St. John affair, in which the fair-haired youth essays the role of a maniac, and finds himself mixed up with a real crazy man.

AT THE ROYAL.

"BELOVED BRUTE" FILLED WITH RAPID ACTION, THRILLS, SUSPENSE, AND ROMANCE — CLEVER CAST INTERPRETS STORY.

Oh, man! What a high-powered knock-out of a motion picture this "Beloved Brute" is! And what a brightly burning new star in the screen firmament it discloses in the person of Victor McLaglen.

The "Beloved Brute," to my mind, sets a new standard for Western pictures that will be remembered as a milestone on the advance of the art of the silent drama. The Royal certainly started the New Year off with a good one.

We are not going to tell you the story here. Better see it. There is a murder mystery, chases, escapes, a delightful romance and through all the thrilling adventures the Brute finds his soul and proves himself the better man.

There is not a dull moment in the entire production, and the scenic backgrounds offer strong appeal to all lovers of the beautiful. J. Stuart Blackton has introduced some novel touches with animals and birds, such as the discovery of the bear, the cooing of a couple of sparrows spider building its web, and the wildcat slinking through the underbrush waiting to pounce upon the heroine.

After witnessing "The Beloved Brute," one is inclined to feel that it has been an evening well spent. There is such a variety of action that the subject appeals to all classes.

It will be shown to-night and Saturday.

The Andy Gump comedy is especially funny this week, and the Royal Orchestra excelled themselves.

PRISCILLA DEAN COMING TO ROYAL MONDAY.

"The gamest girl in pictures!"

That's what they called Priscilla Dean around the Thomas H. Ince Studios when she was making "The Siren of Seville," which comes to the Royal Theatre on Monday next.

Her fights with Claire de Lorez are "masterpieces of action," according to no less an authority than Stromberg himself. But, according to Priscilla, they left "masterpieces of black and blue spots" on various portions of her anatomy.

In her wrestling matches with a trio of "domesticated bulls" the star added some new scratches, bruises, and sore joints to her ever growing list of casualties.

"The gamest girl in pictures — humph!" exclaimed Priscilla in between applications of liniment and court plaster. "The lamest girl in pictures, you mean!"

AT THE REGENT.

A distinct novelty in screen history is "Lights Out," a play within a play, which is at the Regent Theatre this week.

Mystery, intrigue, vengeance and skilful detection are craftily interwoven, making this an entertainment of absorbing interest.

In the moving picture studios the scenes are laid, where a serial is being made to serve two purposes. First, to make money for its producers, second, to be used as an instrument for bringing an escaped scoundrel back to the United States. This man is impersonated in the film by a double, who depicts him as such a dirty dog that it is hoped that he will return to "get" the man responsible. The ruse succeeds, and numerous complications result through the existence of two men who look alike; one, the villain, and the other, the man who impersonates him.

Certain members of the cast deserve special mention for their splendid work. Theodore von Eltz, as the scenario writer, puts over a drolly humorius characterization Marie Astaire, in the leading feminine role, displays a simple charm and wistfulness that makes her work quite distinctive; Ruth Stonehouse, as "Hair pin" Annie, ao reformed crook, demonstrates that her heavy dramatic interpretations are as fine as those in which she won fame; Hank Mann lives up to his reputation as a funny man in his portrayal of the superstituous negro porter. The rest of the cast lend brilliant support in putting over the tone of comedy and mystery that pervades "Lights Out".

The play is directed by Al Santell.

ABE LAIDLEY PICKED AS BEST SPORT IN OMEMEE

Although 71 Years Old, He Still Takes Fun Out of Skating.

Omemee, Jan. 2.—Possibly the oldest and best sport in Omemee is one, Mr. Abe. Laidley, who has been paatiently waiting for the skating rink to open and on the opening night donned his skates at an early hour and sat in readiness until the appointed time. Mr. Laidley has just passed his 71st birthday, and while not as rugged as in middle age, he does not look his age and looks forward from year to year to the pleasure he receives from this winter sport.

COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE AT HOME

In a blaze of youthful merriment and festivity, the fifteenth annual "At Home" of the Peterboro Collegiate Institute took place New Year's evening in the school. Of all the successful dances held by the P.C.I. in the past years, the "At Home" of 1925 will take its place in the fore as to gaiety and splendour.

The Assembly Hall, the scene of the dance, was most tastefully and cleverly decorated in the garnet and grey of the school colors. The streamers were draped from the three main cluster shaded lights to the sides, forming a roof garden effect that was most effective. A moon cast his smile on the dances from the shade of one end of the room. Balloons floated and swayed down the centre of the arch formed by the streamers.

The platform was converted into a fairy-like haven of softly shaded lights and twinkling draperies for the orchestra. A large evergreen tree, half hidden, helped to form the dark background. All combined to give a gladsome and beautiful atmosphere to the wonderful music.

There were over three hundred guests, and this space was filled to its capacity, although not crowded, by the swaying dancers. The guests were mainly of the younger set, graduates of the school of four or five years. The three universities were well represented, and the various school yells were given during one of the lulls, even the correspondence school yell crept in.

Ken. Wilson's wonderful quintette of musicians from Toronto was the orchestra, and they excelled themselves during the evening. The music was perfect in rhythm and lifted and thrilled the throng to an ecstasy of dancing.

The patronesses for the dance were: Mrs. W. C. Ackerman, Mrs. J. I. Allen, Mrs. M. T. Breckenbridge, Mrs. H. E. Connolly, Mrs. C. E. Jamieson, Mrs. H. R. H. Kenner, Mrs. A. L. Killaly, Mrs. A. Moir, Mrs. W. R. Morris, Mrs. F. J. H. Morris.

The committee which did the planning and decorating for this splendid dance consisted of: Miss F. Ackerman, Miss I. Breckenbridge, Miss T. Connolly, Miss E. Killaly, Miss D. Moir, Miss H. Stinson, H. Ebbs, F. Allan, A. Bookhout, L. Killaly, R. Lord, H. Neal, W. Yelland.

Miss Montgomery, of the staff, guided the committee, and was the creative genius who planned the decorations.

DENIES FRANKS CASE FEE WAS FIXED AT $150,000.

Darrow Says Amount Will Be Decided This Month.

GREENLEY, Col., Jan. 2.—Clarence Darrow, one of the defence counsel in the Loeb-Leopold case, emphatically denied the correctness of despatches from Chicago saying that defence attorneys would receive $150,000 for their services. The Chicago Bar Association will fix the amount following his return to Chicago early this month, he said.

"I would like to say that the matter will be disposed of when I get back to Chicago, January 8 or 9," he said. "The Bar Association will be the judge. I don't mind saying that the parties concerned have reached a satisfactory agreement in regard to the amount of the fee, but I won't say whether it is less or more than the $150,000 mentioned."

KIWANIS INSTAL 1925 OFFICERS

Japanese Missionary Tells of Earthquakes That Cause Great Havoc.

CLUB GROWING.

At Kiwanis luncheon to-day the following officers for the year 1925 were introduced by the Past President, Jack Marshall, and sworn in: President, C. Cooke; Vice-President, Dr. J. Craig; Secretary, Hugh Niven, Treasurer, Jack Jeffries; Executive Committee, J. W. Fraser, J. Johns, J. Wearing, G. Scott, Dr. E. Woods, I. McNabb and Walter Oke; District Trustee, Jack McKone.

Charles Cooke, the new president, occupied the chair.

The secretary's report for the past year showed that during the year the club enrolled 14 new members and that the membership at present is 67. The average attendance at the weekly luncheon for the year was 62.01 per cent.

A monument is to be erected in Stanley Park, B.C., in memory of the late President Harding, by the International Kiwanis Clubs in Canada ad the United States, it was annouced.

The treasurer's report showed that the local club had at Christmas spent $73 for relief work and that at present, with all their bills paid up they have a balance of about $600.

James Cuthbertson, of the Japanese Missionary Society, was the speaker of the day, addressing his audience on some of his experiences as a missionary in the Far East.

"I have spent 21 years of my life in that country," said Mr. Cuthbertson, "and in those 21 years the Japanese people have always treated me kindly. Your Kiwanis Club is mentioned in the Bible. Your part is to help the poor and needy" said the speaker.

"When I went to Japan first, the people there believed that a missionary was an outlaw who had been chased out of his own country, and to-day in this country of Canada, and other civilized countries a missionary is classed as a beggar. Our means of raising money has been in existence for 21 years, and in this period of time we have never asked a person for a cent of money, nor have we ever taken up a collection." "God is real. He has given us everything that we needed and we have never been forced to beg. When I was 16 years of age I heard something about Jesu Christ that turned my steps to preaching the Gospel, and at present I would not change places with a multi-millionaire."

"When the United States passed the law barring immigrants from any foreign country they might have done it more mercifully than they did," said Mr. Cuthbertson. "When the word was received in Japan men killed themselves on the streets."

I have always been treated kindly by the Japs except in the past year, when the country has been upset by earthquakes. These people are not vicious as many people believe. If two thousand people in this city were to be killed within a few hours and were lying on the streets, and hundreds of children were separated from their parents, would not your minds become unhinged? Following the earthquakes the people of Japan picked up weapons and went out to kill every person who was not of Japanese birth.

It is rumored in this country that the Japanese are not intelligent and that they have to employ Chinese to work in their banks. This is not true, for I have never seen a Chinese man working in a Japanese bank. I am glad to plead to you to-day for a little more generous thinking of the Japanese people.

In this country there is only one species of bird that sings; the rest are all mum.

The flowers are beautiful and abundant, but they have no smell. The country is really upside-down. When the Japs go to read a book they start from the back. Nobody knows where this race of people came from. They have all the characteristics of the Jews. They do not worship idols. Their greatest time of the year is at New Year's, when for eight days they rest.

In relating one of his experiences in a recent earthquake, Mr. Cuthbertson told the story of a shock that killed 33,000 people at once. When the shock came houses and buildings crumpled to the earth, and within a few minutes everything was in a mass of flames. Horses went mad and trampled scores of people. A terrific windstorm came up and people were lifted off the ground and carried through the air.

Large slabs of corrugated steel were hurled through the air by the wind, cutting off people's heads. In this one spot thirty-three thousand people were killed and burned to death, said the speaker. This is the result of only one of the many earthquakes the Japanese have suffered in recent years.

PASSENGERS OF FLAMING VESSEL RESCUED DURING FURIOUS GALE

Clyde Liner Swept By Fire and One of Winter's Worst Storms Off Atlantic Coast — Beached After Passengers Transferred to Tug.

PASSENGERS SANG IN PERIL OF SEA.

Vessel Costing Million Dollars May Be Total Loss, With Freight Worth $130,000.

WILMINGTON, Del., Jan. 3. — (Canadian Press).—Safe aboard two special trains, one speeding north, the other south, passengers and crew of the Clyde liner Mohawk, left here last night, after having been brought ashore at Lewes, Del., from the fire-swept vessel, beached near there.

Behind them lay a night of peril at sea, with the fury of the worst of the winter's storms on the Atlantic added to the creeping menace of the flames that threatened momentarily to overwhelm efforts of the crew to check them as the ship fought its way from seventy miles below Sandy Hook to the Delaware Capes.

Some wrapped in blankets, others with clothing showing plainly the effects of a drenching on the storm-swept decks while they waited with lifebelts on, 192 passengers for Jacksonville and Charleston were transferred from the special train that brought them here from Lewes and sent to their destinations by rail.

One hundred and nine others, including members of the crew and officials, went to New York, from which port the Mohawk had sailed on New Year's Day. Captain James M. Staples, master of the ill-fated ship, did not come to Wilmington on the special train.

Brave Girl's Example.

Among the crew were those who bore scars in mute testimony of the desperate battle they had waged against the flames as the ship rolled and tossed in the trough of the heavy seas, and as the crew fought, some of the passengers defied the danger surrounding them with songs bravely sung to an accompaniment plucked on a ukulele by the fingers of a young girl.

Aboard the train were two passengers, who, aroused from slumber, had leaped overboard as the smoke filled their cabins. They had been rescued by the tug Mars, which was among the first to answer the radio distress calls of the Mohawk.

"The fire was discovered about ten o'clock Thursday night," said William Turner, an engine-room oiler, who bore a scar on his right cheek from his share in the battle with the blaze. Chief Engineer Charles Rich, of Brooklyn, N. Y., found it in the after-hold, as we were off the Jersey coast, and we started in to fight it. Using sledge hammers, we broke down bulkheads and ripped up the deck to get at it, and all the time the ship was rolling and pitching. But the water supply was good and the lights stayed on."

Vessel Beached.

Captain Staples headed for the Delaware Capes, members of the crew said, when it became apparent that the fire was gaining headway. The storm prevented the Mohawk from anchoring until the vicinity of Brandywine Light, about seven miles north of Lewes, was reached. There, with the Merchants and Miners liner Persian, the coastguard cutter Kickapoo, and the tugs Mars and Kaleen alongside, the Mohawk came to rest in a heavy fog. Passengers in life-belts lined the decks, and finally were removed by the Kickapoo and landed at the Coast Fish Oil Company's pier on the Lewes Beach front at 12.40 p.m. Shortly afterwards, the crew, fighting to the last, were forced to abandon the ship, which later was towed to a nearby beach and allowed to settle after the Kingston valves had been opened to flood the hold, checking the flames.

In the meantime, the passengers were fed and cared for at a local hotel, while arrangements were completed for the special train to convey them to Wilmington.

May Be Total Loss.

According to Arthur Pye, a Clyde line official, 1,800 tons of freight and fifty motor cars were lost in the hold of the abandoned ship. The ship's two cats and a dog mascot also perished, but no injuries occurred among the passengers. Injuries to the crew were slight. The storm had completely isolated Lewes from wire communication with inland points last night, and it could not be learned how bad the Mohawk was damaged. Fear was expressed by Clyde line officials that the vessel, which was built in 1908 at a cost of $1,000,000, would be a total loss. Her cargo was valued at $130,000.

REAL REEL REVELS.

Sam Goldwyn, Gloria Swanson, Etc., Show Paris How.

PARIS, Jan. 3.—Sam. Goldwyn, Sessue Hayakawa and Gloria Swanson, and, in fact, all the new Hollywood colony in Paris except Rex Ingram, who is ill with intestinal trouble, welcomed young man 1925 with customary California gayety. Pearl White did her celebrating in bed in her private Auteuil hospital, where she was operated upon for appendicitis last Sunday.

Hollywood in Paris had one of the wildest New Year Eves on record in spite of the absence of Joe Schenck and Norma Talmadge, who went to London.

Sam Goldwyn with his new star, Count Salm von Hoogstraeten, and the Countess Von Bernstorff dined at the Ritz among the nobility.

Gloria Swanson, with her continuity writer, Jimmy Reelman, had a big high hat party at Gloria's new residence in the classiest part of Paris.

BANDIT'S TEETH STRIP WOMAN'S DIAMOND RINGS

Daring Robbery in Vestibule of New York Apartment —Husband Beaten.

ROBBERS ARMED.

Apartment Attendants Cowed—Husband and Wife Cornered in Elevator.

New York, Jan. 3.—Four bandits Thursday held up and robbed Mr. and Mrs. William J. Fox as they were entering the apartment house in which they live at 885 West End Avenue.

They took jewels worth $25,000 from Mrs. Fox, and to get her rings, one of the men tore they from her fingers with his teeth. She lost a diamond necklace, four bracelets, and two diamond rings.

Fox, who is president of Belias Hess & Co., a mail order house at No. 95 Morton street, fought the robbers and was beaten on the head with the butts of revolvers.

Trailed by Bandits.

Husband and wife had spent New Year's Eve with friends. They attended a theatre party and then went to the Hotel Esplanade, Seventy-fourth street and West End avenue, not far from their home. They were trailed by the bandits.

As the couple entered the apartment house, the bandits got into action. One covered the hallman with his pistol. The others ordered the victims into the elevator. There they told Fox to hold up his hands.

The elevator boy was easily cowed. Fox submitted until he saw one of the men clench his teeth over his wife's fingers. Then he fought.

Twice he was knocked to the floor of the car.

Mrs. Foxs diamond necklace was torn from her throat.

Detectives from the West One Hundreth street police station quickly responded to an alarm, but of course the bandits were well away by the time when they arrived.

Like Rosenberg Robbery.

The robbery was similar to one in which Mr. and Mrs. Jacques Rosenberg were attacked and despoiled of their valuables at No. 829 Park avenue less than a month ago, and the polise are working on the theory that the same bandits did both jobs.

The four men in the Fox case are described by Fox as being well dressed, dark complexioned and of the Broadway lounge-lizard type. The leader was about five feet seven inches tall and the shortest was about five feet. They worked with effrontetry and as if accustomed to holding up persons. The first time that Fox went down under a crushing blow the man who struck him said:

"Damn you. Happy New Year. How do you like that?"

FARMS TOO DRY.

Cavan Wells Run Low—January Thaw Needed.

CAVAN, Jan. 3.—Winter came early this year. Many farmers would be glad to see a real January thaw as water is so scarce. Cisterns are either low or empty, wells are low and in some cases dry. Those who have a spring or creek at which to water their cattle are fortunate.

The Cavan Centre young people have enjoyed good sport during the holidays, on an open-air rink, which they have fixed up.

Mrs. R. Swain and two sons, Valentia, have been visiting in Cavan for the past week; Mr. Swain joined them for New Year's Day, when they had a family gathering at Mrs. Swain's brother's, Mr. D. J. Hunter.

Messrs Ray and Gerald Staples and Miss Norma Staples entertained the young people of Cavan Centre, about thirty, on New Year's Eve.

Miss Dorotohy Pudsy has returned from an extended visit in Manvers.

The Ladies' Aid will meet at the parsonage, Thursday afternoon, Jan. the eighth.

FRANCE OFERS WAR DEBT PLAN TO THE STATES

U. S. Ambassador Reports Proposed Basis for Refunding War Debt.

GIVEN TO CABINET.

Washington Hopeful of Settlement With Britain of German Claims Dispute.

Washington, Jan. 3.—Two distinct advances in what Washington administration officials hope will result in amicable adjustments of the perplexing war debt and claims tangles with France and Great Britain were marked Friday in official advices emanating from the Paris and London governments.

As regarded by administration leaders here the most important developments in the two situations was the report from Ambassador Herrick that he had received a communication from the French finance minister conttaining elements of a plan worked out by him for refunding of war debts to the United States. The ambassador's report was received by Secretary Hughes and the news given at once to the cabinet meeting in regular session at the White House.

Regarding the question of claims collections by the United States from Germany, now the subject of diplomatic exchanges between the state department and the London foreign office, it was said the latetst note from London on that subject had been received and would be answered before Jan. 7, when the allied finance ministers gather in Paris to discuss the allocation to their governments of proceeds to be paid by Germany under the Dawes plan. In this connection, it was said, Secretary Hughes believed the claim controversy would be sastisfactorily disposed of before the present series of notes between Washington and London terminated.

At the annual meeting of the trustees of the school board on Wednesday, Rev. C. A. G. Spence, the retiring trustee, was re-elected for a term of three years, and at the ensuing board meeting was re-appointed chairman. Mrs. Stanley Windsor was also re-appointed secretary-treasurer.

She failed to return for the child, which died a few days later.

After the Thorold murder Rutka escaped and was traced to Roumania from which Canada could not secure him because of the absence of an extradition treaty.

MONTREAL, Jan. 3.—Dr. Harry Lorne Pavey, assistant physician of the out-patient department of the Royal Victoria Hospital, collapsed suddenly Friday afternoon and died as he was being removed to the Royal Victoria Hospital. Heart trouble is thought to have been the cause of his death.

He was born in London, Ont., 47 years ago and was educated there. He came to McGill University to study medicine and graduated in 1902, then going to Edinburgh University, where he obtained the degrees of M.D., and C.M., in 1904. Dr. Pavey was one of the oldest members of the Victoria Rifles with which unit he saw service in the great war. He was a major in the 60th Battalion and was wounded in action in 1916.

PRISON TERMS FOR TWO HOLD-UP MEN

One Was Caught By Passer-by—Other Arrested.

OTTAWA, Jan. 3.—John Edgren of this city, was sentenced by Magistrate Hopewell to six months in penitentiary with an indefinite term thereafter of two years less one day, on two charges, one of attempted robbery and another of theft. Arthur Lavergne, was given the same sentence, but he was convicted only of the attempted robbery charge.

The robbery took place on Christmas eve, when Arthur Brunke, of Hurdman's Bridge, was walking home and while passing the coal shutes of the railway yards, was pounced on by the robbers. James Scharf distinguished himself by personally catching one of the robbers. Scharf was coming home when he saw the fracas, chased the robbers and managed to catch Lavergne, who was taken to the police station. Later Edgren was arrested. Brunke who had some money in his pockets, did not lose anything.

AN UNOFFICIAL STEP

French Finance Minister Seeking Exchange of Views.

Paris, Jan. 3.—Minister of Finance Clementel has taken the first steps toward negotiations for the funding of the French debt to the United States, according to information given out Friday by the foreign office. It was made plain, however, that M. Clemental's action was purely unoffical, tending rather to an exchange of views between his department and the American treasury department, than between the two governments.

The United States ambasssador, Myron T. Herrick, through whom the French finance minister is making the first move, stated there was nothing official or definite in what had thus far been suggested.

The French press yesterday mentioned the supposed details of M. Clementel's suggestions, such as one-half of one per cent. interest on the capital sum during a moratorium period of ten years, but these details are declared in official circles to be mere guesses.

BRITISH ISLES LASHED BY SEA AND AIR FURIES

Storm Records of 30 Years Broken by Continuous Rampage of Elements.

MUCH DAMAGE.

Floods, Hail and Blizzard Destroy Property and Tie Up Traffic.

LONDON, Jan. 3. — (Canadian Press). — Reports reaching London last night from all parts of the United Kingdom and Ireland, indicate that the present gale has established a record for over thirty years for its fierceness and continuity. The list of material damages is swelling hourly, although few personal casualties have thus far been reported. Despatches from Glasgow stated that a seventy-mile an hour gale there was followed by a blizzard. Midlands and Wales report the dislocation of traffic and the destruction of property at many points by floods hail and tempest.

Shipping has been chiefly affected and advices from the south coast state that the Channel has been very deserted, all vessels having run for shelter. Off Deal numerous steamers signalled for pilots who were unable to get aboard owing to the mountainous seas. The Spanish steamer Ramon signalled for a doctor. The latter went out in a motor boat and reached the vessel with great difficulty, but was unable to get aboard and was forced to abandon his mission.

Thames Aswirl.

The Thames Valley is all awash and the historic spots of Runnymede and Magna Charta Island have disappeared from view, only the isolated tops of bungalows being visible above the swirling waters. The luckless inhabitants have adopted the habits of pre-historic lake dwellers. The end is not yet in sight, for, according to the weather man, "equally intense cyclones" are bearing down from the Atlantic upon the tempest-battered island this coming week-end.

The United States Shipping Board steamer Felbeck, bound from Liverpool for New York, sent a wireless yesterday while 48 miles from Small's Light, that she was unable to proceed owing to a broken throttle valve, according to a despatch to Lloyd's from Land's End on the southern coast of England. The despatch from the vessel said that it might be possible to effect temporary repairs, but that it was advisable to send her assistance immediately.

Ships Call Help.

The French steamer Dahomey, a vessel of 3,530 tons, sent out S.O.S signals while twenty miles off Penmarch, Department of Finistere, France.

S.O.S. calls from the Roumanian steamer Carcati, which was five miles south-west of Pendeen, Cornwall, also were picked up.

Body Found Near Niagara Falls With Head Crushed.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Jan. 3. —A gruesome discovery was made in Stamford Township Friday afternoon when the body of a murdered man was found near the Water Works Pump House. His head had apparently been battered in with a heavy piece of pipe found beside the body.

All the clothes except underwear had been removed and the only marks of identification are tattoo marks on the left arm of a woman and a woman's head. MAKE POULTRY GIVE PROFTS

Handy Booklet Tells of Practical Poultry Raising on Farm.

PLAIN LANGUAGE.

"Take the poultry money out of a farm community and the country town merchants would wonder what had happened to their business."

This is one of the many striking statements in a booklet, "Poultry for the Farm and Home," just issued by the Bank of Montreal for free distribution from its various branches.

The facts put forward in this booklet, illustrated by scores of actual photographs, indicate that in many cases the same amount of effort on the part of those who keep poultry could be made to produce much more money than is now being produced. Also, by actual demonstration, the booklet shows that a flock of poultry may be producing little beyond the cost of upkeep, or be an actual loss.

The booklet brings to mind the many welcome dollars which farmers' wives earn for household expenses and little family luxuries by means of their poultry. It gives information as to the enormous amount of investigation into successful poultry methods by poultry experts and Experimental Farms all over this continent—information which has shown beyond all doubt that poultry keeping can be made an important and profitable branch of farm business, even when carried out on a modest scale.

For the guidance of farmers and their wives, the finding of these experts has been put into plain language in this book, together with photographs of every phase of the subject, showing what is right and what is wrong.

It is Profit that Counts.

A farm census in the United States recently showed that in a single year chickens and eggs sold by the farmers there brought $1,048,000,000, or 39 per cent. of the total value of all live stock products. This illustrates what is being done by the constantly-improving methods of poultry-keeping. An experiment at the Experimental Farm at Guelph, Ont., so the booklet states, showed that one method of feeding poultry produced a handsome profit, while another method produced a loss. It will be seen therefore, how important it is for poultry keepers to know exactly what they are doing, and why.

After all, it is profit and profit only, that counts. This booklet tells just what to do to produce profit from poultry—the breeds to keep, the way to house them, the method of culling, the feed to give, the manner of preventing diseases and destroying parasites, how to test eggs and market them—in fact, everything essential that a poultry-keeper should know, put in language and pictures that anybody can understand.

The booklet is of the same practical character as the one issued by the Bank last year on "The Cow, the Mother of Prosperity," many thousands of which were distributed in all parts of Canada. The Bank's interest in the general welfare of the farming community is now further shown by the arrangement it has made for the printing of a special Canadian edition of this poultry booklet, which was originally prepared by the Agricultural Extension Department of the International Harvester Company. Copies may be obtained free of charge from the local branch of the Bank of Montreal.

Homes in England Abandoned Because of Floods.

LONDON, Jan. 3. — (Canadian Press).—While there was some moderation to-day in the gale which has been sweeping the British Isles, English Channel, nearby Atlantic, and North Sea, as well as the greater part of Europe, the flood condition throughout England grows steadily worse. From all parts came reports of homes abandoned because of high water. So far the loss of six lives is reported as a result of the gale and floods.

EXPECT TARIFF WAR.

Deadlock in Negotiations Between France and Germany.

BERLIN, Jan. 3. — (Canadian Press). — A tariff war between France and Germany is viewed as an early eventuality in consequence of a deadlock in negotiations between France and the German delegations which have been going on in Paris for more than a month.

As there appears to be no prospect of a formal agreement before January 10th, when the Customs and other conditions imposed on Germany by the peace treaty automatically expire, the French delegates have proposed a preliminary pact.

To this the Germans are said to have agreed, provided such transitional treaty shall not be based on existing trade restrictions as they suspect that the French steel and textile interests would devote an additional period of Customs immunity to the wholesale unloading of products in occupied areas.

MORLEY SMITHSON TO OTONABEE RATEPAYERS

To the Ratepayers of the Township of Otonabee:

Ladies and Gentlemen,— In respectfully soliciting your vote and influence to re-elect me as Reeve, I should like to draw your attention to the fact that, during the past year, as Reeve, I carried out my promises of a year ago, in so far as it lay in my power to do so.

The financial condition of the township has been improved, and the situation frankly dealt with. The township has also received a fairer share of the county road expenditure, which is made evident in the better condition of such roads. Any county work carried out under my supervision has been done in such manner that it will not have to be a continual charge in the way of repairs or replacement.

If re-elected, I assure the ratepayers a continuance of the same reasonable business course, and a reduction in the tax rate if possible, and a frank statement of the county and township affairs at all times.

Hoping for a continuance of your confidence, and wishing you a happy and prosperous New Year, I remain,

Yours faithfully,
MORLEY E. SMITHSON.

To The Electors of Town of Campbellford:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—As a member of last year's Council, I have again been nominated for Councillor, and have decided to run for this position. I ask your support on election day, and if elected will do my best to serve you.

Yours very respectfully,
Alex. M. McDonald

Otonabee Ratepayers.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,

Your Vote is Solicited for Deputy-Reeve of Otonabee. If elected, I will do all in my power to further the best interests of the Township.

To The Electors of Seymour Township:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—Having served as a Councillor for one year and Deputy Reeve for two years, I have decided to stand as a candidate for the Reeveship.

If my work during the past has met with your approval, I respectfully request your support in the coming election.

Yours faithfully,
P. B. Nelson

To The Electors Of The Township of Smith.

Ladies and Gentlemen,—As it is impossible for me to see you all, I am taking this way of asking for a continuance of your support.

Thanking you in anticipation, and wishing you all a Prosperous New Year.—Yours respectfully,

9 LIVES LOST MONTREAL FIRE

Tenement Building and One Storey House Destroyed This Morning.

THREE INJURED.

Montreal, Jan. 3.—(Candian Press).—Nine lives were lost and three persons suffered serious injuries in two fires which broke out at three o'clock this morning; one in a tenement building in Ste. Agathe Lane and the second in a one-storey wooden house in a field at Montee St. Michael, Montreal North. No cause is ascribed for the city blaze, but an over-heated stove caused the fire in the suburbs.

The downtown fire which took as its toll one woman and five children while three other occupants of the house suffered serious injuries by jumping from second-storey windows. In Montreal North a boy and two girls were the fire victims. After the firemen had subdued the flames in the tenement they entered and found six victims of the blaze lyin gon the floor, table and chairs. The dead are: Rene Thouin, aged 12; Ronco Thouin, aged 3; Cecile Thouin, aged 9; Emalienne Thouin, aged 6; a Greek woman, name unknown, who lived on the third floor; Lionel Brault, aged 6, on second floor.

The injured, now in a Montreal hospital, are , L. Brault, aged 6; Osias Brault, aged 40 years; Mrs. A. Gauthier, aged 50. They suffered fractured legs and severe internal injuries in jumping from windows. The members of families were asleep when fire broke out and flames swept through both dwellings, 11 and 13 St. Agathe Lane, so swiftly that the occupants were unable to escape. When flames were noticed by a passerby, flames were already shooting through the windows.

To the Electors of Campbellford

Ladies and Gentlemen,—In announcing myself as a candidate for re-election as a member of the Town Council of Campbellford, I wish to thank the voters for the confidence they placed in me on three former occasions, thus giving me the opportunity of serving three years as Councillor. I have, I believe I am justified in saying, always made the best interests of the people my aim. I trust I have been economical without being parsimonious.

I have been a consistent advocate of having all public works done by day labor, by Campbellford men, instead of by contract, and the results show that this system has saved the taxpayers thousands of dollars.

During my three years' term of service in the Council, the town has made steady progress, many public improvements having been put in, such as new sidewalks and sewers, and all this has been accomplished without increasing the tax rate.

If I am again honored by your support and re-elected to the Council, I promise to look after the interests of all the people to the best of my ability. Campbellford is my native town, and my ambition is to see it hold its place as one of the leading municipalities in Ontario.

Again thanking you for past favors, wishing you a happy and prosperous "New Year," and reminding you that polling day is Monday, January 5th, I remain,

Yours for a better and bigger Campbellford,

R. H. COLE

KIWANIS CLUBS TO ERECT MEMORIAL

In Stanley Park, B. C., in Memory of Late President Harding.

CHICAGO, Ill., Jan. 3. — Active work on a granite and bronze memorial to the late President Harding which will also symbolize the friendship between the United States and Canada will be started within a short time by the Kiwanis Clubs of both countries. This memorial is to be placed in Stanley Park, Vancouver, B.C., the scene of the late President's last address.

The design of Twizell and Twizell, architects, associated with Charles Maroga, sculptor, Vancouver, was officially approved by the International Kiwanis Council which has just concluded its annual meeting in Chicago.

The memorial will be in the form of a combination seat and monument 37 feet wide and 11 feet high, placed in front of towering trees. This type of memorial was decided upon as being more suitable to the site, because any shaft monument would be dwarfed by the giant fir trees of Stanley Park.

The seat will be within a few feet of the pavilion from which Mr. Harding delivered his last address during his Alaskan trip, and will be fronted by a shallow pool of water which will reflect the memorial.

In the center of the memorial which will be erected from light gray Canadian granite from Granite Island, about 65 miles from the park will be bronze plaque bearing a profile bas relief of Mr. Harding and an extract from his Vancouver speech which will read as follows

"What an object lesson of peace is shown to-day by our two countries to all the world. No grim-faced fortifications mark our frontiers, no huge battle-ships patrol our dividing waters, no steathy spies lurk in our tranquil border hamlet. Only a scrap of paper recording hardly more than a simple understanding, safeguards lives and properties on the Great Lakes, and only humble mile-posts mark the inviolable boundary line for thousands of miles through farm and forest. Our protection is in our fraternity, our armor is our faith; the tie that binds more firmly year by year is ever-increasing acquaintance and comradeship through interchange of citizens; and the compact is not of perishable parchment, but of fair and honorable dealing which, God grant, shall continue for all time."

On either side of this Bronze tablet will be female figures in bronze representing Canada and the United States, holding the shields of these two countries and with an olive wreath between them signifying peace. At the extreme ends of the memorial will be bronze American eagles.

It is planned to have the Premier of Canada and a high official of the United States attend the dedication of the memorial which symbolizes the friendship of the two countries and the cooperation of the Kiwanis clubs in objectives of civic service common to both. The memorial will prove a potent factor in further inspiring International good will between the two countries.

MAY BE YEAR OF DEBT SETTLEMENT

Newspapers Discuss Inter-Allied Debt Questions.

LONDON, Jan. 3. — (Canadian Press).—Not since the world-war ended, not even when Stanley Baldwin negotiated funding of British debt to United States has there been more newspaper discussion than now over inter-allied debts and financial aftermath of war, impression seems to be general that 1925 will prove to be year of financial rehabilitation and settlement.

Two factors are responsible for this decision; first outspoken article of former Ambassador George Harvey in the Washington post on position of France of debt question and second, rapid recovering in value of pound sterling and consequent prospect of restoration of gold standard in England.

School Board.

The Board of Education met on Friday night in the Public Library at eight o'clock. Members present were: J. A. Loucks (chairman), J. M. Bygott, Chas. Benor, Cook J. L. Hoover, D. J. Lynch, H. O. Richardson, J. M. Arnold, O. Sullivan, and Stephens. One important item discussed at the meeting was the difficulty of heating the north end of the High School building. Mr. Howe, of Belleville, of the firm of Howe and Hagerman, contractors, was present. The Board asked him why this part of the building could not be heated with the present system. Mr. Howe had with him Mr. Elliott, an expert in heating systems, whom he had engaged for over five years in cases such as this one at the School. They advised putting a trap on each of the radiators of the school and placing an electric pump in the boiler house to pump the exhaust water back into the boiler, and they estimated the cost of this would be seventeen hundred dollars. Mr. Elliott thoroughly explained the system and drew a draft of the system they proposed to install on the blackboard.

It was moved by D. J. Lynch and seconded by J. M. Bygott that before closing the deal with Howe and Hagerman, they notify Mr. Coombs, the architect, of the trouble and ask him what he would suggest to remedy it.

Carried unanimously.

The whole evening was taken up with a lengthy discussion of this subject. The matter was then left over until the next regular meeting in January.

The Board then adjourned.

RUINS OF OLDEN CITY DISCOVERED

Native Guides Believed City to be Haunted and Refused to Go Near It.

THE HAGUE, Holland, Jan. 3.—A romantic story of the discovery of an ancient unknown and uninhabited fortress city comes from Sumatra, one of the largest islands of the Dutch East Indian archipelago.

According to the "Sumatra Post," J. L. Hiemstra, a forestry official, journeying in the Upper Langkat region, reached a point beyond which the native guides were reluctant to proceed. They talked of a nearby silent city which they had once seen from afar, but never dared approach, as they imagined it to be haunted by evil spirits.

Hiemstra, however, pushed on with a small party and eventually reached a sheer wall of rock of great height and some miles long, with natural bastions and inaccessible except at three points, by one of which the explorers entered.

They came upon a veritable maze of intercommunicating alleys, passages, chambers and cave dwellings. In the centre of this fortress town was found a large open space with one huge solitary tree. There were inscriptions in strange characters, and remains of what seemed ancient tombs. Silence brooded over the place, and although traces of wild mountain goats were observed, not a human soul was seen.

Who the ancient rock-dwellers were and why they abandoned their impregnable stronghold remains a mystery.

ORDERS OTTAWA TO INCREASE RATES

Domestic Consumers Will Have to Pay More if Order is Carried Out.

Ottawa, Jan. 3.—An increase in Hydro-Electric Commission rates in Ottawa of from 15 per cent. to 20 per cent., has been ordered by the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission, word to this effect having been received by the corporation. While the letter ordering the adoption of a revised schedule of rates in Ottawa does not state what it would mean to Ottawa consumers, it was predicted today by those in a position to know that the new schedule would boost charges here for domestic, commercial and power at least 15 to 20 per cent.

Modified Old Order.

The new schedule ordered is a modification of the schedule which several months ago the Ontario Hydro ordered the city to put into effect, but which was never done, as the city protested. It was pointed out at that time in the strongest manner by the Ottawa Hydro-Electric Commission that the local commission showed a surplus every year and had a subtantial credit balance at the present time and that an increase here was unjustified. As a result of this protest, Sir Adam Beck allowed the matter to remain in abeyance.

Comes to Corporation.

The correspondence at that time took place between the Ontario Hydro and the local commission, but the latest order for a revised schedule comes direct to the corporation, a fact which was regarded as somewhat strange by Hydro officials today.

WELLINGTON KOO HAD A CLOSE CALL

Former Chinese Minister to Washington Sought By Enemies.

LONDON, January 3. — United Press. — The Daily Express in a despatch from Pekin to-day describes the sensational escape of Dr. Wellington Koo, former ambassador to Washington, and later foreign minister, whose arrest had been ordered by General Feng Yu Hsiang, Christian Chinese Commander in charge at Pekin. Dr. Koo escaped to the house of a friend in the foreign quarters.

This friend, an American, helped disguise the ex-minister as a woman. They motored to Tien Tsin in safety, passing several guards who searched the car.

"Search all you like," the American told the guards, "but don't disturb my wife, who is ill."

SATURDAY, JANUARY 3, 1925.

THE CHARITY BOARD.

Mayor Turner's tribute to the Charity Board at its meeting the other night was merited.

The veteran Mr. Harry Rush and the other members of the board have given their fellow-citizens excellent service in their administration of this very important branch of the civic government.

There is always the danger that a charity department will either prove too liberal and allow public funds to be looted by parasites and impostors or grow stony-hearted, with the result that deserving cases are unable to get the assistance they need.

Peterborough's Charity Board has been able to strike a happy medium between the two.

People who are in need of help are not neglected, while, on the other hand, there is no squandering of the civic funds upon those whose circumstances do not call for relief.

Mr. Rush has been of most valuable assistance in his long connection with this work, and he and his associates fully merit the nice things said about them by the Mayor, whose words will be generally echoed.

THE TORONTO RESULT.

The result of the mayoralty contest in Toronto is significant, by reason of the light it throws upon the readiness of a large part of the electorate to allow issues that have no real connection with municipal affairs, to sway them.

There does not seem to be the least doubt in the world that ex-Mayor Hiltz was refused a second term simply because he was a zealous supporter of the O. T. A. and his opponent had announced himself in favour of Government control.

Wet voters may not have been certain of the degree of dampness of Foster, but they had no doubt as to the aridity of Hiltz, and it was thumbs down for the latter.

The idea seems to have been to furnish Premier Ferguson with a demonstration of the fate that awaits his Government if some steps are not taken to provide refreshment for the thirsty.

The Mayor of Toronto has nothing to do with the liquor policy of the Government, and every elector knew that to be so.

Yet thousands of them ignored the good record of Hiltz and the very evident fact that the duties of the position calls for the best man available and voted on a wet issue.

Mr. Foster may prove as good a chief magistrate as the man he deposed, but that does not alter the fact that the willingness of one section of the people to close their eyes to the real matter in hand and the indifference of thousands of other citizens would have made it easy under the same circumstances to have elected a candidate of much inferior qualities.

TOO MANY DEFAULTERS.

Peterborough has not yet earned the right to be congratulated upon a citizenship keen to look after its own interests and to take an intelligent part in the selection of civic government.

The smallness of the vote polled on Thursday shows that a large percentage of the electorate was quite willing to adopt a "Let George do it" attitude toward the civic election.

It is to be hoped that the defaulters will be quite as willing to accept their tax bills without complaint and to keep silent as to the actions of the governing bodies.

No citizen who refused to vote has any logical right to criticize.

It was the general duty to use the franchise and make the best possible choice out of the material that was offered.

If men were elected who do not meet with the approval of the non-voters and other candidates left at home who would be more acceptable to the citizens who failed to visit the polls, the least the latter can do is to take the result gracefully and in silence, realizing that the blame for this development cannot very easily be shifted from their own shoulders.

The fact, too, that in spite of Mr. Blade's retirement from the race a week ago and his letter to the electors requesting them not to vote for him, nearly 200 electors marked their ballots for him, does not indicate that in their case at least was there much thought given to the election or interest of the necessary keenness shown in the campaign.

The desired efficiency in civic administration cannot be hoped for until there is a more general realization not only of the necessity of voting but also of paying more attention to the capabilities of the candidates and less to personal and other issues.

FINANCING THE CHURCH.

The system of raising money for church purposes by holding bazaars and suppers is vigorously attacked in the current issue of the Presbyterian, published at Philadelphia. Wilbur La Roe, Jun., an elder in a prominent church, takes the system to task and attributes to it many of the financial worries of the church today, says the London Advertiser.

Mr. La Roe recounts his first memory of church financing, when the annual church "fair" was held "to raise something like $300 which everyone seemed complacently to assume could not be raised in any other way." One incident stayed in his youthful imagination, when on one of these annual occasions his mother was sick and he was sent to the bakeshop to purchase "a formidable looking cocoanut layer cake, which cost 65 cents." There were too many cakes at that sale, and at the end of the day, when one of the church officials turned auctioneer, Mr. La Roe, Sen., purchased the 65-cent cak efor 25 cents and took it home. The cake cost the family 90 cents, of which the church received 25 cents.

The same writer reviews the church supper provided by the ladies and states that they have made the remarkable discovery "that the average Christian gentleman will generously give 75 cents for a dollar supper." The idea behind this, Mr. La Roe claims, is not giving at all, and he is right. A person who attends a church supper and gets his money's worth in the way of an elaborate meal has contributed nothing; he has traded his 50 or 75 cents for a dinner or a supper, or whatever it may be.

The point Mr. La Roe stresses is that all this feverish activity gets away entirely from the idea of giving, away from the fine principle of sacrificing something in order that the work of the Lord may be carried on successfully and in a dignified way. It is not making the people in the churches face their obligations as they should, nor is it placing proper ideals before the children. Mr. La Roe can see nothing in the system at all that inspires, nothing that finds its echo in the words of the song that "Christian soldiers marching on to war." He fails to find in it either the spirit of sacrifice that reached its climax at Calvary.

His viewpoint should give rise to some serious thought on the part of those who look upon church entertainments, suppers and fairs as the proper way of raising money. The idea of making personal sacrifice in order to give has in it greater possibilities, greater inspiration and a greater degree of dignity.

THAT BOYS' PARLIAMENT.

The Ontario Boys' Parliament, now "in session" in Toronto, is a fine, an encouraging development. A depressing thing in Canada, as, indeed, in most democracies, is the seeming indifference of our younger people to the serious things of citizenship. Forty, thirty, or twenty years ago, when representative government and parliamentarianism were more vigorous than now, young men took a more active interest in public affairs. Around their own firesides they followed discussions by their elders upon the political controversies o fthe day, or, better still, participated in the debates which were so fine and common a feature of the debating clubs which flourished in nearly every parish.

As a direct consequence, we think, the calibre of men in public life was higher than at present; for although one does not need to swallow the too prevalent belief that all present-day politicians are pigmies, it is nevertheless all too true that we have few successors to the Macdonalds, Browns, Blakes, Mowats, Thompsons, Tuppers, Cartwrights, Mills and Lauriers. Somehow or other, our best minds have lost their taste for public life. Too many, indeed, look upon it as an inferior calling, sneer at Parliament as a "talking shop," think that politics is synonymous with crookedness, regard practical politics as fit only for a few professional workers and ward heelers. The results, of course, are inevitable.

A generation ago most young men of education looked upon public life as the most honorable, the highest career. Today the average young Canadian knows more of Mr. Charles Chaplin than of Mr. Mackenzie King; and we venture to think that for every book that he has read about Canadian history or Canadian politics he has perused twenty by Ethel M. Dell, or Theodore Dreiser, or Harold Bell Wright. Mr. Douglas Fairbanks, Miss Pola Negri, Mr. John McGraw, Miss Mary Pickford, Mr. Jack Dempsey, radio, cross-word puzzles, the latest motor model, the Red Book magazine—these are too frequently the gods and goddesses of our younger people; and one sometimes has an uneasy feeling that they are falling into that ugly, nouveau-riche "Babbitry" which Sinclair Lewis has pictured among a certain class of Americans.

In England, always and still the model democracy, politics remains the most sought after career. Thus one sees young men of poverty and obscurity schooling themselves through youth and early manhood to become Ramsay MacDonalds and J. H. Clyneses and J. H. Thomases, and so on; while, on the other hand, one sees Westminster the goal of great families like the Cecils and the Cavendishes, as well as of the brightest minds from the famous public schools and the universities. There has hardly been a president of the Oxford Union in the past thirty years who has not found his way to Parliament. It is simply because the British people, the pioneers of responsible government, and still its greatest exponents, are taught from youth up, and by tradition, that politics, the science and art of government, the expression of the right of men to control their own destinies, is the noblest of all callings.

It is because the Ontario Boys' Parliament is a step in the direction of re-creating public service and political consciousness among our younger people that it ought to be welcomed. The young men who go to the Legislature to discuss current problems, even though they be but the problems of youth, will learn something of the dignity, the procedure and the traditions of government. They will cultivate a taste for discussion, school themselves in public expression—an art sadly lacking in Canada, if, indeed, not held in contempt—and thus fit themselves for tasks of leadership in the coming days.

That, surely, is a national gain. For there never was a time when greater need existed for more intelligent and collective thinking on the part of our people upon growing national issues. Sectionalism in the West, sectionalism in the East; growing problems of production, distribution, transportation; economic factors that become more complex with an ever-changing civilization; questions of fiscal policy, of defence, of national status—these all challenge grave and continuous reflection. They will not be met nor solved by foolish cynicism of politics, nor by lethargy, nor by railings agains tParliament, nor by concentration upon radio and movies and the latest models. Hence the gratitude one must have for any sign of a new earnestness for the public good on the part of the younger generation.—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

It is hard to say whether the Toronto mayoralty result was a wet victory or a Telegram sweep. Possibly both.

That Toronto weekly editor who has gone to jail for contempt of court will be able to write some inside stuff on prison reform.

The next big civic matter is the budget. It will give the new Aldermen a chance to show how they can use the pruning knife.

Mayor Foster of Toronto is expected to tell deputations that come looking for financial assistance "Try and get it."

TORONTO LIVESTOCK.

TORONTO, Jan. 2.—Receipts of cattle at the Union Stock Yards this week were over 1,000 head more than those for Christmas week, but the demand was strong and prices on export cattle were a strong 25 cents a cwt. higher and in some butchers the advance ran as much as $1 a cwt.

In the export line there were less than 300 head available. For choice steers prices were $8 to $8.40 a cwt.; for heifers $6.50 to $7.50 was paid; short keep steers were taken as high as $7.25 a cwt.; cows were $5 to $5.50 and bulls $4.50 to $5.25 a cwt. In the butchers' line choice handyweights made $7 to $7.50, good butchers $6.25 to $6.75, medium butchers $5.50 to $6 and no common butchers worth while at less than $5 a cwt. Butchers' cows were up 25 cents a cwt. in all classes except canners, which were steady and firm. Bulls of the better quality were up the same as cows.

Next week's business depends a good deal on the size of the runs. A light shipment on Monday will doubtless demand firm if not higher prices, but any run of consequence will be used to cut some from this week's quotations. Both export firms will be able to use a good supply of the right kind of steers, heifers, cows, bulls and short-keeps and there is enough competition to warrant steady prices. The packers want butchers other than those just warmed up and will discount the price of any but those finished or nearly so.

Calves were a strong market all week. Buffalo, with a top price of 17½ cents a pound, left a good opening for shipments from here, and one buyer took all the veal calves in sight the first two days. Choice calves here were 13 to 14 cents and good mediums were up to 11½ cents. Common calves made 8 cents and over. On Wednesday the price of medium calves was easier by about half a dollar a cwt.

Lambs were up two dollars a cwt. for the week. Choice ewe lambs sold at 15 to 15¾ cents, and heavy lambs and bucks were 2 cents a pound lower. Light runs favor the lamb prices, and sheep are firmer also.

Hogs crossed $10 a cwt. f.o.b. during the week, and although the packers' bid is only $9.75 a cwt., at the week-end sellers expect to be able to do better than this with the competition from outside and local packers.

MONTREAL GRAIN

MONTREAL, Jan. 2.—The European demand for Canadian wheat here to-day was not very brisk and trade in consequence was dull. The only business of importance in the local cash grain market was a sale of some No. 4 Manitoba wheat at 16 1-2 cents per bushel under the Winnipeg May option, C. I. F. Bay Ports, and No. 1 Northern Wheat was quoted at 10 cents per bushel over the May option, C.I.F. Bay Ports. The market for Canadian Western Oats was weaker and prices were reduced 1 to 2 cents per bushel, while Ontario grades were unchanged. No. 2 white being quoted at 65 cents, No. 3 at 63 cents and No. 4 grade at 61 cents per bushel, ex-store.

A moderate trade was done in mill-feed and the undertone was steady. A stronger feeling developed in rolled oats and prices were advanced 5 to 10 cents bag.

STERLING PRICES

MONTREAL, Jan. 2.—Sterling Exchange rates were quoted here to-night as follows:—

Sterling demand $4.75 3-4; Sterling Cables $4.76 1-3.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Jan. 2.—Persistent selling especially on the part of houses with eastern connections, brought about a sharp setback in wheat prices to-day after an early upturn. The selling was associated somewhat with Argentine shipments aggregating 2,706,000 bushels. Wheat closed weak 1 17-2 to 2 3-4 cents net lower May 1.76 1-4 to 1.76 1-2 and July 1.52 1-4 to 1.52 3-8, with corn 1 1-8 to 1 5-8 cents down, oats showing 1 3-8 to 1 5-8 cents down, oats showing 1 3-8 to 1 5-8 cents decline and provisions varying from 17 cents decline to 7 cents advance.

EGG PRICES

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 2.— Early this week the egg market advanced at Toronto and Montreal and those prices have been maintained. The situation with regard to spot fresh is a little easier than the United States but January fresh futures show some advance. There is nothing new in the poultry situation. Some late arrivals made the new year situation a little easier, and it is reported from some markets that there is a considerable carry over of turkeys.

Toronto firm, fresh specials, jobbing 75, extras 70 to 75, storage extras 49 to 51, first 46 to 47, seconds 38 to 40.

Montreal fresh extras jobbing 62, firsts 55, storage extras 47, firsts 44. Poultry dull.

FOOD SITUATION IN BRITAIN DANGEROUS

Sir Leo Money Says Situation is as Bad as During the War.

By LLOYD ALLEN.

LONDON, Jan. 3. — (United Press).—Sensational testimony and recommendations of Sir Leo Chiozzamoney before a session of the Royal Commission, which is investigating food prices, has engendered widespread discussion.

"The British food situation is as desperate and precarious in this time of peace as it was during the war," he said.

"The ten-pence price of bread has doubled in recent years, and looking into the future, there are good prospects of its doubling again."

Sir Leo strongly urged as a remedial measure the creation of the Department of Supply with the authority of buying wheat in bulk and there stimulating an increase in home-grown grain and eventually eliminating the middlemen as such.

Sir Auckland Geddes, who presided, emphatically declared the organization of such a body would be productive of international complications.

"The plan strikes at the very roots of existing relations between nations," he said.

Questioned, Sir Leo refused to discuss the political aspects of his proposition. He definitely querried whether the Supply Department would function as an Imperial preference measure.

Sir Leo explained the increase in the food prices was due to the world's increase in population, an improvement in the standard of living, and the disappearance of the United States ultra-cheap wheat due to a bigger home demand.

What surpluses of the various Dominions, he added, tended to decrease in the future as is the case with the United States.

Sir Leo advocated the formation of the national food budget from year to year, asserting that England's food supply should not be left to chance.

J. Hay Thornburn recommended the reconstruction and expansion of the English elevator system. He said it should be linked up with the Canadian Dominion and allied systems with the establishment of "a board of grain commissioners," composed of business men, and the "creation of a new system of Imperial grain warrants."

He frankly told Sir Auckland that such a scheme would eliminate Chicago's controlling interest of the wheat situation and probably make England the world's grain centre.

Minneapolis, Minn, Jan. 3.—A carload of wheat sold at the chamber of commerce here Friday of $2.21 a bushel ,giving the first day's trading here in 1925 the highest mark reached for wheat since 1920; the previous high post-war cash price was $2..18½, established Dec. 26 last.

MANY KNOX CHURCH DISSENTERS FROM UNION DEBARRED FROM THEIR OWN BUILDING GATHER AS WELCOME GUESTS OF ALL SAINTS' CHURCH

Principle and Practice of Organic Union is Denounced by Speaker, Who Extolls the History and Achievements of the Old Presbyterian Church.

UNION ARGUMENTS MET AND REFUTED.

Arthur McLeish, Sr., Presides at Meeting, where Principal Speaker is Rev. W. F. McConnell, of Toronto—Says Presbyterianism Will Carry on in Spite of All.

Like their forefathers, the covenanters, who were driven to secret places to hold their meetings, over a hundred members of Knox Presbyterian Church who dissent from Union were gathered last night in the Parish Hall of All Saints' Anglican Church, to hear reasons and plans for continuing the Presbyterian Church in Canada. With them assembled as many more from each of St. Paul's and St. Andrew's, the other two Presbyterian Churches in Peterboro, and the hall was crowded almost to capacity. It was an earnest band, founding its claim on the right to free worship enjoyed by citizens of the British Empire through ages past; demanding that though the Union strip them of property and name, it yet leave them their traditions that have been handed down from the heart of the Old Testament, for which their great-grandfathers died, and for which they are prepared to go out on the street beggared as to Church property but rich in the possession of their grand old faith.

The leaders of the Union cause were criticized; the methods of the Act of Union were denounced as unfair; the action of Knox Church session in excluding them from the church was labelled unjust, but no criticism was offered throughout the evening of the Unionists who are content to go into the new Church. "Freedom to worship God, according to our consciences and after the manner of our fathers" was the object of the Presbyterian Church Association as it was articulated last night, and the speakers conceded the same right to everyone else.

Rev. W. F. McConnell, of Toronto, a man of strong personality and fluent speech, was the principal speaker. The meeting was conducted by Arthur McLeish, Sr., who presided, and John Anderson, both members of the Board of Managers of Knox Church.

All Saints' Stand.

Rev. J. D. Paterson, rector of All Saints' Anglican Church, said he had not come to attend the meeting but only to extend a welcome. He was in Toronto when the request for the use of the hall was made, and when informed that his churchwardens were agreeable he was very glad to add his consent. "We do not have anything but warm sympathy for other Christian units," Mr. Paterson said, "but we do not presume to judge on matters concerning you alone. Do not allow yourselves to think our allowing you to come here shows we have a sneaking sympathy for your side of the question, because I am bound to say that if the others come here tomorrow they will be given the same hospitality. Our hope is this: that when we are all old men and old women and we look back on these days we will know then that God the Holy Spirit has been in all our deliberations."

Mr. Paterson explained his detached attitude by saying that when he was asked five minutes after granting the hall to which party he had given it, he did not remember. "It is our hope that the buildings of All Saints' Church may be used to the fullest extent by the community whenever they are suitable," he concluded.

The Chairman Explains.

Arthur McLeish, Sr., as chairman of the meeting, thanked the Rector and Wardens of All Saints' for the use of the building for the meeting. He said the members of Knox Church who did not agree with Union views had applied to the Session for permission to use Knox Church for a presentation of the anti-Union case and had been refused. "There is no use in their saying anything different," he declared, producing, but not reading, copies of letters exchanged by the parties.

Excluded from Church.

"It is not the first time we have been debarred from Presbyterian churches and refused the right that has been our privilege all down the ages of being free members of a free church, and we gladly join in thanking our Anglican friends for the splendid courtesy they have extended to us," said Rev. Mr. McConnell.

We desire the perpetuation of the Presbyterian Church, because we know what it means. We get our motto out of the Old Testament, the burning bush—"nec tamen consumeratur".

We get our name out out of the heart of the New Testament.

We did not get our Presbyterianism from any country, but from the founders of the Christian church. We do not take any pride in the idea that we are an offshoot from any other branch of the church. I don't believe St. Patrick or Colombo were anything else than Presbyterians. I am a Presbyterian by conviction.

True to Traditions

Looking over a list of ministers who had signed a document undertaking to go into the new church, a layman said: "What a pity; there are no martyrs there."

The Martin Luthers are the men who laid the foundations of our church and the issue to-day is whether we are going to be true to the teachings and traditions that have been handed down to us.

The Presbyterian is not a national church. It is a church for every nation and all people, with a free and open communion table.

Some people think we are just a few "disgruntled kickers", Mr. McConnell said in explaining his standing in the Presbyterian Church and in the Anti-Union movement. He was overseas for years, then convenor of religious education in Chatham and London and was "the white haired boy with the ecclesiastical hierarchy that his its headquarters in Confederation Life Building, Toronto" until he expressed his opposition to union, when he was called disgruntled.

"We are not disgruntled. We concede to our friends the right to go into Union if they wish to do so but we protest against their right to take all of us and our property and our history into Union by law. They are going to take the whole traditions, history property people and the whole thing. If they wanted to be really generous they might have left us a share of the traditions — that would not have cost them anything.

Actively Opposed

"Through our activities we secured a stay of six months during which votes might be taken," Mr. McConnell said: "There is an insidious propaganda emanating from the leaders of the Union Party saying that we are now in the Union and what we are doing is voting out of the union. That is not so. The Union Bill does not become effective until June, 10, 1925. The question on which you are voting now, is whether or not you are going into the Union and the property question will be decided when the Ontario Legislature meets.

In British Columbia minority rights even in congregations are to be and will be protected.

The Unionists claim they are more generous to minorities than anyone has ever been before, but the fact of the matter is they are turning us out on the street without even a hymn book.

The first congregation to vote in British Columbia has voted to remain with the Presbyterian Church. In Saskatchewan the churches are voting on a property transfer, but this point will be contested.

Don't be alarmed by these churches coming in from the West apparently voting for organic union. They tell us there are 3,000 Union Churches in the West. That is more than there are Presbyterian Churches in the West. Just watch these churches and see how many there will be when the total vote is counted.

How It's Done.

There are churches where the Presbyterians are staying at home and the other denominations are going to church. The Methodist minister is living in the Presbyterian manse, and the Methodists are using the Presbyterian church. In Lumsden an old man said since they got Church Union they have killed the town. There the vote was 72 for and 17 against, because the Presbyterians stayed at home and other denominations voted the church into Union.

Will that stand? Watch and see. We are holding the strategic points and we will have a strong Presbyterian Church in Western Canada. Many of these cases will be contested in the courts.

Regina is the great example of the iniquity of the system, where the minority have no churches and no trust funds. These people are determined that the minorities shall come out without a stick. You will remember that Jesus Christ was in the minority.

Though the sticks and stones are carried into the Union, the spirit of the Presbyterian Church will remain outside in affiliataion with a church of 50,000,000 people all over the world.

We have the desire to co-operate with all denominations, and it will be the fault of the United Church if we do not co-operate with them in the future."

Is It Autocracy?

The difference between the Presbyterians and the Unionists is that between democracy and autocracy," the speaker said. He compared the United Church with Germany, and the Presbyterian Church with the British Empire. The kind of theology that is being taught in many of our theological colleges is German," he asserted.

The object of Union is "That we may all be one." We have one common program now. We are united in the deside to establish the kingdom of our Lord and Master. We do not desire disruption; we had no disruption until this Union Bill was drafted and passed."

Blames Leaders.

Drawing an analogy from the British Empire, which is held together by one great common aim, the speaker said the individual parts have their own identities and autonomy. "Try substituting autocracy with rule from London.

"We have had mighty poor leadership, because the leaders have led us to the disruption of the Presbyterian Church.

"What did the early leaders say? That it would be utter madness to enter into a union that did not carry with it the whole membership of the churches.

"Here is an example that the people have no constitutional rights in the Presbyterian Church. Here you have to go out and ask another building for your meeting. It's a wonder they deign to take your money. (Laughter).

Up in the Air.

Rev. Mr. McConnell outlined the progress of the Union machine through late years. In 1911 the Union question was academical. "Union was in the air and it is still up in the air," he said.

"Two of the most prominent Unionists went through the country saying the biggest mistake the Unionists made was in giving the people a vote. They would have no constitutional right but for the Presbyterian Church Association. We desire to get the full strength of the Presbyterian Church in Canada and the Unionists are attempting to forestall us. It is not fair. The Trust Funds are to be distributed in proportion to the numbers of persons entering or remaining out of Union, and Unionists should be as eager as the Presbyterians to have a census made.

Referring to the closing of churches, the speaker said the men who are now howling Union have not been doing their duty. "What we need to-day is a church with a missionary programme that will burst out the walls of the churches and build new ones."

Give us a chance to show that we have a missionary church that will open churches instead of closing them.

Make No Difference?

They tell us Union will not make a particle of difference.

Why all the fuss and the row if it's not going to make any difference? Do you think the Unionist party would have spent $25,000,000 to get nothing at all?

It's going to make a mighty difference. There will be the central administrative council that will govern the Church with all kinds of autocratic powers.

Criticize the Bill.

The best illustration of legislating black white is in the declaration that anything done by the United Church with trust funds shall not be deemed to be a breach of the trust.

The Presbyterian Church shall have all its rights and privileges and authorities until the first meeting of the general council—but they tell us there will be no difference to us. This meeting is to be held on the day the Act comes into force. (Laughter).

They say the people will have the right to elect the general council, but it has been elected two years now. Did you have anything to say about it?

They say you will call your own minister in the usual way, but the general council is given power to make the appointment if the representatives of the congregation cannot get the men from it that they want.

I sometimes wonder how Dr. Pidgeon and Dr. Gandier would like to have their names removed by legislation—the object being of course to deprive them of their inheritance—and then be told they can take any other name they like.

What about the appointment of elders? They are to be made by the General Council. You are all in their hands and they are to say whether the elders are to be appointed without any guarantee of what they will teach.

Confession of Faith.

Regarding the Westminster Confession of Faith, the speaker declared that those ministers who are now disowning it formerly subscribed to it on their solemn oaths. It was all right until we appeared in the House of Lords and heard our leadesr saying they took the Westminster Confession of Faith with certain mental reservations, and some of them had not even read the Westminster Confession of Faith.

The Westminster Confession of Faith was drawn at a time when the mentality of man was at its zenith. These men to-day are not finding fault with the Westminster Confession of Faith alone but with the Word of God on which it is built. No Church has ever had a grander conception of the Divine Being than the Presbyteriarn Church.

There is no grander thing in the world to-day than the Shorter Catechism. These men would have us narrow our conception of God and would have us narrow our scope of the Divine Being, Whom we were taught to honor and worship at our mother's knee.

Look For Revival.

We are going to have a revival in Canada in our continuing Presbyterian Church. We are going back to teach the Shorter Catechism to our children. Don't let them blindfold you and lead you unaware into the Union Church.

Brands it a Lie.

Our foundation is the Bible and our standard is the Westminster Confession of Faith. The Westminster Confession of Faith does not pronounce the condemnation of infants. It is not responsible for the foolish interpretations of professors.

When anyone presumes to tell you that our Confession teaches that, hurl the lie back in his teeth. We believe the great truth of God's Word: "God so loved the world that He gave His only Son, that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish but have everlasting life."

The Westminster Confession of Faith denfiitely states that "God is not the author of evil."

We do not take the ground that the Westminster Confession of Faith cannot be revised but it cannot be revised by the Unionists.

Who is to examine the minister under this new order as he goes through college? These men who are taking their vows with mental reservations—where are we coming to? What about the marriage ceremony? Are people to be permitted to take the marriage vow with mental reservations? I trow not."

Little Discussion.

On Mr. McConnell's invitation to ask questions, there was very little discussion. He remarked that the anti-unionists had shown a desire at all times to discuss all issues freely. They had been debarred from the churches and had been compelled to pay out large sums of money for halls and accommodation. The Union leaders were in the meantime using Presbyterian Church money to prosecute their campaign.

No matter what the outcome of the vote may be, the Presbyterian Church will carry on the ideals of the ancient order even if some members do enter union. On June 10 next the supporters of the Presbyterian Church will be responsible for the maintenance of missionaries in the foreign field who will not subscribe to the doctrines of the Union church. Lacking the borrowing powers of the Presbyterian Church, they will be compelled to depend upon the generosity of members and supporters.

A member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, in moving a vote of thanks to the speaker of the evening, declared "The ministers have lost the real spirit of God," bringing down the house in the biggest applause of the evening. He denounced the autocracy of the Union Church.

A student missionary from the Hall's Bridge circuit told of the peculiar circumstances there, the Church roll having been lost. The majority of the members and adherents, he said, are opposed to union, but do not know how to register their votes. The matter will be taken up by Rev. Mr. McConnell, who said that unless a vote is taken the Church automatically goes into union.

James Dutton led the devotional exercises.

PRESENTATION TO A LOCAL MANAGER

Mr. William G. Ferguson Retires as Manager of the Street Railway.

Mr. Wm. G. Ferguson, retiring local manager of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, was the recipient on Wednesday, December 31st, of a gold watch and chain, accompanied by an address, presented by the employees of the local Street Railway and Gas Departments of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario.

The presentation, which took place in the George street offices, was attended by the entire local staff, and expressions of regret were universal at the retirement of Mr. Ferguson, who has been for the past ten years local manager, since the absorption of the old Otonabee Power Company, of which he was manager, into the Hydro system. Guests present from out of town included Mr. Siebert, Hydro auditor of Toronto, and Mr. Burrowes of the Belleville staff.

Expressions of the respect and esteem in which Mr. Ferguson is held by the various departments, were voiced by Mr. Siebert, for the Toronto Office, Mr. Burrowes, for the Belleville staff, Messrs. H. Beal and E. F. Reid, for the local Gas Department and Mr. J. McCann presented the Street Railway Department.

The address was read by Mr. Beal, and Mr. J. McCann presented the gold watch and chain, the former engraved with the inscription: "Presented by the employees of the Street Railway and Gas Departments."

Mr. Ferguson in reply, commented on the pleasant relations which had always existed between himself and his staff, and at his own regret at severing cordial relations of such long standing. He spoke at some length of the friendship he had for heads of all departments, making special reference to Mr. L. G. Ireland, who until recently was general manager of the Central Ontario System of the Hydro Electric Power Commission, and called for three cheers and a tiger for Mr. Ireland, which request was heartily responded to.

The following is the address:

"Dear Mr. Ferguson:

"We, the employees of the Peterboro Radial Railway, and the Gas Department, have heard with much regret that you are about to sever your connection with our company. We say with regret, because we are sorry to lose a manager whose relations with his staff have always been of the most cordial nature, but our sorrow is tempered with happiness when we realize that you are about to enjoy a rest to which you are justly entitled by reason of your long and faithful service.

"We shall ever remember with gratitude your unfailing kindness and courteous treatment, and strive to emulate the loyal devotion to duty that brings you to the end of a long business career with a record of faithful and untiring service. Such a record will undoubtedly prove a pleasant memory during the rest of a life which we trust will be long and happy.

"We ask you to accept this slight token as a souvenir of our regard and of the friendly feeling that has existed between us for many years, with a hope that you will not forget in your more leisurely existence the companions of strenuous business hours."

Yours respectfully,

(Signed) H. L. Beal, J. McCann, W. A. Hinds, S. T. Harris, C. Detcher, C. Clark, H. Spargo, E. F. Reid, S. W. Harris, A. Armstrong, H. S. Pogue, F. R. Sanderson, T. J. Montgomery, W. J. Clow, G. R. Quartermaine.

Peterborough, December 31, 1924.

The meeting concluded with the singing of "For's He's a Jolly Good Fellow," and three cheers and a tiger for Mr. Ferguson.

NEW MANAGER OF STREET RAILWAY

Mr. R. L. Clifford, of Toronto, in Charge of the Local System.

Mr. R. L. Clifford of Toronto succeeds Mr. William G. Ferguson as local manager of the Hydro Electric Power Commission. Mr. Clifford has been for some years identified with the Hydro Commission, and comes to Peterboro' from the engineering department of the Toronto and York Division.

The operation of municipal street railway lines by the Hydro Commission is one of their many activities. In Peterboro', as elsewhere, extensive investigations are carried on from time to time as to the "riding habit" of the population. Riding on the street cars, it appears, becomes a habit as well as anything else, and the business of the management is to cultivate this tendency as much as possible. "Service at cost" is their motto, and they point to the duty devolving on the well-to-do citizen in patronizing the street car, instead of using the automobile at all times. More patronage makes for easier conditions for the working man who is compelled to use the street car, as it encourages better service and cheaper fares. The Hydro Commission is "strong for suggestions from the public," as the new manager expresses it.

A good deal of costly work is being done at the present time in the renewing of crossings at the C.P.R. diamond and the Lock Street C.N.R. crossing. The snow-sweeper has also been put in first-class condition in anticipation of winter use.

Patronage of the local lines this past year has increased over 1923 figures, largely on account of the more severe weather conditions.

SAY WET VOTE PUT FOSTER IN

Toronto Suffered a Traditional Shock at Yesterday's Municipal Elections.

TORONTO, Jan. 2. — (Canadian Press).—Toronto is busy trying to explain on New Year's Day, why it fractured tradition of 60 years and declined a second-year term to the Mayor, who was acknowledged by most authorities to have given eminently satisfactory service. Yesterday, when Controller Thomas Foster defeated Mayor W. W. Hiltz for the Mayoralty of 1925 by a plurality of 2,448 in the total vote of 67,791 votes was but the second occasion in Toronto's history as a city that the Mayor was refused a second term.

Three of Toronto's four daily papers supported Hiltz against Foster. One of them ascribes it definitely and directly to "Toronto's wet vote." Editorially, it says: "Yesterday's vote had little to do with municipal affairs."

Toronto's wet vote put Thomas Foster in the Mayor's chair — wet vote and little else.

This paper remarks that the real campaign work was done by the Toronto members of the legislature, and warns Ontario prohibitionists that the lesson taught by the Toronto municipal elections is that "the people of Ontario who have fought liquor in the past cannot afford to relax their efforts if this province is to be kept dry.

Thomas Foster, Mayor-elect, is "dean" of the City Council. He is 73 years of age, and has attained his ambition to be Chief Magistrate of Toronto, after about twenty-five years' service in the city Council. He is a Conservative in politics, as is also the defeated candidate.

In connection with the elections to the Board of Education, it is notable that two members of long standing, Dr. James E. Forfar and J. McClellan, who in last year's Board championed a resolution commending the Ontario Temperance Act were defeated at the polls yesterday.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

VOTES ON CHURCH UNION.

Editor of Examiner.

Dear Sir,—In connection with the voting that is now taking place in different Presbyterian congregations throughout Canada, it should be borne in mind that approximately 75 per cent. of the membership and wealth of the Presbyterian Church is centred in Ontario and Quebec. It is the large congregations scattered throughout these two Provinces which have provided the great bulk of the funds for carrying on mission enterprises in Western Canada, and elsewhere throughout the Dominion, and in the foreign field as well. Therefore, the important votes that will settle the future of the Presbyterian Church in Canada are the votes that will be held in Ontario and Quebec, where the chief opposition to church union has been centred. It is significant in this connection that neither the Ontario or Quebec Legislatures have ratified the church union legislation, and until they have done so not one dollar of property in these two Provinces can be turned over to the new church, no matter how congregations may vote.

The claim has been made that Western Canada was solid for church union. Already nine congregations in Western Canada have voted to remain Presbyterian and many more will do so. Some of these congregations are of considerable size.

It is to be expected that from now on there will be published in the press reports indicating that a large number of congregations are going into church union. In Tuesday night's Examiner, for instance, in two different places appeared despatches relating to the same nine congregations that have voted to enter church union. The total votes reported both for and against church union by these nine congregations was 437, an average per congregation of 48. This is sufficient to show the smallness of these congregations. Many, presumably, are little more than isolated mission charges. There are dozens of congregations in Ontario, in some of the smaller centres as well as in the larger cities, where from 400 to 600 members within the past year have signed cards expressing their opposition to church union. This bears out what has already been said that it is the votes of congregations in the smaller towns and in the cities in Ontario and Quebec which are going to determine the future status of the Presbyterian Church in Canada.

The argument that is being used extensively that the mother Presbyterian Church is entering union is misleading. The mother Presbyterian Church is the Presbyterian Church of Great Britain, the United States and elsewhere. If some members of the Presbyterian Church in Canada decide to enter church union they have the right to do so, but instead of taking the mother church into union they separate themselves from the mother church and become members of the "United Church of Canada." Presbyterians who decide to continue the Presbyterian Church in Canada will retain their identity with their mother church. This fact is so plain that it should only need to be stated to be apparent to all concerned.

Yours sincerely,
PETERBOROUGH BRANCH OF PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH ASSOCIATION.

MODERNISM AND CHURCH UNION.

The question of Modernism and Fundamentalism in connection with Church Union was raised by a letter from Rev. J. Russell Harris of Deer Park Presbyterian Church, Toronto, which appeared in the Evening Examiner on Dec. 18. In this letter Rev. Mr. Harris published a statement by Rev. Prin. Fraser, of a Montreal Theological College, for the purpose of showing that Principal Fraser is a modernist who does not believe in the full inspiration of the Scriptures, the Substitutionary Atonement and other fundamentals of the Christian religion. As Principal Fraser is a leading anti-unionist, Rev. Mr. Harris asks what right anti-unionists have to object to Church Union because of the modernistic teachings of the Methodist church. As this question is being repeatedly asked, the Peterborough Branch of the Presbyterian Church Association desires to make the following statement in regard to it.

The Statement.

People who point out that there are modernists among those opposing Church Union and who claim that anti-unionists, therefore, have no right to object to Church Union on account of modernistic teachings miss the main point at issue. Although this point has been explained on several occasions in the public press, it seems desirable that a more complete statement bearing on the situation shall be made. The following, therefore, is one reason why thousands of people who voted for Chuch Union, because they believed in the principle of Union, are opposed to Church Union today.

1. It is admitted that there are modernists in the Presbyterian Church. While this fact has been generally known to the Presbyterian ministry it has not been known to the great majority of the elders and members of the Presbyterian Church. College professors and ministers of the Presbyterian Church who hold modernistic views are dishonest to their ordination vows and the laws of the Presbyterian Church give the members of the Presbyterian Church power to deal with these "false teachers" and to expel them from the church should such action be found necessary. All these men were required, when they were ordained, to express their unequivocable acceptance of the Westminster Confession of Faith and to bind themselves to teach according thereto. If they hold views not in harmony with the standards of the church they hold them dishonestly and can be dealt with accordingly. The only reason they have not been dealt with before is because the members of the Presbyterian Church at large have not known of the prevalence of these views. In the United States a house-cleaning has started in the American Presbyterian Church where a fundamentalist has been elected Moderator, the chairmanship of the Board of Foreign Missions has been changed, Dr. Fosdick has been forced to resign from a New York pulpit and other changes made. The form of government of the Presbyterian Church gives the people power to act in this way in these matters.

The United Church.

2. What will be the situation if Church Union goes through? Here is where the nigger (not to use a stronger term) has been found in the fence. Once Church Union has been consumated it will be practically impossible to deal with modernism in the new church. The great majority of Methodists are sound in their views on the Scriptures and on the Atonement and are just as much opposed to modernistic teachings as are the Presbyterians. It is hoped, therefore, that when Methodists once see the situation as it exists they, also, will oppose Church Union.

(A) While the Doctrinal Statement proposed for the United Church is, on the whole, excellent, it is not such a positive statement of faith as is the Westminster Confession of Faith. For instance, on page 21 of the Church Union Bill, under the heading "Doctrine," it is stated to be only "in substance agreeable" to the teachings of the Holy Scriptures. The clear implication of these words is that while it may not be entirely agreeable to the Scriptures it at least is approximately so.

(B) Ministers in the new Church will not have to definitely accept the Doctrinal Statement as they do in the Presbyterian Church. Instead they will have to appear before an examining committee which, as will pasodmoo aq Aunt 'ialeq aaa aq be largely of modernists. They will not have to state definitely that they accept the Doctrines of the Church but only that they consider them as being "in essential agreement," and as being "in substance agreeable" to the teachings of the Holy Scriptures.

Significant Admission.

Union speakers, as did Rev. Dr. Geo. Pigeon, while speaking last spring in St Paul's Church, have explained that ministers object to being definitely required ,to accept the Doctrines of the Church as is expected of them in the Presbyterian Church, and that this new form of subscription has purposely been made easier in order that the consciences of ministers joining the church need not be strained as they have been in the past. In the light of what is now known of the views held by a large percentage of the ministry of both the Presbyterian and Methodist Denominations, such a lowering of the bars will make it possible for ministers holding virtually all forms of error to find their way into the new church.

Extent of Modernistic Teachings

Few laymen have any conception of the extent to which modernistic views are held among the professors in the theological colleges and also in the ministry. Proof of the prevalence of these teachings is being brought to light every day. Rev. Mr. Harris' letter in regard to the views of Principal Fraser has simply added to this proof.

In his book "The Preacher and the Modern Mind" Rev. Geo. Jackson, formerly a pastor of Sherbourne St. Methodist Church, Toronto, and a lecturer in Victoria Methodist College, Toronto, says;

Page 13: "In practically all our colleges and among the great majority of our preachers the teaching and belief concerning the Bible are, it is well known, very different from those which still prevail in our Sunday Schools and among the general body of our church members."—(Dr. Jackson should know. If what he says is true what are we to think of the situation his statement reveals?)

A Dangerous Situation.

It if is true, as stated by Dr. Jackson, that the views in regard to the Scriptures held by college professors and ministers are radically different from those held by the members of the churches which they represent,it is contended that the proposal to make it unnecessary in the United Church for ministers at their ordination to state definitely what they believe and will teach in regard to the Scriptures, and to leave their examinaion on these matters in the hands of a committee—possibly of modernists—will be a dangerous concession to make.

Presbyterian Safeguards.

In the Presbyterian Church, when a minister is inducted into a congregation, he is supposed to be examined in regard to his beliefs at the time of his induction. This is not required by the new United Church.

The most dangerous concession of all, however, is where it is proposed that the General Council of the new United Church shall have "full power" to legislate in matters of doctrine without consulting the people. See Church Union Bill, Page 31, Part 5, Paragraph 24 (2) (a). This means that once Church Union is consumated, the higher courts of the Church, in which modernists may predominate, may change the Declaration of Faith along modernistic lines and the people will be powerless to deal with the situation, as they will have given away their power to do so. The reason, therefore, why thousands of Presbyterians are opposing Church Union is not because there are not modernistic teachers among the Presbyterians as there are among the Methodists, but because by remaining Presbyterian they will have power to deal with the situation which is now known to exist. They will not have this power if they enter the United Church. Our forefathers fought and tens of thousands of them died to ensure the purity of our faith. We are now being asked to surrender, without a struggle, the safeguards which they gained for us at such heavy cost.

CURED HIS RUPTURE

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 489L Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

William Thorne.

Right Worshipful Brother Chas. Thorndyke conducted the installation ceremony, and at the conclusion of the Lodge session, a bountiful supper was enjoyed, and brief addresses made by the new officers.

A very enjoyable social evening for the scholars of the Sunday School in connection with St. Thomas Church, and their parents and friends, was arranged by the teachers and officers, and carried successfully through on Tuesday evening.

The event took the place of the annual concert, and was held in the Sunday School Hall, which was appropriately decorated with holly wreaths, evergreens, etc., for the occasion. The Christmas tree, gaily decorated, was the central attraction, especially for the younger folk, its gift-laden branches promising delightful surprises in store for a later stage in the evening's proceedings.

Mr. R. Stone was chairman, and the programme included:

Piano duet by Misses Martha and Marguerite Lang.

Chorus—"The Maple Leaf," by the School.

Recitation by Walter Todd.

Chorus—"Christmas Bells," by the School.

Recitation by Mary Vance.

Recitation by Marjorie Vance.

Recitation by Mary Nattrass.

Recitation by Cameron Vance.

Duet—"I don't want to play in your yard," by Kate Donnelly and Eloise Lamb.

Recitation by Cameron Vance.

Chorus—"Christmas Welcome," by the School.

Recitation by Elizabeth Russell.

Rev. Canon Allen distributed the gifts from the tree, each child receiving a personal remembrance. George Gray was given a special prize for the best record for regular attendance. The rector will give a special award, during 1925, to the young people, over ten years of age, who attend church regularly, and a member of the congregation will give a similar award to the children under ten years who have the best record for regular attendance at church services.

The prizes given to the scholars this year were largely prayer-books, inquiry showing that many did not possess a copy of the Book of Common Prayer. Interest in the church ritual, and services, cannot fail to be stimulated by this wise action on the part of the executive.

Games of various kinds provided amusement at the conclusion of the programme, and refreshments were served before the gathering was dismissed.

BIG VALUE FOR YOUR MONEY.

It is said that the Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal works on the principle that nothing but the best will do for its readers. The soundness of this policy is amply demonstrated in the rapidly growing subscription list of this great weekly. The public have been tempted by trashy weeklies at give-away prices, but when it comes down to value for your money and a genuine Canadian flavor to your reading, the Family Herald and Weekly Star has no competitor. This year we see that the publishers are giving each subscriber whose subscription is received in time a large calendar for 1925 with a beautiful picture entitled "The Sale of Old Dobbin," and a free entry to a contest in which ten thousand dollars will be awarded. The subscription price of the Family Herald is only Two Dollars a year.

FABLES ON HEALTH

FOR SLEEPLESSNESS.

"Listen to this," said the wife of Mr. Mann of Anytown, reading from the women's page of the paper.

"The smell of mint is said to be an effectual remedy for sleeplessness," she said.

"A sponge is soaked in mint perfume and put into a thin bag. This bag may be suspended at the head of the bed or it may be placed under the pillow.

"Another simple remedy for sleeplessness is to wet half of a towel, apply it to the back of the neck, pressing it upward to the base of the brain, and fastening the dry half of the towel over so as to prevent too rapid evaporation.

"The effect is prompt and charming, cooling the brain and inducing refreshing sleep. Cold water should be used."

"I'll try that the next time I'm bothered," said Mr. Mann.

The Probabilities for 1925

THE Year is before us, a new year, which will complete the first quarter of the new century.

The consensus of opinion of the Canadian financial weather prophets is that we are in for a period of prosperity and our country with its vast resources is about to enjoy its long delayed expansion. At present all the weather signs read "fair." We endorse and recommend the opinions of these far-sighted seers and join in wishing our members, their neighbors and friends, and all our fellow citizens an abundant share in the prosperity.

HEART TROUBLE SHORTNESS OF BREATH

Mrs. Geo. E. Bowman, Morrisburg, Ont., writes:—"I am writing you a few lines to let you know of my experience with Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. Two years ago I became very poorly with my heart and nerves and whenever I took the least little bit of exercise my heart would start to jump and flutter. I could not walk up-stairs without having to sit down and rest before I was half-way up, on account of my breath becoming so short.

I commenced taking

and in no time I felt a great improvement, and can now heartily recommend them to all those who are troubled with any affection of the heart."

"JUSTICE WAS NOT DONE," SAYS FRANKS

Grief-Stricken Father of Robert Franks Gives First Interview Since Trial of Leopold and Loeb—Darrow an Athiest, Father Declares.

BY ROY J. GIBBONS

CHICAGO, Dec. 31.—An eye for an eye! A tooth for a tooth!

So ran the Mosaic law of old of his forefathers. So runs the law of Jacob Franks today.

Many weary months of anguish have added to his heartache since Franks, now but a shadow of his former self, and bent under his tragedy, wept beside the bier of his slain son, Robert, and watched him borne away to a premature grave.

Past the age of unreasoning hate, Franks, cheated out of dreams and aspirations in his son by Loeb and Leopold, arch fiends, who cut the youngster off from life "for a thrill"—bespeaks his mind of what "real justice" is.

Seated at his desk, on which in an exact row are three portraits of the unfortunate Bobbie, Franks, in a bitter, quaking voice and with eyes that seemed to burn with an intense fire, repeated over and over: "They should have hanged. They should have hanged."

Never Uses Their Names

That is the way he refers to Loeb and Leopold, now serving life sentences and 99 years' imprisonment each at Joliet penitentiary for striking down the boy—"my little Bobbie"—for whom Franks, the millionaire watchmaker, had planned so much.

He never calls them by name. It is always "they" when he brings the slayers into conversation. His manner is impersonal. The pronoun is impersonal.

But it reveals Franks' loathing for the killers. He will not permit their names to defile his mouth.

"Justice was not done in this case," he says. "They should have hanged. There was no reason in law or human kindness why those two fiends should not have been done away with.

"You ask me what justice is. Justice is what the law requires. I am fully satisfied with the criminal law as it is written. In some few cases there are mitigating circumstances. In this case there was none."

Sweeping on in a surge of pent-up passion, Franks burst the floodgates of his grief and with eyes fastened on the three mute photographs of the little boy upon his desk he launched into a bitter attack upon many concerned in the trial.

Criticizes Caverly.

He is particularly enraged over the conduct of Clarence Darrow, master pleader, who defended Loeb and Leopold, as his son's confessed murderers.

"Darrow is an atheist," hissed Franks. "He undertook this defense for the money there was in it. It is said that he made $1,000,000 for what he did.

"And then Judge Caverly—why did he, a chief justice, sit in the case?

"It is an unusual procedure for a chief justice to sit in a trial like this. He should have assigned the case to some other judge.

"Because he didn't do so, makes me believe that his mind was already made up before he heard the facts. Likewise, Judge Caverly, when he delivered sentence on them, stated that he disregarded the insanity theories of the defense.

"Therefore, according to many lawyers, his only course of action was to deliver the death sentence.

"When Caverly sentenced the boys he said that 90 per cent of the letters he got regarding the case asked for leniency. I believe I got more letters about it than the judge and 99 per cent of the correspondence I received asked for hanging. This would seem to indicate that Judge Caverly picked out the letters that agreed with his viewpoint.

"But that part of it is a story that may never be told."

TOWARD UNITED CHURCHES

A STUDY

M. C. MACKINNON

IN SCOTLAND.

In the Book of Policie of the Kirk greed unto anno 1581 the Church of otland looks forward to a "General ouncil" of Protestants, saying there eing "an universal harmony in the octrine contained in all the confessions f the reformed churches; the work of general council as to matters of faith, ould, in all probability, be sweet and easy: And if in what relateth to the worship, discipline, or government of the church, there should be some misunderstandings, God should even reveal this unto them."

The Westminster Confession of Faith was itself a basis of union intended to unite all the reformed churches of England, Scotland and Ireland. It was drawn up by some ninty-eight godly divines of the English Church and of the Independent or Congregational Churches (including the forefathers of the people later known as 'Methodists'), and five Presbyterian ministers and three elders from Scotland. The commission of the Edinburgh General Assembly, August 19, 1643, to these Presbyterian representatives, as set forth in the preface to our Confession of Faith, gives them full power "to propone, consult, treat and conclude" with the English divines "in all matters which may further the union of this Island in one form of Kirk government, one Confession of Faith, one Catechism, one Directory for the worship of God."

To secure this union of the churches of England, Scotland and Ireland, the General Assembly of the Scottish Presbyterian Church, in its answer, Feb. 13, 1643, to the Assembly of Divines in England, acknowledge that they have some practices in their church which are in themselves indifferent. They express themselves thus:

"Nevertheless in other particluars we are resolved, and do agree to do as ye have desired us in your letter, that is, not to be tenacious of old customs, though lawful in themselves. But to lay them aside for the nearer uniformity with the kirk of England, that rather than fail on our part, we do most willingly part with such practices and customs of our own, and without the violation of any of Christ's ordinances." Thus over two centuries ago our Presbyterian forefathers longed for, worked for, and were willing to sacrifice customs and practices, in themselves lawful, that the Reformed or Protestant churches might be united.

The same Christian spirit is found in the Church of Scotland today. In the Church of Scotland Act, passed by the British Parliament in 1921, Section 7 declares: "The Church of Scotland, believing it to be the will of Christ that His disciples should be one in the Father and in Him . . . recognizes the obligation to seek and promote union with other churches." . . .

The Moderator of the Church of Scotland, the old mother Presbyterian Church, writing from Scotland on Nov. 18, 1924, calls church union a "Divine command to go forward." "It has come to us here in Scotland, and because it is heard with open ears, and responsive hearts, we are on the eve of the consummation of many hopes and prayers in the union of our Scottish churches. It has come to you in Canada, and you, I most earnestly trust, are on the eve of even a wider union than we are." "No one can think the present state of things a happy one. Our divisions are a sore reproach to us. They are a source of weakness, and of wastefulness. And they are utterly unnecessary on any grounds of reasonableness. Instead of presenting a united front in the conflict for truth and righteousness which we are called upon to wage, we are presenting a sadly divided front, and wasting our resources, and frittering away our time. That is indisputable; and it is a strange mentality that would defend it. And just as strange is this mentality that would seek to perpetuate the present state of things, and would not gladly see the end of it, because it is unwilling to sacrifice some old and non-essential things in the interest of the things that are essential and of eternal moment. Surely, in the providence of God, we can conserve all that is best in our non-divided churches for the church that is to be, without lamenting the loss which, in the past, has emphasized and intensified our disunity from our fellow Christians.

"Here, in Scotland, we are watching your movement with intense interest. You are setting an example to the whole Christian world. You are seeking to demonstrate to that world how brethren can dwell in the unity of a common faith, and in undivided loyalty of service to one living and eternal Lord. That is a great and brave enterprise, and in the blessing of God—the God and Father of us all—cannot fail you.

"May all good be with you."

THE UNITED FREE CHURCH OF SCOTLAND ASSEMBLY

met in Edinburgh last summer and without one dissenting voice passed the following resolution:

"The Assembly of the United Free Church of Scotland, at present convened, learn with the profoundest interest and satisfaction of the union now happily effected between the Presbyterian, the Congregational, and the Methodist Churches of Canada. They congratulate the United Church upon the consummation of their cherished dream and purpose towards union, and they trust that such difficulties as remain may speedily be removed. They pray that by means of this union the religious interests of Canada will be greatly furthered, and that the blessing of God may rest richly upon the life and activity of the United Church in the endeavour to build the Kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ in that great and growing community."

The late Dr. Alexander Whyte, probably the most outstanding Presbyterian preacher of the past generation, in the last lecture on the Makers of Scotland described the character and work of Robert Buchanan, Robert Candlish, and Robert Rainy. He traced their efforts for Presbyterian re-union in the generation then closing, and ended by urging those who heard him to look towards and work for a wider union. He added: 'I do not envy any man who seeks to prevent or delay such a movement. Be you on that side; it is Christ's side."

UNITED CHURCH IN INDIA.

As in China, so also in India the native Christians seek union. The Bishop of Madras, in a recent article in The Review of the Churches, writes: 'The Indian wants a church of his own. He wants to unite with his fellow-countryman in worshipping Christ without being fenced in here and warned off there by 'foreign' differences which find no response in his own experience." Already the South India United Church is in existence and working splendidly. It is made up of several previously distinct groups of Christians, associated with American, English, Scotch, Australian and German missions. It embraces Congregational, Reformed and Presbyterian points of view. Patton in "The Business of Missions," says: 'Negotiations are in progress to take in the membership of the Church of England and also the ancient Syrian Church which has maintained an independent existence in the State of Travancore for fifteen centuries."

THE UNITED CHURCH OF CHINA.

At the World Missionary Conference in Edinburgh, 1910, a Chinese Christian arose and said: 'We Chinese are not interested in your western denominations." At the great Shanghai Convention of Chinese Christians, twelve years later, the first resolution passed was the following: 'We Chinese Christians, representing the various leading denominations, express our regret that we are divided by the denominationalism that comes from the west. We recognize fully that denominationalism is based on differences, the historical significance of which, however real and vital to the missionaries, is not shared by us Chinese therefore denominationalism instead of being a source of inspiration, has been and is a source of confusion, bewilderment and inefficiency. We frankly believe that only a United Church can save China. Therefore in the name of the Lord who prayed that all His followers might be one, we appeal to all those who love the same Lord to follow His command and be united into one church indivisible. We believe that we are voicing the sentiments of the whole Chinese Christian body when we claim that we have the desire and the power to effect a speedy realization of corporate unity, and we call upon the missionaries and the representatives of the churches in the west to remove all obstacles, in order that Christ's prayer for unity may be answered in China. We confidently hope that the church of China thus united will be able to serve as an impetus to the speedy healing of the broken body of Christ in the west."

Bishop F. R. Graves of China, speaking of the movement for a United Protestant Church in China, said: "The things at stake are so important that nothing which is not of the very life of the church ought to keep us separate from our brethren." He adds: "The feelings of the converts are overwhelmingly for union with Christians of their own race."

Dr. Murdock MacKensie, veteran Canadian Presbyterian missionary in China tells us of "The United Church of China," which came into existence over a year ago in Shanghai. "It is composed of Presbyterians and Congregationalists and may ultimately include English Baptists."

TOWARD A UNITED CHURCH OF ENGLAND!

The Church of England and Church Union—The Lambeth Conference appeal 1920, says: "The causes of division lie deep in the past, and are by no means simple or wholly blameworthy. Yet none can doubt that self-will, ambition, and lack of charity among Christians have been principal factors in the mingled process, and that these, together with blindness to the sin of disunion, are still mainly responsible for the breaches of Christendom. We acknowledge this condition of broken fellowship to be contrary to God's will, and we desire frankly to confess our share in the guilt of thus crippling the Body of Christ and hindering the activity of His Spirit."

The Bishop of Kootenay says: "The movement to unite the three great churches of Canada known as the Presbyterian, Methodist and Congregationalist, is one of the greatest events in the history of Christianity and must be viewed with intense sympathy by all who desire the fulfilment of our Lord's will and the true welfare of humanity. . . . How can any Christian, therefore, view it otherwise than with feelings of sympathy, respect and deep thankfulness to Almighty God? . . . Nay, further, many of us seeing in this and similar movements the clearest and most unmistakable evidence of the work of the Holy Spirit, are looking for the opening of conversations, conferences and negotiations between the United Church and ourselves, which will still further strengthen and consolidate Canadian Christianity and be an even greater triumph for the Holy Spirit who alone is able to overcome obstacles, remove prejudices and misunderstandings. . . ."

THE UNITED CHURCH OF CANADA.

Synod of the Church of Scotland in Canada, 1871, re Church Union, Rev. Gavin Lang of Montreal: 'He thought there was no necessity for limiting their fraternal relations to other Presbyterian Churches, but that they should maintain fraternal relations with all Protestant churches, and not dismiss the idea that some day, however distant, there might be a union of all the Protestants of this Dominion." (Cheers.) —Reported in Church of Scotland Record.

Rev. Dr. Sclater, recently of Dr. Drummond's old church, Edinburgh, now in Toronto, says re the United Church of Canada, that 'as a Scot and a Presbyterian" he is impelled to enter the United Church. He adds: 'Unless I can find some definite reason of principle, I am bound as a Presbyterian to act in accord with my church courts acting constitutionally. Otherwise I cease to be a Presbyterian." Again he says: 'I go into the United Church of Canada because I believe in so doing, I am acting in accord with the sentiment of Scotland at the present time. I would not alienate myself from the church of my Fathers for anything you could offer me. But I feel that in going into the United Church of Canada, I am acting in accord with the church of my Fathers. In the United Church of Canada, you will be related to the the mother church in Scotland precisely as you are now. Scotland is eager to see such a union consummated."

THE PAN-PRESBYTERIAN COUNCIL,

representing the world-family of Presbyterian Churches with complete and cordial unanimity approve the Basis of Union and welcome the United Church of Canada as a member of the world-family of Presbyterian Churches. The Eastern section, meeting at Glasgow, declared: 'Presbyterian principles are sufficiently preserved in its constitution to justify the Alliance in admitting the church to its membership." The Western section says: 'The Basis of Union satisfies the conditions of membership laid down in the constitution of the Alliance, namely: In regard to the authority of the Scriptures and the doctrine and polity of the Reformed Churches, and we would recommend the admission of the United Church of Canada."

CANADA NEEDS THE UNITED CHURCH.

More than one-half the population of Saskatchewan is non-Anglo-Saxon. In Alberta 45%. In Winnipeg more than one-third and in the rest of Manitoba more than half the people are non-Anglo-Saxon. Even Toronto has 70,000 foreigners. In the west these people are largely untouched by our Canadian churches. In rural Saskatchewan not half even of the Anglo-Saxons have regular church services. In South Saskatchewan there are 300 school districts without Sunday schools or church. In Prince Albert and Battleford Presbyteries in the north there are also 300 school districts without service. In one section of 350 square miles 1,500 families are without church or Sunday school. In the Peace River country one minister has a parish of 5,000 square miles. A minister in British Columbia last year discovered a district, settled for 17 years, which had never had a service, and boys and girls, 13 and 14 years of age, were present who had never before been in a religious service. In Superior Presbytery, Northern Ontario, is reported a field with 1,400 miles of railroad and several divisional points, with many lumber camps and farming communities but with only one missionary. The divided Protestant churches of Canada are not meeting the needs of Canada today. Millions of immigrants will fill up the Canadian West in the coming years. Only a United Church can meet the situation, which is critical for our country.

It is hardly to the credit of the Christian churches of Canada that, while in many villages throughout the country there are four or five competing and struggling churches, supported in part by grants from home mission funds, there are great areas in the West and Northern Ontario where no regular Gospel privileges are provided. The United Church of Canada is coming to better meet the religious needs of Canada.

CORRIGAN

"Bit of a swine, I fancy. I've never had much to do with him myself, but he's always struck me as being—well, not quite white. You'll understand me well enough to know I wouldn't say a thing like that of a fellow countryman of mine, if I didn't think it was justified. He's not been in Borneo very long—a year at the outside, but quite long enough to earn for himself a tolerably unpleasant reputation. He got into hot water over illtreating some coolies. They say he's about as unscrupulous as they make 'em, into the bargain, and, by heaven, he looks it!"

"We're not likely to have much to do with him."

"That's true enough, but a man of his calibre's quite up to jumping our boundary or sticking difficulties in our way, especially if Millett's information's anywhere near correct. It's best to decide on a firm line of action from the start: Don't give Mr. Arundill an inch."

"I won't," rejoined the other grimly.

Since Corrigan's return from Europe he had reorganized and extended the Orang-Puteh estate until it scarcely resembled its former self. Another two thousand-odd acres had been taken in and Fellowes installed in this added territory to knock it into shape. Millett and Fortescue—those two inseparable juniors—were attached to him for duty, while John Everard Boyce superintended—under Corrigan himself—the work on the older and more wieldly ground. A sort of central clubhouse was in course of erection, where the general difficulties of estate work might be amicably discussed over a game of billiards or tennis; for Corrigan was versed in the art of selecting good men—and keeping them. And in the carrying out of his new ambitions, the great man was sparing no expense, for his interests were wide and his far-sightedness proverbial. Already, in his mind's eye, he saw a vast, clean weeded area of waving rubber trees, intersected with good roads and a miniature network of shining metals to convey the produce of his trees to the railhead; he saw white houses in trim gardens, huge storing sheds, improved machinery; and more, still more clean limbed, conscientious assistants, as proud as his present men were that they worked for Corrigan. Corrigan loved the orient—as he knew it, but few had the good fortune to see it through Corrigan's eyes.

Corrigan's dream country was a vast, romantic orient converted from the unhealthy zone it actually is to what it is popularly believed to be—by a careful preservation of the spices and an utter elimination of the smells! To drain the swamp hot-beds of malaria and drive all that is venomous far beyond striking distance of the white community. Utopian, perhaps! but Corrigan within a short while had achieved much, so much in fact that his successes lent him encouragement to carry on.

A broad-minded, broad-fisted social reformer this Corrigan! with a keen sense of man's duty toward his beighbour and an undying enmity toward those whose sole aim in life appeared to be to oppress others. Corrigan, his great shovel-backed topee cocked to one side, coming over the brow of the hill on his stout Bajau pony, was a sight for the gods. And Fellowes—with certain limitations—was a second edition of his chief.

Both men smoked for some time in silence, gazing thoughtfully beyond the open space that had been cleared for Fellowes' house to where the native contractor's men—swarming like flies—wrought havoc upon a time-honoured forest of stunted trees. Every now and again a leafy mass would lurch awkwardly to crash presently to the ground amid an ominous tearing and a babel of hoarse cries. To the first assistant there was always some deeper meaning underlying all this, something more than the fact that people eight thousand miles away who held rubber shares were clamoring for inflated dividends. This was another sign of the times, a further step toward the establishment of a new order of things: These aged, unprofitable junglemonarchs—like elderly, bigoted ministers of a past decade, must give way to the eternal advance of the younger generation. Henceforth there would be no more shackling, clogging weeds, no more overcrowding, nothing but clear cut, regularly planters yielders of the precious latex, and the fact that a few thousand of the legitimate denizens of the forest would be forced to seek new homes didn't seem to matter very much. And that was precisely where he saw eye to eye with Corrigan.

"It'll be mighty quiet over here at night," said the planter suddenly. "Got anything to read?"

Fellowes nodded.

"I shall do most of my office work in the evening—and there's always the gramophone."

Corrigan rose.

"Then there's nothing you want particularly, I take it?"

"Nothing I can think of at the moment. I'll sent a chit across if there is. Aren't you stopping to lunch?"

The other shook his head.

I've an appointment with Long-Yiu about canteen stores at two. Thanks all the same. Cheerio!"

He went off down the steps to where his mount was tethered.

"Don't forget," he shouted back as he swung into the saddle; "hurry the work along so that we can pick our weather for burning—and keep a watchful eye on our neighbour."

He rode off through the trees without looking round, and the first assistant, leaning both arms on the wooden rail, watched him. Capable as he was of acting on his own initiative, Fellowes was always obsessed with a sense of something lacking when Corrigan rode away. It was perhaps the persistent atmosphere of breezy optimism that the planter carried with him that was responsible for this.

"Lord, what a man!"

And then he saw the girl. She was standing, her hands clasped behind her, some few feet from the boundary wire on Arundill's side. She was a little slip of a thing, with a white tunic close fitting at the waist and riding breeches of an amazingly good cut.

They stood looking at each other, the girl on the ground and the man on his high veranda, and Fellowes, who since the days of the perfidious Enid Paterson approached such matters warily, told himself that she was unusually pretty.

"Good morning," he ventured presently.

The voice that floated back to him across the intervening space was pleasantly pitched.

"Good morning. Are you Mr. Corrigan?"

The assistant smiled.

"I'm afraid not. As a matter of fact, I'm Fellowes—Corrigan's second in command. Are you Mrs. Arundill?"

"Good heavens, no! There isn't one, is there? My name's Vereker—Pamela Vereker. I say, I like your house."

If Miss Vereker had intended to ingratiate herself with the first assistant of the Orang-Puteh Kabun she could scarcely have made a better beginning! Fellowes picked up his hat and went down.

A closer inspection more than corroborated his first impression. For a white girl in torrid zones the girl on the far side of the wire had a particularly fresh complexion; there were some dark curls, too, that strayed in a most fascinating manner from under the brim of her helmet. Fellowes liked brown curls.

"Did you want to see Mr. Corrigan particularly?"

DIED NATURAL DEATH.

Case of William Lemon Was Settled Yesterday.

TORONTO, Jan. 3. — (Canadian Press).—Rumors of foul play in connection with the death of William Thomas Lemon, of Kingston, who died suddenly in Toronto on Nov. 3rd last, were set at rest yesterday when it was learned that an analysis of the internal organs showed no traces of poisoning. Lemon died in November, and was buried in Cataraqui Cemetery at Kingston. About three weeks later an order was received from the Attorney-General's Department to have the body exhumed for examination. Mrs. Laura Lemon, widow of the deceased, was, by Judge Denton, yesterday found guilty of having obtained an automobile by false pretenses from the Armstrong Motors, Limited, but sentence was postponed for one week in order to allow time for restitution to be made.

The Morning After—

"What's the matter with Bill this morning—he's so stiff he almost squeaks!" enquired the sales manager.

"O, they gave a Kids' Party at his house last night and Bill entertained them so strenuously that this morning he can hardly move" laughed the bookkeeper, as he carefully sharpened his pencil to a needle point.

"Well, he evidently doesn't know about Absorbine Jr. That's what I always use after unaccustomed exercise, and it saves me all that unpleasant and even painful stiffness the next day."

Absorbine Jr. is just the thing—a few drops rubbed briskly into over tired and stiff muscles limbers them up, seems to inject new life into them and wonderfully refreshes them. $1.25 at your druggist's.

RATS DRIVEN OUT.

Rising Tide of Rain Water Hard on Rats in LONDON, Jan. 3. — (United Press).—Hordes of frightened rats, flooded from their underground nests by a rising tide of rain water, have invaded the streets in English towns, frightening horses and terrifying women. Small boys have organized rat hunts, in which they pursue the rodents with sticks and stones. The ordinary haven holes is closed to the long-tailed visitors, and they fall easy prey to the juvenile hunters.

UPHELD A CITIZEN.

Times When a Citizen Should Tell a Policeman to Go to Hell, Declares Judge.

DETROIT, Jan. 3. — (United Press).—It's all right for a private citizen to tell a policeman to "go to hell" or anywhere else the citizen thinks the policeman should go. Judge Edward J. Jeffries delivered this opinion here in dismissing charges against Nicholas Rother. When a policeman talked "hard" to him, Rother tore up a traffic violation card and returned the language with interest. "There are occasions when a citizen should tell a policeman to go to hell," Judge Jeffries said.

LATEST-FARM-NEWS — Interesting Items For Everybody — FARM-PROBLEMS

DO NOT GUESS AT FARM COSTS SAYS MANAGER OF TEN FARMS WHO KEEPS COMPLETE ACCOUNTS

Only Way to Make Profit in Farming is to Study Records.

Sanitation, Feeding Methods, and Self Education Enter Into Success.

BY H. A. CONK.

The Borden Farm Products Company does not operate its ten certified milk farms near New York City for fun. If we could buy certified milk cheaper than we can make it, we would buy it. Our business has to pay, for our stockholders expect dividends.

Our farms have been showing a profit year after year—nothing big, but a real, cash profit. I think there may be a few principles, used by us as by many efficient individual dairymen, that will help account for the fact that we have not lost money on these ten farms.

Our farms are operated as a business enterprise entirely separate and distinct from our milk-distributing business. As distributors we buy certified milk from our own farms at the same price we pay to individual farmers who produce certified milk. Each farm business must stand on its own feet. If a farm should fail to make a profit we who work for the company have to know why, or perhaps someone else will draw our salaries the next year.

The only advantage we have over other farmers is that we do not have to wait for profits out of any farm to improve and equip that farm properly. We have the money to get the equipment necessary to start out right. But that money has to pay dividends. So the only actual difference is that the farm gets into "high gear" a little quicker than that of the farmer starting out without enough capital.

We have the disadvantage of having to depend entirely upon employed help. The farm managers, however, are paid partly salary and partly percentage of profits, so they are about as careful of the business as if they owned it.

The main reason our farms make an annual profit is that we keep accounts, learn our lessons from them, and apply what we learn to the future conduct of our business.

The first half of the year of 1920 our tractor maintenance on one farm cost $147.92; the last half $793.96; or $941.88 for the year. By strict investigation we found it did not pay to use the tractor to run the ensilage cutter and blower. The following year we hired a gasoline engine for this purpose, and our tractor expense was reduced to $585 for the year. A further investigation induced us to change our style of tractor, with the result that in the year ending June 30, 1923, our tractor maintenance was only $150.13.

In 1920 we fed 1.31 pounds of grain to produce each quart of milk. In 1923 it required 1.25 pounds of grain per quart of milk. The saving in grain fed per quart produced was 5 per cent.

Here you have two concrete instances of how accounts, carefully and accurately kept, have paid us on one farm.

We reduced the grain bill 5 per cent.

We reduced our tractor maintenance 81 per cent.

By guessing and estimating we could not have done this. To achieve similar results on any farm it is not necessary to have a staff of bookkeepers.

We know the cost of every operation on each of our farms. We have all these figures from the time each farm was purchased. We compare the records of one farm with another. This two or more farmers in a neighborhood can do to mutual advantage. We compare the figures on each farm with the records of previous years. This any farmer can do after he has kept accounts long enough. The longer we keep accounts the more we learn from them each year. If you have used farm records yourself you know how true this is.

Each of our certified milk farms has about 100 cows. In each herd are approximately 50 Holsteins and 50 Guernseys. Our market calls for four-per-cent milk. The Guernseys bring up the percentage of fat, while the Holsteins yield a somewhat larger volume.

We know not only what each cow costs, but also how many pounds of milk she produces daily and annually, what it tests, what it costs to feed her, and what the milk costs per quart—what is costs to milk and care for her.

We have kept accounts long enough to know that unless a cow will average a case of milk a day (12 quarts) we can't afford to keep her. Low-producing and low-testing cows who are constantly draining the farm of its profits. The loss is so small that it is not perceptible in the milk pail, but it can be proved by accurate weighing and testing.

Our bookkeeping has taught us that we cannot afford, under our conditions, to engage in both breeding and milk production, so we buy all our cows. We buy solely on a basis of milk production. The finest possible array of royal ancestors does not influence our judgment in buying a cow, because we are selling milk, not offspring, and rear no calves. Of course, it goes without saying that a list of high-record ancestors is what makes a dairy cow's blood truly royal. And it follows that there are many purebreds in our herds, and practically every one of the others is a high-grade.

Sanitation is the second important reason why we made profits during each of the years of depression. I will give one instance:

Every dairyman knows what it means to have to discard some of its best cows. We have to pay well for our cows, and we cannot afford to take a chance in throwing out high-priced animals. We have found that by a simple device of individual managers we have provided an additional safeguard to the health of the cows. Instead of a long manger extending continuously in front of a row of cows, we have a separate manger for each. The feed the cow leaves after mouthing it over is no longer swept along to the other cows.

The use of individual water buckets is another additional safeguard. Of course, rigid sanitation is enforced in every particular that relates to the cows and their milk, but we know definitely that these additional precautions have saved us several thousand dollars which would have otherwise been lost. Every cow is placed on a probationary period before she is admitted to the milking barn.

Our feeding practices I would rank as the third reason we have suffered no financial losses. Our accounting, plus the observation of our herdsmen, has enabled us to feed economically. We do not try to keep down the feed cost per cow, but we do try to get the maximum amount of milk for the feed used. We feed heavily, and push the cows along.

The fourth reason I can perhaps best define as the education of the men who are in direct charge of the cows. Whatever we learn from our other farms, or from other people's farms we pass on to our men. Each farm superintendent is a well-informed farmer, who knows thoroughly what to do and why he does it.

I know personally several hundred farmers, and have been on many of their farms. I have observed that invariably the farmer who makes the most money and enjoys his farming business most is the man who knows his business completely. He is the fellow who studies his own farm, compares it with other good farms, reads to get authoritative information that he can use, and thinks about what he learns. Some of us learn a lot of things we never think about, or at least never think about really using them in our own business.

These four points—accounts, sanitation, feeding methods, and education of our men—explain as completely as I know how to explain the fact that our company has not lost money on its farms any year, not even during the depression.

The time a farmer spends keeping books and studying them is some of the best time he spends. I don't presume to advise anybody else how to run his affairs, but I do not think that if a man's farm work doesn't leave him time to keep accounts it will pay him to plan to have less work so he can keep records. Intelligent use of his account will enable him to eliminate waste labor, and I honestly believe that any farmer who does this will make more money.

MAKE TEN DRESSES FROM ONE PATTERN

Repeat Pattern of Good Foundation, Changing Outline a Little.

How many times do you use a pattern? Have you learned the energy-saving trick of repeating a pattern of good foundation lines, using it for cotton or woollen or silk, changing the neckline, shifting the belt a little, adding trimming to taste. Women write and say that they are cutting down the fitting and making time this way. Using a pattern the second, third, or fourth time, they are sure of the fit before they cut the goods, and they know by heart just how the pieces go together.

Of course, ten or twelve years ago when every dress was a law unto itself so far as the placing of seams, fullness and plaits were concerned, this repeating stunt just could not have been worked. Now that the basic lines of dresses are pretty much alike, you can snip off the sleeve and round out the neck of your plain little street-dress pattern and cut your calico house dresses by it. You can use the same pattern, abbreviate the sleeves a little more, square the neck, and cut a crepe satin evening frock or revamp it in a dozen other ways if you are handy with your scissors.

FEWER ASSIGNMENTS.

Ottawa, Jan. 3.—(Canadian Press. —Notice of 26 assignments under the Bankruptcy Act appears in the current issue of The Canada Gazette.

LAND ON THE NORTH SHORE OF LAKE ONTARIO IS VALUED AT ONLY TEN SHILLINGS AN ACRE WHEN FIRST MISSIONARIES CROSS THE RIVER

First Post Office Was Opened at Colborne in 1815, With Mail Carried on Mule Back or Sleighs—None When Roads Were Bad.

STORIES OF EARLY LAKE SHORE FARMERS.

Leonard Soper Lost a Team of Horses and Did Not Hear of Them For Fifteen Months—Not So Many Officials as To-day.

COBOURG, Jan. 3.—"Nine Partners" in New York State has now for nearly a century and a half been a well-known place, and from this spot there came to Upper Canada and to this district one of its earliest ministers and missionaries. From this place also a number of families came before the year 1800 to settle on the north shore of Lake Ontario between Kingston and Oshawa, and indeed some of them very much earlier than 1800. In 1785 Reuben Crandell, eighteen years of age, came to Canada as a licensed Baptist preacher from the Nine Partners. He made the journey on foot, crossing the St. Lawrence River near Kingston. He then followed the north shore of Lake Ontario west to Prince Edward County. There he found settlers and held meetings in their homes, preaching and holding revival services. Later he came on west until he reached the present site of the village of Colborne in Northumberland County. There were then a few families settled on the broken front in that locality, and so he held regular services among them for a few years, travelling to Kingston and back every two weeks and holding meetings in settlers' log homes on the way.

In 1798 the Haldimand Baptist Church was organized, and service was held in a small building that by 1800 would not accommodate all who desired to worship there. This is believed to be the third oldest church in Ontario.

An 1824 Church.

A new church building was erected at this place in 1824. It had galleries on both sides and across one end, while a huge high pulpit large enough to accommodate some six or eight people occupied the other end of the building, which was large enough to hold all of the people living in two townships. This will be readily understood when it is known that Northumberland County in 1824, which then comprised also the Townships of Asphodel, Otonabee, Smith, Douro and Dummer, only had 5,057 inhabitants.

In passing it may be noticed that Northumberland County and this applies to many other Ontario counties as well, received a big influx of population from 1830 to 1836. In 1830 the population was 8,434 and in 1836 it had practically doubled, being then 18,760.

Ten Shillings an Acre.

Land along the front of Lake Ontario, which part of the province was first settled, emigration, then working northward, was valued in 1817, the late Walter Riddell, historian of Hamilton Township, records at from ten shillings to fifteen shillings an acre.

The Carrying Place.

In the early days of settlement, the settlers coming east from Kingston, Prince Edward County and other points, were quite frequently brought in boats to a point known as "The Carrying Place," where Asa Weller kept a tavern. There they found lodging, and frequently his stout yoke of oxen attached to a wagon or sled, was the means by which they reached their destination further west. This spot to this day retains the name of "The Carrying Place."

The First Post Office.

The first post office between Belleville and Kingston and the lakefront villages to the west was opened at Colborne in 1815, and one was opened at Cobourg soon afterwards, and also at towns further west. The mail was brought in once a week or once in two weeks as might be convenient, on the backs of mules or by sleighs in the winter time, when the roads permitted. As long as the British Government managed rou postal system they used to advertiser letters that were uncalled for once in three months or once in six months, as the case might be.

First Court of King's Bench.

The first Court of King's Bench that ever assembled in the Counties of Northumberland and Durham was held in a barn on the premises of Mr. Soper in Hope Township, on which occasion the judge, Major McGregor Rogers, lawyers and other officials chose sides and played a game of ball to determine who should pay the expenses of a dinner The constable at this court was Mr. Ephriam Gifford.

Mr. Leonard Soper, whose homeis mentioned, moved from Prince Edward County to the Township of Hope in 1795. There was no grist mill at that time nearer than Kingston or Napanee, and when flour was required the "grist" was taken to one of these places by boat.

Lost Span of Horses.

Mr. Soper resided in Hope for ten years when he moved to Darlington. It was during his residence in the former township that his team of horses strayed away. It was a year and three months before he heard anything concerning them. Then some Indians told him where they were. He went to the place and found the horse and a fine colt that had been foaled, but the mare was never found.

Scarcity of Officials.

Up to the year 1825 people who had settled in the counties east of Toronto were not as fortunate in having a plentitude of officials to serve them if required as they are at the present day. The nearest revenue or customs officer was the Hon. Wm. Allen of York (Toronto). If a man wished to get married he had to make a trip to Toronto and interview Andrew Mercer in order to get a license. If he wished to register a deed he took a fifty- or seventy-mile jaunt to Toronto and interviewed Stephen Jarvis.

Early Assessments.

In these early days and in the first two decades of the 19th century, some of the assessments recorded are certainly peculiar. A house of round logs was assessed for fifteen pounds. If built of square timbers, or hewed on two sides, one storey, and not more than two fireplaces, twenty pounds. Built of squared timbers and two stories, thirty pounds. Built of brick or stone, one storey, forty pounds, if only having two fireplaces. A closed carriage for pleasure with two wheels was assessed for one hundred pounds, this apparently being considered the height of luxury. An open carriage for pleasure was assessed for twenty-five pounds.

FIX POULTRY HOUSE FOR COLD WEATHER

Warm Houses Mean Security for the Flock—Easily Made.

MADISON, Wis. Jan. 3.—Well-kept, warm houses mean security for the poultry and better returns for the farmer.

How to accomplish this at little expense is explained by J. B. Hayes extension poultryman of the University of Wisconsin.

"A straw pack," he says "is a means of retaining warmth and eliminating excess moisture in the poultry house.

"It consists of a layer of straw a foot thick directly underneath the roof in shed type houses and across the ceiling in houses with deep roofs. With the shed type, a wire netting is nailed directly underneath the rafters and the straw tucked between.

"With the high ceiling type houses, a temporary covering of slatted boards should be laid across at a height of seven feet above the floor, and the straw pack scattered over this temporary ceiling.

"A thorough cleaning of the house should have been given with any good disinfectant. Then when the walls and ceiling have dried out, give the house a good application of whitewash.

"Poultry houses that have been treated in this way should remain free from pests throughout the winter.

"A great number of windows are necessary to let in the sunlight. Sunshine is essential for the poultry, especially during the winter when they must be kept inside."

Help For Bee Keepers In Treating Diseases

Comparatively Few Ailments Attack Bees—Pamphlet Tells Cures.

There are comparatively few bee diseases and these few may be divided into two classes, namely, those that attack the adult bees and those that attack the brood. Of the former there is but little known. The Isle of Wight disease, the cause of which has been recently found to be a mite locating in the spiracles or breathing tubes of the bee, is so far unknown on this continent. Paralysis, another disease of adult bees, is of little importance in this part of the country. Bees affected by this ailment, the cause of which is unknown, tremble and have a dark greasy appearance.

Diseases of the brood, however, are of much more concern to the beekeeper. The most important of these are: American Foulbrood, caused by an organism called Bacillus larvae, which will eventually destroy a colony unless man intervenes and treats it; European Foulbrood, caused by Bacillus pluton, which may be overcome by a strong colony; and Saobroad, caused by an unknown, exceedingly minute organism.

The first two diseases every year cause very heavy losses throughout the country, and it should be each beekeeper's business to become familiar with the symptoms and the prescribed treatment for such. If he has no literature on the subject he may secure a copy of "Bees Diseases" from the Bee Division at the Central Experimental Farm Ottawa. Great care is necessary in diagnosing, as the application of the wrong treatment will but spread the disease Should the beekeeper have doubts, he should forward a sample of diseased brood to the Bee Division for analysis, and thus prevent making a costly error.

Bee diseases are a menace to bees only. The organisms which cause these diseases have no effect on human beings; therefore the consumer of honey need have no fear whatever when he hears of their existence.

POULTRY SHOW DEMONSTRATION

Egg Candling Will Be Shown Here by Government. OPENS TUESDAY

One of the features at the Peterboro Poultry Exhibition to be held in the Armouries on January 6, 7, 8, 1925 will be an egg exhibit and an egg candling demonstration put on by the Poultry Division of the Dominion Live Stock Branch and in charge of an egg inspector. This exhibit is being included at this exhibition primarily that any persons living in the district who have any question to ask regarding the Standards of Eggs and the regulations affecting domestic trading may have them explained. Individual producers, merchants, or others are invited also to bring in samples of eggs for examination.

The egg and poultry industry is becoming a big item in the national trade. Heretofore there has been a tremendous loss through deterioration in quality in eggs as marketed. This has not only resulted in lower prices to the producer but the inferior quality too often received by the consumer has had a most detrimental effect on consumption. A good egg is its own best advertisement and the whole thought underlying the egg regulations and the standardization of eggs in Canada is to devise a method where eggs of uniform quality will be assembled together into their respective grades and offered to the consuming public as such, and at the same time to carry back to the producer that differential in price between grades which the consumer has amply demonstrated his willingness to pay.

DIDN'T SEE HIM STEAL

Josh was brought before a country squire for stealing a hog, and three witnesses swore that they saw him steal it. A wag having volunteered as counsel for Josh, and knowing the scope of the squire's brain, arose and addressed him as follows: "May it please your honor, I can establish this man's honesty beyond the shadow of a doubt; for I have twelve witnesses ready to swear that they did not see him steal it." The squire rested his head for a few moments upon his hand, as if in deep thought, and then with great dignity arose, and brushing back his hair, said: "If there are twelve who did not see him steal it, and only three that did, I discharge the prisoner. Clear the room!"

"My Ideal Christmas By Edith Menulley

In speaking of an ideal Christmas my first thought is of one spent at home with all our family present. This year two of my brothers and one sister were absent. Then, of course, I would like enough money to get the things they would like. Also I would like us all to act as small children again.

To have a Christmas tree and for us all to creep downstairs before daylight to see what Santa had brought us. Then scurry back to bed and have loads of fun till daylight.

The day of my ideal Christmas would be bright and frosty with the creek frozen over and a hard crust on the snow. We would all go to church in a bob-sleigh and the text would be, "Gold, frankincense and myrrh."

Dinner would be served at two oclock with my uncle's family present, after which we would have an old-fashioned square dance.

We would have a light tea about seven and then we would light the candles on the Christmas tree. After that we would all, both families, go tobogganning on the hill or skating on the pond.

After our return to the house about eleven o'clock, pop-corn, apples and stories would be our programme. Then bed and happy dreams, for I'm sure they would be happy after my Christmas.

CANADIAN FARMERS BETTER THAN U. S.

More Owners Here, Bigger Tracts of Land, and Higher Production.

Hon. T. A. Low, Minister of Trade and Commerce, is making the point that farmers are better off in Canada than their brothers in the United States:

Canada enjoys an advantage in the number of owners on her farms, he says. No less than 38 per cent. of the United States farms are occupied by tenants, as against only 8 per cent. in Canada. Ownership gives the occupant a more permanent interest in the land and community than any form of lease, as well as greater interest in the welfare of the soil, and a broader view of his agriculture than immediate profit, quick returns, exhaustion of the farm and transfer to another holding. At present there are 711,090 farms in Canada, as compared with 6,448,343 in the United States. The average farm in the American Republic is 148 acres, while 198 acres represents the average in this country; but the value, however, is in reverse proportion, the Canadian holding being valued at $9,283, and the United States one at $12,084.

The net agricultural production per farm in Canada, with 1920 figures as a basis, averaged $2,136, compared with an average of $1,703 in the United States. On the basis of all farms, the average expenditure for labor was $165 in this country and $210 on the other side of the boundary.

SHOOTING THE SHERIFF IS AIM OF MUSHROOM GROWN FARM UNION WHERE ORGANIZERS GET RAKE-OFF

Founded as a Debt-Postponing or Debt-Repudiating Association.

Out of $5 Initiation Fee the Canvasser Gets $3 For His Work.

A BIDDERS' STRIKE.

SASKATOON, Jan. 3.—Imported from the United States, but generally with Old Country agitators at the head, and settlers of foreign birth or ancestry forming a large percentage of the membership, various movements of a mildly revolutionary character spring up from time to time on the prairies and die away to be succeeded by a fresh growth of the same character with a fresh name. A few years ago it was the Non-Partisan League, imported with machinery complete, which was tried out and found wanting, and went out of business at the last provincial election. To-day it is the Farmers' Union which started about four years ago, led an obscure and languishing existence for some time until it was reformed on the lines of the Farmers' Union in the United States in the spring of 1923, and is now increasing rapidly in membership and strength with the avowed purpose of protecting the farmers from their creditors and securing the assistance of labor in carrying out their programme.

"Shooting the sheriffs," was the heading of an article which recently appeared on the page set apart for the exclusive use of this organization in a paper financed by the Grain Growers' Association. Founded as a debt-postponing or debt-repudiating organization, the Farmers' Union has continued to demand a moratorium in season and out of season. At the conference between debotrs and creditors which was called by the Saskatchewan government last fall, the Farmers' Union delegates stood alone in calling for a moratorium, and while they have continued clamoring for a moratorium as a cure-all, some of the locals have taken the law into their own hands and are attempting to organize for the purpose of resisting the sheriff in the administration of the law.

A Bidders' Strike.

In the Rocanville district the same tactics which were tried out last year in a couple of cases were successful in postponing a sheriff's sale, and gave the following account of the affair to the local newspaper:

Farmers' Union by Preventing Sheriff's Sales Saves Brother From Being Put on Road.

Chas. Bond, a well known and highly respected farmer located near New Finland, owed the Home Bank $1,000 for which the liquidators held a chattel mortage on his stock and implements. It is said Mr. Bond offered to call his own sale, get all he could out of the chattels and give an order to the liquidators of the proceeds of the sale. Apparently, judging from the conduct of the officers of the defunct bank, the liquidators have little faith in human nature and demanded their pound of flesh, and to get same called a sheriff's sale for Friday of last week. The Farmers' Union, not through Mr. Bond, but through other channels, got wind of this and got busy at once. From Mr. Bond and his neighbors, full particulars were secured, and based on these a strongly worded resolution was forwarded to the liquidators of the looted bank requesting a stay of proceedings. In the meantime, of course, an attempt had to be made to prevent the carrying out of the sheriff's sale. To this end representatives from ten locals of the Farmers' Union including delegates from all local lodges, went into the district where their hard pressed brother was located and by a number of open meetings put the matter up to the farmers in the district. The result was, that though over one hundred and twenty-five people were at the sale, not a single bid was registered, and the sale consequently had to be called off. The Farmers' Union are now anxiously waiting what further steps will be taken to go on with the sale, but we are determined to fight it to the last ditch.

From Rocanville Record, December 11, 1924.

The Sturgis local has now come into the field with a questionnaire which asks the following questions among others:

Are you in favor of declaring a moratorium if refused one by the government? Do you believe that we are justified in joining together to protect our homes from the sheriff by organized resistance? If you cannot take active part in organized resistance, will you remain neutral? Are you in favor of a complete moratorium until such time as we can get adjustment of debts? Will you guarantee to pay your dues to the union within 30 days if a moratorium is declared by the union?

This last naive question "gives the whole show away," for it shows that even a revolutionary farmers' organization could not exist and function under the complete moratorium it suggests.

Rake-off to Organizers.

The situation is not arousing any alarm in Saskatchewan or the sister prairie provinces. The Farmers' Union is actively canvassing for membership, $3 out of the $5 initiation fee going to the organizer and having a wonderfully stimulating effect on the activities of these single-hearted "brothers" as compared with the dogged self-sacrificing efforts of the Grain Growers and U.F.A. organizers who get nothing but their expenses for their work. It is recognized that poor crops over wide areas and hard times encourage these movements, which thrive on discontent and wilt and fade away when times are better.

A good crop in 1925 at a fair price and the Farmers' Union will either moderate its policy and abandon its fantastic efforts to upset the economic basis of society or will find its membership shrink to the extremists and incompetents. The activity of the organization, however, is an indication that while conditions are improving very slowly in the West, many farmers are very hard up and deserving of sympathy and consideration until they begin to defy the institutions which are set up as much for their own protection as any other class of society.

SOUTHERN FARMER TURNS TO POULTRY

Boll-Weevil Chases Him Out of Cotton Field in Carolina.

RALEIGH, N.C., Jan. 3. — The southern cotton farmer, discouraged by the boll-weevil, has turned to raising poultry.

That is one of the innovations noted where formerly cotton was of profit. Now, besides poultry, there's more dairying, and rotation of crops is gaining greater headway.

Poultry raising made its debut in the south through the encouragement of the railroads. Now a regular system for marketing poultry along the Atlantic coast has been formulated. It is called the system of co-operative car-lot sale.

The railroad's development agent canvasses a district on the amount of poultry available for sale. He supplies a car at a central point to which the farmers bring their poultry.

The farmer is paid on the basis of the highest bid offered by prospective buyers who also have been canvassed by the railroad's agents.

When the car gets its supply from one district it is moved on to another, until it is loaded. Then it goes to the buyer. The farmers are paid as they deliver their poultry.

'Twas a freight train and a cow.

A certain Irishman was very proud of a huge bulldog he possessed, which was his constant companion. One day a friend met him without the dog and looking very disconsolate. "Well," he asked, "and how is that dog of yours doing"

"Oh, be jabers, he's dead! The illigant baste wint and swallowed a tape-measure!"

"Oh, I see! He died by inches, then?"

"No, shure he didn't! He went round to the back of the house an' died by the yard!"

HAMILTON TEAM FULL OF FIGHT FOR GAME HERE

Scullers Hope to Take Fall Out of S. P. A. Champions.

BIG CROWD SURE

Fans Excited Over First Home Fixture in the Senior Race.

Tuesday night's Senior O.H.A. game at Brock St. Rink between Hamilton Rowing Club and the Petes will not only be the first scheduled game of the season but it will be the only home fixture for several weeks as the blue and white team have to tackle Parkdale and Varsity in Toronto before returning to Brock St. Rink for their second game at home.

The Hamilton team showed its class in the game against Parkdale this week and the Petes will have to be at the top of their form here Tuesday to keep their winning streak intact. The Hams have Karl Quinn, last year's Queen's goaler in the nets, a good defence in Garrie, formerly of Sarnia, and Galbraith, and a flash at centre in Brown, a Kingston product whose work against Parkdale was sensational The Scullers are full of fight and are anxious to take a fall out of the S.P.A. champions.

The Petes did not come through Thursday's game without casualties, Bailey having his bad leg hurt again, McLeod sustaining a painful cut on the knee and Parker injuring his shoulder, but they hope to be at full strength by Tuesday night..

The biggest crowd in years is expected for this clash.

The reserved seat plan will open to subscribers on Monday at Bond's. These must be taken up on Monday, as the tickets not called for will be sold to the public on Tuesday morning.

HURT PLAYING HOCKEY

KINGSTON, Ont., Jan. 2.— Andre Chapman of Gananoque is in the Hotel Dieu suffering from a fractured skull and bruises about the face which he received while practising hockey at Gananoque last night. He was struck in the face by the puck and fell backward, striking his head on the ice, which resulted in a fracture near the right ear.

NEW BALL CLUB OF HOME BREWS

Gordon Matthews President and "Shiner" Johnston is Appointed Manager.

CENTRAL LEAGUE.

A new baseball organization, with the object of giving Peterboro homebrew baseball next summer, and being practically an amalgamation of the players of last year's Central League and C.G.E. Midland League Clubs, has been launched, and will make application for a berth in the Central Ontario League.

The officers of the new club which will be known as the Peterboro Athletic and Baseball Club, are as follows:

Hon. Presidents: Mayor J. J. Turner, and George C. MacDonald.
President: Gordon Matthews.
Vice-President: H. P. McFadden.
Secretary: Doug. McDonald.
Treasurer: Sheriff F. J. A. Hall.
Executive: Robert Abbott, W. M. Glover, O. DeGraw, J. E. Sullivan and L. H. Bond.

"Shiner" Johnston has been appointed manager of the new organization and players who have consented to throw in their lot with the club are Ray Rose, Bob Ross, Jack McMcCarney, "Scotty" McPherson, and Herb Wolfe of the C.G.E. team; Frank Whitehouse, pitcher of the Lakeviews, Jr. O.B.A.A. champions, and Al. Heckman, Max Swanston, Hap. Harrison, Tommy Holyman, "Red" Legon, Jimmy Hall and other members of last year's Peterboro Central League Club.

With Heckman and Whitehouse on the mound and Swanston and Ross as catchers, the battery positions will give "Shiner" Johnston few worries; while the addition of the best of the C.G.E. squad to last year's Petes, provides plenty of strength for outfield and infield positions. It will be a real "home brew" aggregation and the development should be popular with the fans.

PRAISE FOR PETES.

Warms Hearts of Boys Far From Home.

The advertising Peterboro has secured as a result of the showing of the Peterboro Hockey Club in the S.P.A. series is still going on.

Here is a wire received by Secretary Convery from an old Peterboro boy, Alex. V. Fortye of Seattle.

"Just read news in paper about fine showing boys made over Soo. Sure great stuff. Am mighty proud of old home town. Please extend congratulations with best wishes for their continued success in senior. The championship looks good."

From Mike Sheehy in Fort William came a telegram received by the club while in Toronto, New Year's Day, wishing the Petes the best of luck for the season.

Mel. Jamieson of St. Thomas, also wired his congratulations.

DEMPSEY'S RABBIT PUNCH BEAT GIBBONS IN BOUT

THE ST. PAUL IRISHMAN COULDN'T WEAR A HAT FOR TWO WEEKS AFTER BATTLE

BY JOE WILLIAMS

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—As you've noticed, Tommy Gibbons is back in the headlines, and the business of bringing him and Jack Dempsey, the champion, together in a return bout next summer is merrily on.

Dempsey wasn't able to knock out Gibbons in 15 rounds at Shelby summer before last. Dempsey didn't even score a knockdown. The fight went the limit, though the lighter man was decisively outpointed.

There is no reason to believe a return bout would end differently. Gibbons is the cleverest big man in the ring and in a fight limited to 12 or 15 rounds he ought to be able to keep Dempsey off again. On the other hand, Dempsey's greater strength ought to win for him on points.

Up in Michigan last summer I asked Gibbons a rather personal question, to wit: 'Did you go in there against Dempsey merely to stay the limit, or did you go in to win?"

"I Went in to Win"

The question was prompted largely by a widespread impression that Gibbons' efforts during the fight were restricted solely to vicious clinches and rapid, hysterical backpedaling.

"I went in there to win if I could" answered Gibbons, "and while I may have surprised you birds by going the limit, I actually disappointed myself by not winning."

We are willing to take this statement as the gospel. Gibbons is not addicted to applesauce. What amounted to a moral victory in the eyes of the fight world was a crushing defeat to him. A man who agrees to fight for nothing in these days of $500,000 purses must believe in himself.

Led for Eight Rounds.

That Gibobns was doing some fighting is proved by the fact that he led on points up to the eight round. This, according to Jimmy Dougherty, Dempsey's hand-picked referees. From the eight on the champion's superior power began to tell and the tide changed.

Gibbons thinks he can beat Dempsey if the rabbit punch is barred. The rabbit punch is illegal and should be barred. The rabbit punch is a blow back of the head delivered while the fighters are in a clinch. An efficient, impartial referee will see that the punch is not used more than once.

"Dempsey hurt me with the rabbit punch," Gibbons confessed to the writer. "He hurts me more with it than any other blow he landed. I couldn't sleep the night following the fight.. My head ached fearfully and for two weeks that followed I WAS UNABLE TO WEAR MY HAT."

Gibbons said he was in danger only once during the fight. "In the second round I saw Dempsey start a right hander for my jaw. It was a knockout punch. I saw it in time to shift, step back, or clinch. But I seemed to freeze in my tracks and made no move to escape.

Intuition Saved Him.

"I stood motionless like a bird hypnotized by a serpents' gaze, and watched the leathered fist come closer. My boxing intuition must have saved me. A scant second before the blow landed I dropped my head forward, and instead of reaching my chin the glove cut a sizzling scorching path across my forehead."

Gibbons got an unforgetable insight into the tremendous hitting power of Dempsey in that brief instant.

The speed of the punch and the friction of the glove as it raced across the skin left an ugly semicircular mark as if a red-hot iron had been placed to a white canvas.

New Year's Dance.

The South Monaghan U.F.Y. P.O. Club, put on their annual New Year's eve dance on Wednesday evening, in the town hall at Centreville.

The weather was especially fine for the occasion, and one of the largest crowds was present that has yet been present at any previous dance.

The hall was nicely decorated by the members of the club, while Follis' four-piece orchestra from Peterboro, furnished excellent music from nine o'clock until 2 o'clock a.m.

A bountiful lunch was catered by a number of the young folks, and a most enjoyable evening was spent by all present.

LONGER SCHEDULE FOR MAJORS CONTEMPLATED

Short Season Necessitated Too Many Double Headers.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Jan. 2.— Three members of the National and American Baseball Leagues' schedule drafting committee met here today and went to work on the 1925 schedule. B. B. Johnson, president of the American League and a member of the committee, did not attend the initial meeting because of a slight illness.

John Heydler, president of the national circuit. Barney Dreyfuss, owner of the Pittsburgh Club, and Will Harridge, secretary to President Johnson, attended to-day's meeting.

Members of the committee spoke of the possibility of returning to the old schedule arrangement for closing the season on October 4, instead of late in September. The earlier closing date, it was said, was found satisfactory, since it caused the clubs to play more double headers than usual. The opening date it was said, would remain the same as last year.

The work of drafting the schedules will continue through Saturday and probably Sunday. The complete schedules will be acted upon when the league meet in February.

NEWS FROM WARSAW

Ministers Greeted With Small Congregations—Roads in Good Shape.

WARSAW, Jan. 3.—It must be very discouraging for the ministers to prepare sermons, and, as in the case of the Anglican clergyman, come a long distance and find small congregations, when there should be large ones. The Presbyterian and Methodist Sunday Schools are well attended, but, even when the church service is immediately after Sunday school, the church attendance is not what it should be. On Sunday morning, Rev. W. Atkinson preached a New Years' sermon to his own people. In the evening he preached to the Union congregations, text, "Looking Unto Jesus". Rev. F. G. Weir had spoken to the children of the New Year opening up before us. We were going into a forest, and we get out of it what we like. We may wander by ourselves and pick up what we see, perhaps wealth, or other material things, or we may be led by good influences and do good and be better. In his prayer he spoke of the solemn time. Mr. Atkinson stressed the fact that the best of 1924 is not good enough for 1925. We must do better in every way. He mentioned the three levels, which could, and should, each be improved. 1st or lowest, our own self-culture; 2nd, the level of the good Samaritan, on which we help other; and 3rd and highest, the level on which we glorify and enjoy God.

In Dummer, Messrs. James Hawthorne and John Darling are running for reeve. The old councillors, Hugh Kelly, Ernie Baptie, John Drain, E. R. Hamblin are in the field, also William Batten.

The Methodist Sunday School held their annual Christmas tree and entertainment Christmas eve. There was quite a good attendance and those taking part did so well. The church was prettily decorated. The platform was arranged as a room with the old-fashioned fire-place, mantle, and all, a grandfather clock on one side, and the tree on the other. The program was a follows: Opening chorus, 'Merry Christmas' by School; address of welcome, Margaret Selkirk; chairman's remarks, Mr. Somers; motion song, primary class; recitation, "Opportunity", Charlote Freeburn; "Christmas Stockings", ten litle girls dressed in white, each bearing a Christmas stocking; recitation, "Don't Forget Me Santa", Rhoda Lloyd; song, "Hurry Up, Mr. Clock", primary girls; recitation, "Dufe's Arithmetic" Russel Greystock; recitation, "His Wife's Soliloquy," Elsie Moore; drill, "Santa's Heralds," by ten boys dressed in white fur, carrying horns; recitation by Albert Selkirk; recitation, Just Before Christmas I'm as Good as I can be", Dorcas Lloyd; dialogue, "City Versus Country", intermediate class; recitation, Hiram Anderson; reading, Harold Payne, "When Pa Went to Town"; drill, "Rally Around the Bible", primary boys and girls; recitation, Willie Miles; "Clapping Song", by junior and primary pupils; dialogue, "The Widow's Mistake," Mrs. Evetett Moore, Maurelta and Mark Freeburn; recitation, "Heaps of Love, But Ain't Got Any Money," Dorcas Lloyd; recitation, Ivan Clements, "Good Night"; Santa Claus song, "Jolly Old Boy".

Santa stirpped the tree, and each child got at least one present.

Roads Mostly Good.

There was no pleasure driving on Christmas Day. People were thankful enough to have a nice, cosy time at home, except those who were going to other houses to family gatherings.

Cars are still running on most main roads. Sleighing is quite good, a little thin in some places for heavy loads.

There has recently been a lot of new gravel put on some of the roads. Cuff's Hill on the Dummer Road is quite bad because of it. There is quite a lot on the Douro Road to Indian River.

It is well there was no more snow before the winds, else some roads had been wholly blocked. The winds have blown dust so that the snow is very dirty everywhere.

So far there has been a lot of sunshine, for which everyone is very thankful.

YOUNG PETES PLAY TWEED ON MONDAY

Following This Game Team Will be Picked and Taken to Lindsay Wednesday.

Peterboro Junior O.H.A. team will play their first game of the season on Monday night in Tweed when they meet the Tweed Intermediates in an Exhibition game on the Tweed open air rink. The pick of the twenty odd players who were given a try out with the juniors, will be taken to Tweed on Monday and they all will be given a chance to make good. The game should be a good one as every player on the Peterboro line up will give every ounce of pep he has, in an effort to catch a place on the team and on the other hand the Tweedsters will give all they have in an attempt to swamp the city youngsters.

Following the Tweed game, Walter Jackson will pick his team and on Wednesday the kids will play their first scheduled game of the season with the Lindsay Juniors in Lindsay.

The locals will trounce out a husky bunch of puck chasers this year and when rounded into condition should show the markings of a championship team.

WHOLE FAMILY IS FOUND DEAD

Gas Overcame Six Persons—Two Attempted to Investigate.

SCENE OF HORROR.

BROCKVILLE, Jan. 3.—(Canadian Press.)—The family of Jesse Gray, a laborer, six in number, was wiped out this morning by gas in their home on Water street. A neighbor, alarmed at the non-appearance of the family, forced an entrance and found all six lying dead. They had been dead several hours. The cause of the tragedy is a mystery, as the municipal gas system is not connected with the house. Neighbors, however, state that there has been trouble with a gas main outside the Gray home. The house occupied by the Gray family, is one of a row of three roughcast dwellings near the water front. There lived Gray, his wife and four sons, Harold, aged 26, Purvis in his 'teens, Kenneth 10 and Cecil 9.

When the oplice entered the place they found it filled with gas, evidently of the illuminating variety, and upstairs a scene of horror presented itself. Purvis Gray lay in bed still in death, while in a room at the rear the father of the family, partly clad, lay stretched across the bed in which his wife lay dead. He had evidently attempted to dress himself in order to investigate, as had also his son Harold, who was found partially clothed lying dead across the bodies of his two elder brothers in bed. The younger boys had evidently not been awakened died as they slept.

The entire family is wiped out with the exception of a daughter, Mrs. Yeldon, who lives in the United States.

THEATRES

AT THE GRAND.

MUTT & JEFF TONIGHT.

In a recent interview President Coolidge was asked regarding his favorite diversion when not attending to the worries of the state and nation. He promptly remarked looking through the newspapers and perusing the comic supplements. He said he found more real humor, fun and pleasure in certain cartoon creations embodying American types and characters. That he had Mutt and Jeff in mind was evident, for he never loses an opportunity to follow the adventures and escapades of Bud Fisher's famous creations. When millions of other Americans have done the same it is apparent that Mutt and Jeff are more than mere favorites—they are an institution. Their latest bid for perpetual fame and popularity is a musical comedy offering in two acts and five scenes, which will hold forth at the Grand today, with the customary matinee. During the development of the plot—and this play really possesses one—these world renowned funsters meet His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales; pose as chauffeurs, golfers, race track followers and otherwise make themselves ludicrously conspicuous. The piece is replete with original melodies, dances, laughter, guffaws, screams, surprises, novelties and a preponderence of pretty girls and glittering costumes. The book is by John P. Mulgrew with music by Leo Edwards. A large and capable company, with the two leading roles assumed by artists who might have stepped out from the brain cells of Bud Fisher, Mutt and Jeff's gifted creator, has been engaged.

AT THE CAPITOL.

"HIS HOUR" OFFERS GREAT LOVE STORY

New Elinor Glyn Production Tells Romance of Imperial Russia.

The rare combination of an Elinor Glyn story brought to the screen with her two favorite screen lovers playing the hero and heroine is the promise of "His Hour," Mrs. Glyn's latest Metro-Goldwyn production, which will come to the Capitol Theatre next Monday and Tuesday.

In the first place, John Gilbert, as a romantic Russian Prince, is said to come up to all expectations as to just what Elinor Glyn's ideal hero should be like, and Aileen Pringle, who demonstrated so definitely her ability and charm in "Three Weeks," is again the beautiful heroine.

A Widow and a Prince.

"His Hour" tells the story of a fascinating English widow, brought up in a straight laced manner, meeting informally Gritzko, the fiery Russian Prince whom all women adore.

She is instantly attracted to him, but knowing him by reputation, she resolves she will not follow the trend of all women and become his slave. Therefore, the wall of aloofness freezes about her and the Prince, who has fallen in love with her, cannot win her. She tantalizes him by her indifference, yet he goes to every means to win her.

Great Love Sequence.

Finally, as a last resort, he kidnaps her, and then follows a series of love scenes which are said even to surpass those in "Three Weeks." The climax, when the Prince and Tamara realize they love one another devotedly, is one of the most beautiful and realistic scenes ever brought to the screen.

King Vidor directed the production, and others in the cast besides the two leads are, Emily Fitzroy, Dale Fuller, Bertram Grassby, Capt. Wilfred Gough, David Mir and Mario Carillo. John Mescall was chief photographer.

AT THE ROYAL.

LOVELY PRISCILLA STAR OF NEW FILM

"The Siren of Seville" Shows Her as Fiery, Dashing Idol of Spain

Priscilla Dean, whose latest starring vehicle, "The Siren of Seville," shown at the Royal Theatre, Monday, has been called by a world-famous critic "one of but six real actresses in the silent dramatic field". Her remarkable transitions from seductive feminity to tigerish fierceness and fighting action and her amazing versatility have made her the screen's prototype of feminine fighting courage.

Miss Dean's consummate artistry is the result of a lifetime of experience. She made her first appearance in pictures with the old Biograph Company following wide experience in stock, vaudeville and Broadway shows dating back to when she was but two years of age.

Her early tutor was her mother, May Preston Dean, formerly one of the leading stars of the theatrical world.

Carl Laemmle saw several of Priscilla's earlier efforts, and, recognizing her latent ability, he induced her to join his players at Universal City She started playing major parts and leading roles in comedies, serials and features, and her success came steadily on a tide of continuous public praise.

"The Flame of Life," "The White Tiger," "The Storm Daughter," "The Virgin of Stamboul," "The Wildcat of Paris" and "Outside the Law" are some of her most notable successes.

As Dolores in "The Siren of Seville" Miss Dean gives the greatest performance of her career. This is the first of her own productions, and she put her heart and soul and her boundless energy into it. She is every inch the fiery, exotic idol of the City of Bullfights—a vibrant and vivid woman who loves and fights for that love with all the ardor of the Latin temperament.

HERO'S RECORD READS AS STORY

Champion of Ring, Clever Swordsman and Horse back Rider

Victor McLaglen, one of the best known British motion picture actors, appears in the title role of "The Beloved Brute," a J. Stuart Blackton production, the attraction at the Royal Theatre to-night only. In addition to being a virile actor Mr. McLaglen is a well known athlete, boxer, wrestler, swordsman and horseman. The picture affords him opportunity to display his prowess as boxer and wrestler and in some stirring dramatic sequences.

The picture is an adaptation of the novel by Kenneth Perkins. The cast is headed by Marquerite de la Motte, Victor McLaglen, William Russell, Stuart Holmes and Mary Alden.

LOU CHANEY IN "THE SHOCK," BOOKED BY THE ROYAL.

Lou Chaney, now famous for his famous characterization of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" is booked by the Royal for Thursday, Friday and Saturday next in "The Shock." There is one scene, the destruction of a city by earthquake, that is worth the price of admission alone. Chaney is supported by Virginia Valli. This is a big production in line with the policy at the Royal to play specials only.

KNOX CHURCH SESSION STATEMENT

At a meeting of the session of Knox Presbyterian Church last evening action was unanimously taken as indicated in the following statement to be handed to the press:—

"The session of Knox Presbyterian Church, Peterborough, regret the necessity of having to correct a false statement made by the so-called "Knox Church Branch, Presbyterian Church Association", in an advertisement appearing in the Peterborough Examiner, and also in a news item in the Toronto Mail and Empire.

The session desires to state that it has never "declined to allow any speaker to address the congregation at a Sunday service, in order to present the arguments against Church Union." Such a request was not made to this session either verbally or in writing.

"In the Presbyterian Blue Book of "Rules and Forms of Procedure," Section 19, is the following, anent congregational meetings: "Meetings of the congregation are called by the authority of the session of its own motion or on requisition in writing of the Deacons' Court or Board of Managers, or of a number of persons in full communion, etc." No such requisition as thus required has ever been declined or made in connection with the present Church Union situation. A letter was received from one individual member of the church, using the first personal pronoun "I", and mentioning no name other than his own. The session did not consider this a sufficient warrant for calling a congregational meeting, especially considering the well-known attitude of this individual, who even absented himself from the church when the minister was explaining the Act and Basis of Union to the Congregation. The policy of the session has been to protect the peace and harmony of the church from disturbance from outsiders, unionist as well as anti-unionist. To this end no meetings held in the city of Peterborough, by the organizations representing either side have been announced from our pulpit. Moreover, no fewer than three requests for the use of Knox Church for Unionist meetings have been refused. For one of these meetings the services of "Ralph Connor" were offered In addition to this, the session decided not to have the Moderator of the General Assembly Dr. Clarence Mackinnon, speak on Church Union when he was in the city. The session, which is responsible to the Presbytery for the conduct of the congregation generally as well as for the use made of the church edifice, etc." (Book of Rules Section 72), has endeavoured to be fair to all concerned in carrying its responsibilities and seeking to maintain and defend in a Presbyterian way the peace and harmony of Knox Church. While respecting the honest convictions of these opposed to the United Church, the session regrets that those leading the opposition should misrepresent the situation in this church, even to the extent of reporting a "disruption," in spite of the fact almost the entire list of our church officers, elders, managers, trustees, W. M. S. Ladies' Aid Society, and Church School — have recommended that Knox Church enter the United Church.

BOY DROWNED IN THE ARMS OF HIS FATHER

Ten Year Old Son of Fred Grabe Drowned in Well.

MELVILLE, Sask., Jan. 3—(Canadian Press).—Carl, ten-year-old son of Fred. Grabe, east of Melville, was drowned in his father's arms when water rushed into the well they had been digging. A depth of twelve feet had been reached when, without warning, water began to rush in. Grabe was out of the hole at the time, but hearing the little fellow's cry, he jumped down, but found the boy had been trapped by falling earth, and the father could not extract him before his head was submerged. The water continued to rise, and was up to Grabe's chest when rescuers arrived.

WHEN THE PAPER DOESN'T COME.

My father says the paper he reads
ain't put up right;
He finds a lot of faults, too, he does
perusi.' it all night;
He says there ain't a single thing in it worth to read,
And that it doesn't print the kind of stuff the people need;
He tosses it aside and says its strictly on the bum,
But you ought to hear him holler
when the paper doesn't come!

He reads about the weddin's and he snorts like all get out;
He reads the social doin's with a most derisive shout.
He says they make the papers for the women folks alone;
He'll read about the parties and he'll fume and fret and groan;
He says of information it doesn't have a crumb—
But you ought to hear him holler
when the paper doesn't come.

He is always first to grab it and he reads it plumb clean through.
He doesn't miss an item, or a want ad—that is true;
He says they don't know what we want, the darn newspaper guys;
"I'm going to take a day some time and go and put them wise;
"Sometimes it seems as though they must be deaf ' blind and dumb."
But you ought to hear him holler
when the paper doesn't come!

FABLES ON HEALTH

CURES FOR SNORING.

"Wonder if we have any mustard and olive oil?" inquired Mr. Mann of Anytown, as he crawled out from beneath his blankets on a cold morning.

The Mrs. stopped short with a puzzled look on her face.

"It is claimed that six drops of olive oil, poured upon a pinch of mustard and taken intrenally just before retiring, will prevent snoring," Mr. Mann explained.

"Also, changing the position of the head on the pillow, often is a good remedy," the wife added. And then—

"Why?— Who's snoring?" she asked.

"Sometimes it is necessary to have some obstruction removed from the nasal passages," continued Mr. Mann, without heeding her question.

"One of the three remedies should prove beneficial," he added.

SMALL MARKET THIS MORNING

The Stove League Lighter on Account of the Mild Weather.

Attendance at the farmers' market this morning was not overly large. The vendors in the open section were congratulating themselves on the milder weather that made their work more comfortable, and there was not the usual crowd of stove habituees upstairs.

Fowl was fairly plentiful. Chickens ranged in price from 25 to 30 cents a pound. Milk-fed and dry-picked, they were 35 cents on one table. A few turkeys were on view at 33 and 35 cents a pound. Ducks and geese were 25 cents.

Cream was 30 cents a pint, butter 38 and 40 cents a pound, eggs 60 and 65 cents a dozen, with small pullets' eggs at 55 cents.

The spring-like odor of green onions was in the air of the basket section this morning, at the table where one man had fresh bunches of small specimens.

Home-made woollen socks and mittens were on sale at several tables, the left-handed fancy worker demonstrated his embroidery needle to a small group, and there was dainty tatting and small, sandy wicker baskets.

Downstairs, in the entry, a setter of cement was smashing pieces of glass with great abandon. "I sell you one and give you the other," was his slogan.

The fish man had shining, silvery smelts at 25 cents a pound, large, flat white plaice and fresh-water herring at 10 cents a pound. "How many herring to a pound?" was an enquiry that stumped the dealer.

Apples were having a brisk sale. Luscious Red McIntosh, the prize eating apples of the Dominion, were 75 cents a peck. Peewaukees were 40 and 50 cents, Wagners and Russets 50, Ontarios and Spies $6 a barrel.

Honey in pails, "pure white," was 18 cents a pound and amber was 12½ cents. Sections of pork were 16 and 18 cents, and beef was priced from 8½ to 10 for the fronts, and from 10 to 12 cents a pound for hindquarters.

Potatoes were 85 cents a bag for the Green Mountain variety.

Hardwood in cordwood lengths was $12 a load, and mixed wood was $8. Cut in stove lengths, it ranged in price from $7.50 a load to $12.

Chinese radishes, with an Oriental buyer of a large quantity, were 40 cents a peck.

Fires in Manhattan Drive 700 Persons From Their Homes.

New York, Jan. 3.—(Canadian Press.—One woman was burned, two women and a man were injured and more than 700 persons were driven from their homes in two fires in Manhattan early today. The woman lost her life in a fire which swept a rooming house in Irving Place. She was believed to have been Marie Ledere, 25 years of age, medical student at Cornell University.

One woman jumped from the roof of an adjoining two-storey building but escaped injury when she landed in a snowdrift. Several men and women were rescued from the window ledges and the snow-covered roof by firemen and policemen. The second fire was in an East 101st Street apartment house occupied by fifty families.

Mohawk Took All Passengers' Luggage and 68 Cars Under Water.

LEWES, Del., Jan. 3.— (Canadian Press.)—The Clyde liner Mohawk, whose crew on Thursday night fought a losing battle off the New Jersey coast against flames in the hold, finally being forced to scuttle the ship after 208 passengers had been taken off, lies to-day in forty feet of water near the Delaware breakwater.

The passengers' luggage went down with the ship, also sixty-eight automobiles.

The passengers told of terrible experiences during the fourteen hours the ship was tossed about in the worst gale of the winter, while smoke rolled up from the hold and nearly choked those assembled in the crowded social hall with life-belts on, praying and singing hymns.

GAS MAIN LOOSENED BY FROST CAUSE OF BROCKVILLE TRAGEDY

Main Found Heaved and Broken in Front of the Death House in Which Parents and Four Children Were Asphyxiated—Next Door Family of Four in Hospital.

EVEN DOG AND GOLDFISH DEAD

Brockville Depressed by Its Worst Disaster—Funeral of the Gray Family Was Held Today.

BROCKVILLE, Jan. 5.—Illuminating gas penetrating to the interior of house in which they lived from a leaking main in Water Street West, was yesterday definitely blamed by L. A. Farquharson, manager of the Public Utilities Commissioin for the tragedy which took six lives and all but exterminated the family of Jesse W. Gray, a laborer in the employ of the Central Canada Coal Co., here some time during Friday night.

Investibations conducted by the commission following the discovery of the six bodies in the gas-filled house ,resulting in the finding of a broken main, evidently heaved by the severe frosts of recent days from which by some means as yet unknown, the deadly fumes entered the house.

So strong were the fumes remaining in the space which served as a form of cellar for the house, that in their search the employes of the commission were obliged to wear masks and to be fed with air to prevent them being overcome. Sunday the bodies of the six victims lay at the home of Mrs. Frank G. Rosenberg, a sister of Mrs. Gray, whence the funeral which will be perhaps the most touching in the history of the town, was held this afternoon.

Inquest Tuesday.

It was conducted by the Rev. Canon F. Dealtry, Woodstock, rector of Trinity church, to which congregation Gray belonged. The coroner's inquest opened Saturday, under the direction of Dr. W. Fred Jackson, adjourned until Tuesday after having viewed the bodies and heard brief evidence from John Hartley, chief of the fire department, and Alvin Stotts, an emplooe of the public utilities commission, with respect to the presence of gas in the house. Wiith but one exception, the entire Gray family was wiped out in the disaster which overtook them as most of them slept, it is believed, early Saturday morning. It consisted of Jesse W. Gray, a middle-aged man, whose occupation was a labourer; his wife, Mary E. Gray, and their sons, Harold aged 19, Purvis aged 16, Cecil aged 11, Kenneth aged 8. The sole survivor is Mrs. Henry Yeldon, a daughter who lives in Syracuse, N..Y..

The discovery of the bodies was made at about 11 a..m. by K.. Prue and E.. Ball, fellow workers with Gray in the yards of the coal company situated nearby.

These men, alarmed at lack of the usual activity surrounding the little house, and at the non-appearance of Gray -t his daily labors, made their way to the house, at the door of which they knocked. There was no response, and the odor of gas which they deteced determined them to force an entrance. They were all but choked by the gas which filled the house, and which in a measure prepared them for the sight which met their gaze then they ascended the stairs.

Bedroom Mortuary.

Upstairs, there were three sleeping chambers, two at the front of the house, and one at the rear; one of these at the front was unoccupieid, but in the other the men were horrified to find the body of Purvis Gray, the second son, who lay in bed as if still asleep, but whose face wore the pallor of death. In the room at the rear where there were two beds, the intruders found the five other victims, Jesse Gray, the father, lay across the head of one of the beds half clothed, and apparently overcome as he was in the act of arising to obtain relief. Huddled towards the foot of the same bed was his wife, still in night attire. The feet of the father almost met those of his oldest son, Harold, who lay in a similar attitude across the head of the other bed, upon the opposite side of the room, his body being stretched across those of his two small brothers, Cecil and Kenneth. He was also partially dressed and had evidently been roused from sleep in his room at the front of the house and was endeavoring to awake the others when he, too, was overcome.

Every window in the house was closed and there was no exit for the fumes. Scarcely a living thing escaped their destructive power. Teddy, he pet collie dog of the household, lay curled up on a sofa in the living room downsstairs without a sign of a struggle, and even some of the gold fish in an aquarium in the same room had ceased their swimming.

Died As They Slept.

The younger members of the family without doubt perished as they slept and without knowledge of their predicament, for their faces were peaceful and bore no indication of a struggle. After having notified the police, and physicians, the men turned their attention to the house adjoining that of Gray, in the three dwelling rough-cast terrace. It was occupied by Mrs. Mary J. Ferguson, the widow of an overseas veteran, who met death by drowning here last summer, and her three small children, Mary, Willie and Jean. There had been no sign of life about the place all morning. Here again an entrance was forced, but, fortunately, rescue worok was undertaken in this instance in time to save the lives of the occupants. The main flow of gas had apparently entered the Gray residence, whence by means of flimsy partitions and other avenues of exiit, it had penetrated to the Ferguson home. A physician ordered the removal of the Ferguson family, some of whom were unconscious, to St. Vincent de Paul Hospital, where they are progressing favorably and their return is looked for within two or three days.

Dead for Hours.

Physicians who were early upon the scene expressed their opinion that all those in the Gray household had been dead for several hours as rigor mortis had set in pronouncedly. On the preceding day all had been about their normal activities, and in the evening the two older boys attended a hockey match. The second son had until recently been employed as a pin setter in a bowling alley, but like his older brother, Harold, was unemployed. The two smaller children attended the General Brock School. Gray had spent the greater part of his life in Brockville and its vicinity, having lived in Delta and Spring Valley, Leeds County, before moving here, about 18 years ago.

He leaves several brothers, among them Frank and Fred Gray, Watertown, N..Y..; Bart. Gray, Kingston, and Edward Gray, Detroit, Mich. Mrs. Gray was in her fifty-first year and was a daughter of Simon Aldrich, Fairfield, East Leeds County. Besides her mother, she is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Harry Church, Tincah, and Mrs. Frank Rosenberg, Brockville, and three brothers Ernest and Hiram Aldrich, of Fairfieild East and William Gray, Elizabethtown.

Town Saddened.

The tragedy has stirred Brockville and its vicinity profoundly, as the loss of life is the largest in any one disaster in the history of the town. It was declared by people living in the section of the town in which it occurred, that for some time past there has been trouble in connection with the gas main outside of the Gray house, and that Mrs. Gray had upon several occasions complained of headaches which she attributed to leaking gas in the house.

The house itself is not connected with the gas system, the public utilities commission officials state. No complaint had ever been received concerning faulty equipment in the immediate vicinity.

WARNS LAZY MINISTERS.

Bishop Says Those Who Do Not Keep Up With Times Are Sinners.

CHICAGO, Jan. 5.—A lazy minister can expect no comfort from Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes of the Methodist Episcopal Church, he indicated in addressing fifty clergymen from all sections of the country.

"Any ministetr who fails to toil in his study, who fails to buy new books and keep himself at the best, is a sinner," the Bishop declared.

3The ministers are chairmen of boards of examiners and heads of forty summer schools of theology. Dr. Harris Franklin Rall, secretary of the conference of the commission on courses of study, said the purpose of the conference is to direct the training of 2,500 young ministers by correspondence.

PRISONERS' DASH FOR FREEDOM WAS SHORT

Two Kingston Convicts Captured 15 Minutes After Escape.

KINGSTON, Jan. 5.—(Canadian Press). — Frank Grice and John Westanhafer, two inmates of the Portsmouth Penitentiary, who are serving comparatively short sentences, gained a brief period of freedom Saturday afternoon by breaking away from their guards and taking to the bush in the vicinity of the institution. The two men were in the act of shovelling snow in the outside of the Penitentiary, the usual work of the quarry gang, to which they belonged being over for the day, when they ran away in full sight of the officials charged with their safe keeping and of other armed guards stationed at stragetic points on the walls of the building. They were never lost sight of, and were recaptured less than fifteen minutes later in the bush near the Sir Oliver Mowat Sanitorium. The opinion is expressed by penitentiary officials that the men were lucky not to have been shot by the guards during their foolish dash for freedom.

$500 FINE FOR SALE OF LIQUOR

Option of Four Months in Prison to W. J. McDonnell of Cobourg.

APPEAL ENTERED

COBOURG, Jan. 5. — Police Magistrate Floyd, in passing judgment in the O.T.A. charge brought against W. J. McDonnell, a Cobough citizen, said in part:

"You have been charged with selling liquor contrary to the Act. From the evidence it appears that there is no dispute as to York, Brown, Hillier and the defendant being at the defendant's house on the day in question. That fact was confirmed by all of the witnesses.

"The Crown witness swears that on entering the defendant's home, York wanted something to drink. The defendant brought out a bottle of whisky diluted with water, and after the bottle was brought out, $5 was put on the table by York, and the defendant took the five dollars. Mrs. McDonald swears that the bottle was produced before the money was paid."

"Three had drinks on the first round, and four had drinks on the second round. This fact is not disputed by the defendant.

"On leaving the defendant's home the Crown witness swears that the defendant told him to take it along, meaning the bottle of whisky."

Mrs. McDonnell corroborates many of the statements of the previous witnesses as to their being there, having supper and drinking. She swears that Mr. York said, "How much do I owe you for the trip to Colborne," and that the defendant's reply was $5.

The defendant admits the drive to his home, the personnel of the party, the producing of the bottle of whisky, the drinking and the supper and the paying of $5, but the defendant swears that the $5 was to pay for a trip to Colborne a few days previously. When York asked the defendant, "How much do I owe you, Billie?" the reply was, "You owe me $5." He did not then say what the $5 was for. The court finds a conflict of witnesses.

"The conclusion that the court arrives at is that the $5 was for liquor not for a trip to Colborne, and finds you guilty of selling liquor in contravention of Section 40 of the Ontario Temperance Act, and imposes a penalty of $500 and costs, $36.50, and, in default of immediate payment, four months' imprisonment."

Mr. McDonnell, through his counsel and solicitor, Col. H. A. Ward, K.C., Port Hope, and F. M. Field, K.C., has entered an appeal against Magistrate Floyd's decision, and it is expected the appeal will be heard by Judge Cameron sometime this month.

VIOLENT GALES ROARING ROUND WORLD CORNERS

Whole of Earth's Atmosphere Disturbed by Tumult of the Elements.

RAIN IN FRANCE.

Towns on Seaboard Inundated—Leningrad Is Again Flooded.

WASHINGTON, January 5. — The sweep of violent snowstorms across the United States, England and France and other European countries during the past week is all part of one grand marshalling of the atmospheric elements, according to the Weather Bureau, but not an unusual condition at this season of the year.

"We have been having this sort of weather for the last two thousand years or more," an official at the bureau said. "It is all in the cycle of years and days and weather."

Yet the violence of this particular attack of the storm king on the world has been something remarkable, and the force of the movement is likely to be felt for a few hours longer, especially in the North Atlantic.

The Atlantic Coast from Washington north is to feel further effects of the disturbance, according to present indications but rain and snow is the prospect. After this there may be a day or two of fair weather but unsettled conditions are due again in about a week if a disturbance discovered in the West materializes and heads for the East.

The pressure has been extremely low north of the British Isles for a week or more. This, according to the weatherman, was largely responsible for the violence with which the storm broke over Great Britain.

"The cause of it," according to R. H. Weightman, forecaster at weather bureau, "speaking generally, is a very active condition of the general circulation of the atmosphere. What causes this great activity at times we do not know, but from observations in the so-called centres of action we are able to identify and recognize the same active periods.

"It seems that during the next week conditions will be less active, and that in the northern portion of the United States the week as a whole will develop temperatures that are, for the most part, above the seasonal average. That is the week, considered as a whole, will be relatively warm."

POPULATION FLEES.

LENINGRAD, Russia, January 5.—Another flood visited Leningrad on Saturday, and early on Sunday morning the water was eight feet above its normal level. All the big factories in the outskirts of the city, including the Putilov Iron Works, are inundated. Train services have ceased. All the Communists have been mobilized to meet the emergency.

The population of the city has fled to various high points for refuge.

TOWNS ARE FLOODED.

PARIS, January 5. — A full gale lashed the French seaboard at Brest last Saturday night, and a torrential rain flooded the nearby country.

The Rivern Elorn overflowed while the towns of Landivisiau, Chateulin, and Quimper, were inundated by several feet of water.

The Lorient wireless station announced that the steamer Dahomey, which summoned assistance after being crippled by the storm, had been swept away from the powerful tugs which were towing her to Lorient. The steamer as reported to be drifting among dangerous shoals. Seventy men comprise the crew.

GIRL DIES IN FIRE.

Private Hospital Destroyed by Christmas Tree Blaze.

BOSTON, Jan. 5.—A 17 year old girl was suffocated and one fireman was known to have been injured when a three alarm fire on Sunday destroyed the Scobey Hospital, a private institution on Beacon street.

The fire started from a Christmas tree, according to early reports. Eighteen other patients were removed safely by the firemen. The one known victim of the fire was Elizabeth Jenkins who was suffocated before aid could reach her.

THE BRIDGE OVER THE RIVER AT FORT NELSON AT THE END OF THE SUB-ARCTIC RAILROAD

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 5. — Fast freight trains may be bringing down wheat from within the shadow of the Arctic Circle within a few years.

It all depends on whether the government is willing to expend 20 or 30 million dollars more to finish the railway it started building 14 years ago into the limits of the great sub-arctic wheat belt.

Nearly 20 millioin dollars already has been spent. Work was going ahead slowly when the war came on. Man power was scarce then, and money scarcer still, so it was abandoned for the time being.

But now, six years aftetr the armistice, the prairie cities are crying for the resumption of operations. Premier MacKenzie King, if he opposes the plan, is certain to arouse the anger of the Progressivts of the West, who hitherto have supported him. Witihout the support of the westerners, the government would have but a majority of two in the House of Commons.

Secession Threats.

And there is even talk that two provinces will secede from the dominion if the work does not go on.

The whole question looms as a major political issue in Canada during the ntxt six months. On it may depend even the destiny of the dominion itself.

The distance from Le Pas, a mining city high up on the fringe of settlement in Saskatchewan, to Port Nelson on Hudson's Bay, is 424 miles. Construction of the railroad would give the grain growers of this section a much quicker route to Liverpool. It would shorten the distance approximately a thousand miles.

Fort Churchill originally was chosen by engineers as the terminus of the line. But their verdict was over-ruled becaus- it was thought the town was too far north.

Say Roads Oppose It.

Those who oppose the road say Fort Nelson would be open to sea traffic only six weeks in the year and that even during that time floating ice might damage vessels. They contend it would be the end of September, when navigation was closed, before grain could arrive there.

Traffic, they say, would be for only a short period. At other times trains would be empty.

But the other side maintains both parties and all premiers since 1890 have pomised the road would be completed. The cost would not be large if spread over the whole dominion over a number of years, they declare.

And the opposition, they insist, comes solely from the old established lines.

EJECTED DEAF MUTES FOR NOISY ARGUMENTS

Berlin Beer Hall Proprietor Banishes Band From Cellar Headquarters.

BERLIN, Jan. 5. — (Associated Press).—Because they made too much noise Berlin's deaf and dumb have been ejected from their historic gathering place, "Deaf Mutes' Cellar," on Alexander Platz. For years they had met there to play cards, carry out business deals and discuss politics in their sign language.

The proprietor of the cellar was moved to eject the mutes because of the complaint that they gave vent to their differences of opinion by sounds which they could not hear, but which annoyed other patrons of the beer hall. Their argument often was reinforced by a banging of steins and the beating of fists on the tables and even the hurling of chairs.

The proprietor, while he appreciated the business of the mutes, found they were a losing proposition, as other customers refused to continue their patronage unless the boisterous men were removed.

"Deaf Mutes' Cellar" got its name during the World War when the deaf and dumb were in great demand as skilled workers because all other able-bodied men were in the trenches. The mutes then commanded fabulous wages and the proprietor of the Alexander Platz Beer Cellar with business instinct, gladly set aside a big table for them.

WON'T ADMIT LOVE, CAN'T GET DIVORCE

Wife of Professor Is Called Obstinate by Chicago Judge, Who Refuses Decree.

CHICAGO, Jan. 5. — A divorce from Professor R. C. Journey of the State Agricultural College of Raleigh, N.C., was denied Mrs. Helen Journey Saturday. In announcing his decision Judge Sabath said he believed Mrs. Journey still loved her husband, "but was too stubborn to admit it."

Professor Journey's cross-bill was taken under advisement.

Judge Sabath warned Oscar Harmon, a young law student named as co-respondent in Journey's bill, against remaining a member of the Journey household.

"Despite the evidence against you," the Court told Harmon, "and despite the usual interpretations of your actions, I am not convinced of Mrs. Journey's infidelity. But too much nonsense has been going on between you. Professor Journey is wrapped up in his work. He is a man of unusual intelligence and unwise in the ways of the world.

"Mrs. Journey is a charming little woman, cultured and refined and was once fond of her husband. But when you came into their lives her love for him began to ebb away. I think she still loves him but is a bit self-willed and stubborn now."

TORNADOES KILL 1929.

Property Loss During Eight Years in U. S. $62,000,000.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—Tornadoes did more than $62,000,000 of property damage in the United States over the eight-year period from 1916 to 1923 and resulted in the loss of 1,929 lives, Herbert C. Hunter, of the United States Weather Bureau, told the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Arkansas, Dr. Hunter said, was the most frequent sufferer, seventy-six such storms sweeping over the State in the eight year period. Mississippi, however, paid a greater toll in lives lost with 257. Illinois had the highest aggregate property loss, $7,500,000.

The only tornado to take in excess of 100 lives swept over Indiana and Illinois.

JUDGE REFUSES NEW TRIAL FOR TWO POISONERS

Lawrence Hight Formally Sentenced to Life Imprisonment—Showed No Emotion.

DENOUNCES WOMAN.

Mrs. Sweetin Regarded as the Stronger Willed—35 Year Term.

MOUNT VERNON, Ill., Jan. 5.—Judge J. C. Kern Saturday overruled a motion for a new trial for Mrs. Elsie Sweetin and Lawrence M. Hight, convicted for murder as the poisoners of her husband, Wilford Sweetin, and formally sentenced the man to life imprisonment and the woman to thirty-five years.

The former minister displayed no emotion. Mrs. Sweetin's eyes filled with tears as Judge Kern declared in passing sentence that he was convinced that she was as guilty as Hight.

"I changed my mind about you during the course of this trial, Mrs. Sweetin," the Judge said. "At first I thought you might have been led into this crime by the urging of your co-defendant, but now I am convinced that you have a stronger mind than Hight.

"The evidence shows that your husband died from poison and you said you gave him poison three times. It took a cruel heart to witness the suffering of the man who had been your husband for sixteen years and to see him get better and then give him more poison."

In passing sentence upon Hight, Judge Kern said:

"There was some evidence to show that you are mentally unbalanced and there is probably some foundation for this.

"But the test applied by the law, is whether you have sufficient mentality to distinguish right from wrong and I think that there is no doubt that you have sufficient mentality to know it is wrong to kill people by administering poison for others and urge them to administer it to people.

"I can see how you came to enter into improper relationship with Mrs. Sweetin. That is common experience. The fact that a man has become a minister does not remove him from temptations to which other men are subjected. It does not change his nature.

"How you could have gone to the extreme of taking human life to accomplish your purpose, I cannot understand; how in view of your connection with his death you pretended to have converted Wilford Sweetin, or how you could preach his funeral sermon. Such conduct makes your case rare and unusual. It must have been due to some condition of your mind that I cannot understand."

Policemen Saved Tenants From Burning Building.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Jan. 5. — (United Press.)—Two women, two men and three boys were saved from death by fire to-day when they leaped from second and third storey windows into an improvised life net made by Policemen Short and Ecks from their overcoats.

Thirty other occupants of a burning tenement in the Williamsburg section were taken down ladders and fire escapes during the blaze.

All seven who jumped were injured and were taken to St. Catharines Hospital. More than a score suffered slight burns, cuts and bruises.

Flames had burned away the lower stairway of the building before the occupants were aroused.

The policeman, who gave the alarm, found that some of the tenants of the building would have to jump before the firemen could reach them. Removing their overcoats, Ecks and Short held them tightly stretched a net. Karp and six others plunged down. Their weight tore the improvised net from the policemen's hands, but they were saved from fatal injuries.

Other occupants were able to wait until firemen could remove them from the ice-coated fire escapes.

COUNCIL WORK TOLD TO WORLD IN A MAGAZINE

Auckland, New Zealand, Lives Up to Its Motto, "Advance."

WOMAN COUNCILLOR.

Mayor Turner Ponders Over Mighty Schemes Outlined and Already Achieved.

The City Council of Auckland, New Zealand, does not believe in hiding its light under a bushel. It comes right out in print in its own private magazine and tells the citizens all about projects now under way and others which it has planned. And then it turns around and sends Mayor J. J. Turner a copy of the magazine so that he can wonder whether Peterboro needs a museum ($900,000); a housing scheme for working men ($200,000); more city employees (Auckland has 2,500 at $3,000,000 a year); a bigger tramway service (Auckland has 57 miles of track, 184 cars, 10 motor 'busses, and a weekly pay-roll of $31,000); more paving (Auckland will put down 75,105 yards of concrete this year); a new traffic bridge (Auckland is building one 580 feet long at a cost of $175,000), or a zoo (Auckland's started two years ago with 20 animals and has now over 360 with an annual revenue of $70,000). In addition to the street paving already authorized, it is proposed that $3,300,000 be spent in paving 7 miles of street in concrete and 56 miles of secondary streets in less durable material, and the citizens of Auckland will vote on the by-law early this year.

About Auckland.

Auckland was founded in 1840, fifteen years after the settlement of Peterboro. The motto on its official seal is "Advance." With a population at present of 129,000, it has a City Council of 21 members besides the Mayor, Sir James H. Gunson, C.M.G., C.B.E. One lady holds a position as councillor. There are also sixteen heads of departments, ranging from City Engineer to City Organist.

The spirit of the city is summed up in a statement in the "Municipal Record": "Twenty-five years hence may it be said that the citizens of 1924 were wise in their day and generation in that they planned for the future."

A gigantic water supply scheme has just been completed, impounding 820,000,000 gallons of water for city consumption, and a further scheme to impound another 500,000,000 gallons at a cost of $1,000,000 is under way.

Must Have Children.

The housing scheme of the City Council has already resulted in the erection of 65 houses as the first part in a programme of hundreds. Purchase is effected by the deposit of $150, and the balance of payment is spread over a period of 36½ years at the rate of about $7 a week, which pays principal, interest, insurance and taxes. The houses are bungalow style, one type having living-room, kitchen, three bedrooms, bathroom, laundry and a wide central hall. Only men with families are considered in allotting these houses to the applicants, who far outnumber the houses, and in no single instance has a house been alloted to anyone with fewer than two children.

This magazine, which is distributed free, is beautifully printed and illustrated, and contains 20 pages of purely municipal information, entertainingly written. There are 29 reproductions of photographs of civic works completed or in progress.

NEW CHAPTER BEGINS IN BRITISH LAND LAW

Birkenhead Act Reforming Tenure and Succession Is Effective To-morrow.

LONDON, January 5. — The land law of England entered upon a new, and, what many claim to be, an even more confusing chapter on January 1, 1925, when the Birkenhead act of 1922 became operative.

Lord Birkenhead's act is one of the longest statutes that has ever passed through Parliament, and the lawyers say that its full meaning will not be clear for at least 100 years.

The chief aims of the act are three. To destroy the unnecessary legal differences between land and movable goods; to make dealings with land simpler and safer, and to make all land available for sale or disposal at any time. Whether it will succeed in these aims is still doubtful for no English statute dealing with the law of land has ever brought the exact results contemplated by its sponsors.

In theory England is a thoroughly socialistic state, the crown alone being the "owner" of land. In fact individuals are owners, although the holders of fee-simple of freehold estate the equivalent of American full ownership, often pay a yearly rental from a peppercorn to gilt spurs, or a white rooster at Christmas. Below freeholders rank a vast body of copy holders whose more limited ownership does not entitle them to dig large holes or make long leases without the customary tribute to the lord of the manor.

The reforming statute worked out by a committee of barristers, and adopted by Lord Birkenhead, will have the following effects: Abolish copyhold and customary tenures; abolish estates tail in law, while retaining them along with settlements in equity, abolish primogeniture and village customs of descent; keep "equities off the title;" abolish tenancy in common; make real personal property devolve according to the same rules.

One of the greatest evils of English land law, the perpetual rent charge, forever to be paid out of a given piece of land, is untouched by the new law. Its provisions do not deal with the evil of long leases or with difficulty of tracing titles, and it offers no solution to the problem of restrictive covenants and 'servitudes.'

WAR WIDOWS REMARRY.

36 Per Cent of Britain's Help Reduce Pensions Outlay.

LONDON, Jan. 5.— Hits from Cupid's arrows have reduced the number of Britain's war widows by 36 per cent. and the annual expenses of the Ministry of Pensions for keeping these dependents by £8,000,000, the latest departmental report reveals.

The Government's pension list of widows and their children is smaller than it has been since 1917, although there are 2,215,000 soldiers' dependents still calling John their provider. In this number are 800,000 children, but these are rapidly being reduced as they grow up past the limit for government aid.

The widows, however, are showing less alacrity in scratching their names from the list as they grow older. During the next decade the number of marriages among them will decrease, although the deaths will slightly increase.

The Pensions Ministry estimates that it will be forty-six years before the pensions slate of the World War is wiped almost clean.

LAKEFIELD NEWS

LAKEFIELD, Jan. 5.—The annual holiday dance of the Lakefield Volunteer Fire Brigade was held on Tuesday evening and was a very pleasant affair. The holiday dances are a feature of the holiday time when the village is full of young people, home for the vacation or visiting in the village. This annual Christmas dance is in the nature of a re-union and suggests a miniature old home celebration.

On New Year's Eve at 11.30 there was a service in St. John's Church consisting of Holy Communion with a short address. At midnight the bell rang the old year out and the new year in, after which between thirty and forty communicated.

The annual Christmas party of the A.Y.P.A. was held on Monday evening and was a very jolly affairs. In spite of numerous counter attractions there were about twenty-five present. The evening, which was entirely a social, was spent in games which included the popular "hay makers". At nine forty-five the Christmas tree was stripped of its numerous parcels and much merriment prevailed as the gifts, inexpensive in money value, provided fun in abundance. The committee served generous refreshments after which the gathering dispersed after adding one more to the list of delightful Christmas socials.

Miss Tanner is spending a week visiting friends in Agincourt and Toronto.

Miss Veronica Johnston of Wellington and is spending the vacation with her parents, Capt. and Mrs. James Johnston.

Mr. Gordon Northey of Toronto, is visiting his family in the village.

IF RHEUMATIC EAT NO SWEETS

Says Glass of Salts Help To Overcome Rheumatism Acid.

Rheumatism is easier to avoid than to cure, states a well-known authority. We are advised to dress warmly, keep the feet dry, avoid exposure, and above all, drink plenty of good water and avoid eating sweets of all kind.

Rheumatism is caused by body waste and acids resulting from food fermentation. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this poison from the blood and cast it out in the urine; the pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly cold weather the skin pores are closed, thus forcing the kidneys to do double work; they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this waste and acids, which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles, causing stiffness, soreness and pain, called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is helpful to neutralize acidity, remove waste matter, also to stimulate the kidneys, thus often ridding the blood of rheumatic poison.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism.

"I'LL DO THE BEST I CAN."

To the Examiner the election card of a candidate for municipal honours in a neighboring township, as published in this paper the other day, appears to be the very acme of honesty and genuineness.

His appeal is brief and his pledge equally short. "Give me your support and I'll do the best I can."

After all, what man can truthfully promise more than his best, and yet how many candidates there are who pledge themselves to all kinds of planks, many of which could never be carried out, and most of which the aspirant proceeds to forget as soon as election day has passed.

We find them at every election, men who talk, with the vagueness and ambiguity of a Cabinet Minister discussing the League of Nations, about the sweeping reforms that will follow their advent into office.

There is no limit to what they are willing to promise—and usually the performance makes a sorry showing when compared with the prospectus.

All things considered, a candidate who is conscientious enough to confine his campaign pledges to the simple statement, "I'll do the best I can," should receive much consideration from the electors he is seeking to serve.

He is much more likely to assay higher under the acid test of public service than the other fellow who proffers many words and says nothing.

FOR HOCKEY "FANS."

With the Peterborough Hockey Club represented in the senior series of the O. H. A. for the first time in many years, it is to be hoped that the attitude of the people who patronize the games will be in keeping with the new status of the club.

In other words, there should be less of the small town partisanship and more appreciation of clever playing, no matter by whom it may be done.

By that we do not mean that there should not be enthusiastic support of the home team. By all means cheer for the "Petes" as lustily as ever, but let there be not so much verbal abuse of the visitors or of the referee as in the past.

The Peterborough team has played five games in Toronto this season, and on every visit has been given the best of treatment at the hands of the Queen City fans.

Even when the local team was playing against Toronto teams, Parkdale and Aura Lee, the Arena crowds applauded all Peterborough's good plays, and the players have never been the target for the abuse that was directed at them in smaller centres in other seasons.

Peterborough hockey crowds have never been particularly violent in their treatment of visitors, but this year with the Peterborough team prime favourites in Toronto and duly honoured for their fine showing at the Arena, there is more than the usual reason for regarding outside players as sportsmen and gentlemen, as the Peterborough team has found them to be and for treating them as such.

Cheer for Peterborough, of course—but let it go at that. Leave the practice of abusing visiting teams to such places as Belleville, where it seems to be regarded as a necessary factor in baseball and hockey.

THE PUBLIC CAN HELP.

Now that the municipal elections are over and the various bodies are beginning to look ahead of the year's activities is a splendid time for the citizens of Peterborough generally to resolve to assist the civic organizations in providing an efficient administration functioning on a basis of genuine economy.

Perhaps the best way the majority of people can help is by being careful about urging the civic bodies to spend money.

It is a strange trait of human nature that people who complain most bitterly about expenditures in general are often among the most anxious that public funds should be used to bonus this or that organization in which they may happen to be interested.

There are many worthy local organizations that are dependent to some extent at least upon the aid they receive in the way of municipal grants, and it would not be advisable or even good business to eliminate such assistance completely.

It would be well for all such bodies, however, to go over their budgets carefully with a view to pruning the amount they will ask from the City Council down to the minimum.

They should go on the principle of how much they can get along with, rather than how much they can get.

If this is done by the organizations in question, and the public generally resolves not to support any demand for public expenditure that does not appear to be urgently needed, the city fathers will have a much better chance of furnishing that economical government that so many citizens are urging as vital to the city's welfare.

WHERE DO THEY COME FROM?

Epidemics of hiccoughs have been travelling round the country. It seems to be a wandering ailment that stays only a few days or weeks in a community, then moves on. A victim "hics" for 24 to 72 hours, and abruptly recovers. Annoying but relatively harmless—just one of those nasty little nuisances that are forever bothering people.

What started the hiccough epidemics? Doctors cannot answer. Some students of psychology and mental peculiarities assert that it is all a matter of imitativeness or suggestion. Their theory is that a few people have hiccoughs and others unconsciously copy them.

Last winter, colds "ran to" bronchitis. This year the tendency is for colds to cling to the head. Here we have more nasty little epidemics. A definite type of cold goes the rounds. For instance, the head cold accompanied by an earache.

Medical specialists observe that each of these epidemics has definite characteristics of its own. It indicates that what we call a "cold" covers thousands of strange ailments.

Each year, as cities become more congested and the air more poisoned by auto exhaust, we have more and more epidemics of colds and flu.

As fast as the medical profession makes progress in curbing a disease like, for instance, typhoid or diabetes, nature sends new destroyers—new ailments to attack us.

Lately her destroyers have been re-enforced by widespread nervous disorders and multitudes of peculiar "flus" and colds.

Nature's system is to keep us so that she can strike us down to make room for oncoming generations. That's why new maladies develop as fast as the medical profession gets old one under control. And it is the reason why man will never find any elixir to enable him to live to an extremely old age. By right living we might survive 150 years, but somewhere is a natural deadline to prevent the earth becoming overcrowded.

It is a natural law. You see it at work everywhere—constant building up is balanced or offset by constant disintegration.

Orange and lemon trees, for instance, have been aided a lot by science. Now they have a disease called chlorosis, which among other things causes fruit to stop growing. The scientists are fighting back by injecting medicine into the "sick" trees.

Or take the animal kingdom. "Chicken flu" has been going the rounds—so severely that a fourth of the chickens delivered to New York died upon arrival. To protect itself, New York placed an embargo against shipments of chickens from eight States that supply it with nine-tenths of its live poultry. So goes the eternal program of destruction.

THE AUTO NOT A CALAMITY.

Another "authority" has levelled his pen at the automobile as being the cause of all the economic trouble in United States and Canada, says the London Advertiser. He says motor cars cost United States $8,000,000,000 per year, exclusive of taxes and interest. Depreciation he places at $1,800,900,000 per year.

If this estimate were correct and its deductions also right, surely the continent is spinning toward the scrap heap, but it is not correct because it tells only half the story.

The history of United States or Canada is the story of transportation. If we were still using the ox-cart there would be no Canadian West; there would be a very meagre and primitive east.

The railway train put the ox-cart out of commission as a means of transportation. The electric line for short travel is having a similar battle with the automobile and the truck, and with the further extension of permanent roads the electric line is going to find the struggle harder than ever.

We have not much patience with the economists who are always sorting the general public over and piling them up in two classes—those who can afford to buy automobiles and those who cannot. We know quite well that there are houses mortgaged in order to buy cars and there are real sacrifices often made to complete payments, but if the purchasers get their money's worth in the way of enjoyment, if they can travel to new districts, see new places and find satisfaction in so doing, who is going to say that their investment has not been a wise one?

The automobile provides a flexible means of transportation that could not be secured in any other way by people living in the country. A glance over the London market on any regular market day will convince any skeptic on that point. It has saved whole years of time that can be profitably used for other purposes. It has enabled families to go together on trips and holidays that otherwise would have been out of the question.

The industry provides a great deal of steady employment not only in the factories, but in the garages and supply stations all over the country.

The automobile is here to stay, and economists cannot stop it.

THE RIDDLE OF WHY WE LIVE.

Clarence Darrow, the lawyer, says: "There is neither purpose in existence nor a goal in living. If we knew where we were going, we could pick out the road. But so far as science, philosophy or history can throw any light on the subject, we are not going anywhere and there's no purpose."

Darrow is wrong.

There is a purpose behind this journey we call life, though it may not be revealed to us this side of the grave.

Life is a spiritual gymnasium.

Pain, troubles, burdens, disappointments, heartaches—all these are to the character or soul the same as the punching bag and Indian clubs are to the athlete.

Life is a training for a future existence.

Some even believe that life is a prison in which we are punished for sins of a former life.

Darrow continues: "You can make nothing else of a man but man. Selfish, mean, aggressive, tyrannical, prejudiced: that's what man is, and a lot more. It is absolutely hopeless to change men; I don't care how much environment you give him. Heredity and not environment shapes the human race."

This may be true of some men, but not of all men. Nor is it true of man collectively, man as an institution in creation.

Those who know Darrow personally know that he is neither selfish, mean, nor tyrannical. He is aggressive; nature has armed him with this quality by reason of the work he was destined to do.

Prejudiced? Apparently. And who is not? Yet prejudice, whether of small degree or great, cannot be held against the character of the individual. For prejudice is just another name for ignorance. And you cannot blame people for what they do not know.

Darrow is a deep thinker. But his reasoning is shallow when he asserts that "Heredity and not environment shapes the human race." If heredity alone shaped humanity, there would be no evolution, no change—for all generations would be alike, with each new generation unable to advance beyond its inheritance.

We are less influenced by heredity than by the gaps in heredity—the evils that gradually die out. Torture, for instance.

Human nature does change, though slowly. The average of humanity becomes better, and this is apparent to any one who does not try to make isolated exceptions the rule. An intangible spiritual leadership is guiding us through the ages. Compared with it, heredity and environment are minor factors in the evolution of man's nature.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Throughout Ontario the same story is told of a small vote at the municipal elections, in spite of a general attempt by the newspapers to have their communities make a better showing. It is difficult to suggest a remedy for this deplorable condition of affairs.

A THOUGHT.

Nature forever puts a premium on reality. What is done for effect is seen to be done for effect; what is done for love, is felt to be done for love.

GERMAN RAILWAYS THRIVE.

Now Organized Under Dawes Plan With 300,000 Fewer Employes.

BERLIN, Jan. 5. — (Associated Press).—In most respects the German railway system is beck to prewar standards, Rudolph Oeser, Director General of the system, declared to the correspondents. This is ttrue despitet the fact that 300,000 railway employes were dismissed when the stabilization process began. The rolling stock is adequate to all needs, he said, although the passenger coaches and trackage are not quite up to the pre-war mark.

The railways, he pointed out, contributted 600,000,000 marks annually to reparations, besides 200,000,000 marks to the Federal Treasury, which sum also is devoteid to excluively to reparations.

Herr Oeser assertetd that the German railways were the largest single undertaking in the world, employing nearly 80,000 men and administering 33,000 miles of roads. The railways, he commented, now have been taken out of politics and are run on business principles a san undertaking belonging to the nation but operated as a private corporation under the Dawes plan.

COUNSEL ON CLOTHES.

(By Cynthia Grey)

Dress to please your husband!

Remember that you wore a pink mull the night he proposed, and always keep a pink mull in your clothes-closet.

Bear in mind that he hates loud things, and stick to high necks, long skirts, and quiet colors.

Study his favorite movie star, and wear your hair the way she wears hers.

But don't cherish the childish hope that these things will make him notice you.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

Chicago, Jan. 3.—Broad buying power developed in the wheat market today, and prices scored a brisk upturn, but then heavy profit-taking sales wiped out much of the gain. New export business, said to total 1,000,000 bushels, formed the chief source of encouragement to buyers. The wheat market closed easy, 3-4 to 1 1-4 cents net higher, May 1.77 1-4 to 1.77 3-8 and July 1.53 1-8 to 1.53 1-4, with corn 3-4 to 1 1-2 cents down, oats 1-4 to 3-4 cent off, and provisions varying from unchanged figures to 52 cents decline.

STERLING RATES.

MONTREAL, Jan. 4. — Sterling exchange rates were quoted here Saturday as follows:

Sterling demand $4.76 1-2 sterling cables $4.77 1-4.

MONTREAL GRAIN.

Montreal, Jan. 4.—There was no export business reported by Canadian exporters on Saturday, but there was some further demand from Ontario millers for Manitoba No. 4 wheat, and sales were made at 9 cents per bushel under the Winnipeg May option, c.i.f. bay ports. The total sales reported in this direction Friday and Saturday amounted to 100,000 bushels.

There was no improvement in the local and country demand for oats in the domestic market, and business was quiet but prices were unchanged. Ontario No. 2 white being quoted at 65 cents, No. 3 white at 63 cents, and No. 4 grade at 61 cents per bushel, ex-store.

Little business was transacteid in spring wheat, but the undertone was firm. The market for winter wheat flour was without any new feature to note.

In spite of a small turnover in the butter market, prices were well maintained. The demand for cheese from English importers was quiet but prices were unchanged.

Owing to the general severe cold and stormy weather that has prevailed of late in the prairie provinces and eastern sections of the country the production of fresh eggs has been much smaller than was anticipated by the trade and in consequence of which a stronger feeling developed in the local market for fresh extras and the prices were advanced 5 cents per dozen.

Gambling Among Women In England Increasing

LONDON, Jan. 5 — "Pikeman's pot" styles in women's hats, designed after the steel helmets of the 17th century pikemen, represented in the collection of arms and armor of the Tower of London, are the latest sensation in fashionable London millinery.

For some time, milliners have hunted for designs that would, by their novelty of appeal, lure women away from the popular cloche fashion. Earlier in the season they thought that a successful rival had been found in the square-crowned hat, but this was voted down by fastidious clients.

Now the 17th century helmet is being used as a model for the mid-winter hat. The feather-weight felt of the season—steel grey is the favorite color choice for realistic effect—is blocked to the 17th century outline and a tuft of feathers gives the feminine touch.

Latest Hat Design Is 300 Years Old

LONDON, Jan. 5 — Betting and gambling are increasing enormously among the women of England and the "spirit of gambling seems to be in the very blood of our people," J. C. Meggitt, of Barry, declared at a recent conference here on "Sweepstakes, Betting and Gambling," promoted by the Young People's Department of the Congregational Union of England and Wales.

Mr. Meggitt said the newspapers are largely responsible for the growth of gambling because they foster it as a commercial proposition to increase their sales. Supporting this contention, another speaker said he had found in ten weekly papers he had examined at random 21 gambling competitions, offering nearly $100,000 in prizes.

Clifford Brown Was Out Hunting When Accident Occurred—Campbellford News.

CAMPBELLFORD, January 5. — Clifford Brown, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Brown of Stanwood, in Seymour East, was fatally shot in an accident on Saturday morning.

Three young men, Clifford Brown, Allan Simpson and Earl Brunton were out in the woods on Garnett Redden's farm, hunting for a bear, which has been in the vicinity for the past week. They were walking along, one behind other, when young Simpson fell, and in getting up his gun discharged, shooting Clifford Brown. Two doctors from Campbellford were sent for, and they advised that he be rushed to the Peterboro hospital. He was taken to Havelock but was too late for the afternoon train, and was taken to the hospital at Havelock, but died while there, about half past seven.

He was in his 22nd year, and was born on the homestead where he lived all his life, except one year which he spent in the west. Besides his parents there are two brothers and four sisters, two of whom are married, Mrs. James Storie of Campbellford and Mrs. Thomas Sanders, who with the others are living at home.

The funeral will be held on Wednesday afternoon, service at 1 o'clock, in Stanwood Methodist church. He will be buried under the auspices of the Orange Order. The L.O.L. Loucks, (just buried last Thursday), and Mr. Ira Loucks another brother, all dying within a year. Then about a year ago, her husband, Mr. D. H. Brown who is a blacksmith at Stanwood, had an accident with his eye and was in the hospital in Peterboro for some weeks.

In 1867, they came over to Canada and lived at Petherick's Corners for seven or eight years. They then moved to the farm on which she died and lived with her family there. The last three years she has been in poor health and her daughter, Mrs. Ben Redden has faithfully cared for her.

Officers Elected by the Masons—Social Events in Town.

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 5.—The Masons had a very interesting and largely attended meeting. The newly elected officers were installed by E. C. Bonnycastle and Dr. O. C. Watson. FIRE AT HASTINGS.

Barn on Property of William Sharpe Destroyed—Horses and Cattle Lost.

HASTINGS, Jan. 5.—A fire which means a serious loss to the owner of the destroyed property, occurred on Sunday evening about 7 o'clock.

Mr. William Sharpe, who resides at the extreme north section of the village, was doing up his evening chores at his barn. He was watering the stock and left the lantern hanging up over the entrance at the west, while he went for another pail of water. When he arrived at the barn he found it in flames, and owing to a strong west wind it was soon spread so that further prevention was impossible. The fire alarm was rung, and many willing hands were present to assist in any way possible. Fire extinguishers were brought but on account of the headway made by the blaze, they were of little use. Two horses and three cows were lost in the fire, along with other vehicles, and hay and grain.

Very little insurance was carried on the property.

BANK CLERKS BECOME BEGGARS

VIENNA, Jan. 5. — (Associated Press.)—The hosts of cripples who for years after the war molested the frequenters of Vienna cafes and restaurants for alms have of late diminished in number. The majority of them contracted consumption from exposure and have died.

The places, however, of these mendicants have been taken by hundreds from among the thousands of bank clerks who lost their jobs as a result of the failures of many little banks and the reduction of the staffs of the remainder.

The number of banks in Vienna began to increase with the issue of each successive loan during the World War and broke all records (one bank to every 1,000 inhabitants) for a country with only 6,500,000 population when the period of inflation was at its height. At this time many hundreds of students at colleges and universities were talked-over into abandoning their studies and accepting handsomely paid situations in the dozens of banks cropping up every week.

The financial slump of the past summer deprived these youths of their positions with the result that they are now to be met in every possible and impossible nook and corner seeking relief. Some are learning to become chauffeurs or are conductors on street cars, while a great many spend the day hawking note-books, pencils, calendars and even matches in cafes and restaurants. All of them are men of higher eductaion but this avails them naught. Fou thousand of them were let out during the last four months, and many more are to be discharged with the beginning of 1925.

The government has been petitioned to contribute funds towards the erection of sheds wherein these men may find shelter when rendered homeless. What makes their lot in Austria most distressing is that there is not the ghost of a chance for any of them to get new berths in banks. Business is at a standstill. Then the Austrian laws forbid any man to work at any trade to which he has not been apprenticed. This makes it impossible for these unfortunates to do anything but hawk goods or sweep the streets. Bnt both of these occupations likewise are crammed full.

WEEK-ENDS.

A distinetinguished Englishman visits America. He was here years ago. He says the change he most notices is that Americans are learning to play. This is especially evidenced by "Saturday afternoons off" and the growing custom of week-end vacations.

We are begining to learn that work is not the supreme goal of life. It is merely a means to an end. The goal should be to enjoy life, see the world and acquire knowledge. These can come in the evening of life if a man has worked hard and succeeded in earlier years.

To Executives and Salesmen

"How I sell busy executives"

A remarkably successful salesman says:—"Never call on a prospect you don't know without first calling him on the telephone to make an appointment." Here are his three reasons:—

1. "To secure an appointment, I must know something about the man, and plan what I am going to say to him. I talk to him about his business, not about my own.
2. "Having the lead in the conversation, I can ask questions to which he will answer 'Yes'. They are of such a nature that he invites me to call—the best possible introduction.
3. "With an interview arranged for, I then carefully study my proposition, and how I intend to present it. 99% of my sales are made in this way."

Planning the conversation before lifting the receiver off the hook is the essence of success in making sales by telephone. It makes better, more productive salesmen. Selling by telephone is an art capable of unlimited development.

Voice Of The People

To the Editor of The Examiner.—

Sir.—A letter in The Examiner taken from The Toronto Globe, and many others which have appeared in the press lately, raise the question of how it is possible for the "Presbyterian Church in Canada" to unite with other churches "without loss of its identity." Evidently this matter occasioned no difficulty in the minds of our parliamentarians, for in the "Act incorporating the United Church of Canada," the following words are employed: "Whereas the Presbyterian Church in Canada, the Methodist Church and the Congregational Churches of Canada having the right to unite with one another without loss of identity." I wonder if the members of Parliament, including those who fought so strongly against the passage of the Church Union Bill, allowed their minds to go wool gathering when those words were inserted in the Act? If so a similar charge can be brought against the British Parliament for they use identical language in their recent legislation in reference to the proposed Union of the Established and United Free Churches.

There seems to be a good deal of haziness in the minds of those who write as to what is meant when Unionists use the phrase "without loss of identity." A simple illustration will throw light on the matter. Let us suppose there are three concerns engaged in the drug business in Peterboro', known and incorporated under the names: Parke, Davies Company, Mulford Company, and Wampole Company. These three companies after prolonged negotiations and repeated votes of their shareholders decide to form a company known as "The United Drug Company of Peterboro', and apply through their accredited representatives to Parliament for an act of incorporation, which is duly granted. Let us suppose the action of the first named Parke, Davies Company was not unanimous. There were twenty shareholders in the company, five or six of whom refused to vote in favor of going into the United Company and declared their intention to withdraw. The majority were determined to proceed, however, deeming the union with the other drug companies a desirable one. In effect we can imagine them saying to the minority: "We are sorry you cannot see eye to eye with us. We have arranged that you shall have your just share of the assets of the business of Parke, Davies Company. You are even at liberty to start a new drug business here, to employ as many of the old clerks as will work for you, one thing we insist upon, however, and that is that you cannot do business under the name of Parke, Davies Company, and, of course, as honourable men you would not so desire. The business known as Parke, Davies Company is uniting without loss of identity, with two other drug companies, which unitedly will carry on as "The United Drug Company of Peterboro." When our patrons wish to know where the business entity known as Parke, Davies Company are doing business we wish them to know that without loss of identity we united with two other drug companies and are carrying on in the same building, manufacturing the same drugs, prepared to serve the same customers and give them even a better service than before." We imagine the United Drug Company printing its letter heads as follows:

The United Drug Company of Peterborough
(Incorporating)
The Parke, Davies Co., the Mulford Co., and the Wampole Co.)

The application of the above illustration may be made thus: Three religious bodies known as "The Presbyterian Church in Canada, the Methodist Church and the Congregational Churches of Canada, after prolonged negotiations, decided to unite and form one church to be known as the "United Church of Canada." Two votes of the members of the "Presbyterian Church in Canada" were taken as to the desirability of such a union. By large majorities on both occasions they voted in favor of it. The legislative bodies which give effect to the will of the people, the Presbyteries, the Synods, the General Assemblies, composed of an equal number of laymen and ministers, also declared repeatedly by overwhelming majorities that union was desirable. They proceeded to give effect to their belief and applied to Parliament for enabling legislation. When they approached Parliament they did so in the name of the "Presbyterian Church of Canada," and as its accredited representatives to whom authority for such action had been given by the people after two votes on the matter. They did not go as individuals, or as a part of the entity known as "The Presbyterian Church in Canada" and which came into existence as such in the Union of 1875, but in the name of "The Presbyterian Church in Canada." Their action, therefore, was the action of the church as such. Hence the words of the Act: "The Presbyterian Church in Canada . . . having the right to unite without loss of identity."

The Assembly as well as the Parliament, in thus wording the Act declare the right of the Assembly to act in its corporate capacity and in the name of "The Presbyterian Church in Canada." They may form out the standing of the non-concurring minority. They cease to be members of "The Presbyterian Church in Canada." They may form themselves into a new religious body, they may use the word Presbyterian, they may call themselves "The Canada Presbyterian Church," or some other such name, but they are no longer members of the religious corporation known as "The Presbyterian Church in Canada." That religious body came into existence in 1875 and as a separate entity passes out of existence June 10th, 1925, as a separate entity but not as an entity in Union with two other churches.

What Unionists insist upon, and they are supported by Parliament in their contention, is, that when people ask: Where is the "Presbyterian Church in Canada?" they can reply, it is found in "The United Church of Canada." The vast majority of its congregations occupy the same sites, are doing business for God in the same way, using the same forms of worship, being served by the same ministers, and using such signs and names in their announcements and letter heads as to indicate to all and sundry that the "Presbyterian Church in Canada" is now carrying on the Master's work as an entity in Union with two other religious bodies, the three in Union being incorporated under the name of "The United Church of Canada."

SHE LOVED TOM MIX BEFORE SHE MET HIM

Dashing Film Hero Leaped Through Screen to Lasso Leading Woman, and Wife—Admired Him First in His Movie Triumphs.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 2.—Love at first sight is usually considered the maximum in romanticism. And proud is the wife who can say truthfully, "I loved him the first time I saw him."

But Mrs. Tom Mix can beat this, hands down. "I loved him long before I ever knew him," she says in telling of her romance.

Tom Mix, popular film celebrity and internationally noted for his daring cowboy stunts and picturizations, brought vicarious glamor to one girl in the "effete east" years before he had reached his present eminence of popularity.

She also was a film worker, and after her day of working in "society pictures" her biggest delight was to sit in the darkness of those day picture places watching the dashing, daring Tom Mix.

"He was my hero from the first time I ever saw him on the screen," says Mrs. Mix.

"The big west, so inspiring, so mystically alluring to a girl living in the narrow, crowded streets of a big eastern town. And Tom, living in this atmosphere, triumphing there—I couldn't help but love him. He was my knight, without fear and without reproach."

So she dreamed, but with little hope of her dreams coming true.

Then her mother, also an actress, came west to take a position as Mix's leading lady.

"Thrilled I was almost overcome," Mrs. Mix describes her feelings. That was 11 years ago and the first Christmas day in the new California home, Mix first met his future wife.

Tom, the dashing hero of the screen, was no less ardent "off stage," and the first meeting was soon followed by a double engagement, the girl pledging to become his leading lady in the films, and also in domestic life.

So Tom saved her from bad men and runaway horses, from threatened riots and other perils, through some 20 pictures, with a very, very real love "fadeout" in each as his reward for valor.

The first settled in a little bungalow, bought by him for $4,000.

"And because I had been trained for the stage instead of domesticity, Tom was the cook," says Mrs. Mix "And my, he can make the most wonderful stews in the world, and lots of other things that seem marvelous to me."

Development of motion pictures brought fame to Tom and with it came a fine home, profusely decorated with trophies of his life—Navajo blankets, saddles of finest make and decoration, lariats, revolvers, rifles, sombreros and such like—cars, they now own nine— jewels and other things which much money brings.

Tom used to like those funny, pug-toed button shoes, but now he wears the latest in "kicks."

"My early life, spent among horses and the men who lived in the saddle, caused me to miss many of the big things in life," Mix says.

"But she brought them to me and we have found much happiness in continuing the romance which brought us together."

DAMAGE TO PLANTS BY COLD IS DISCOUNTED

Shrubs and Perennials in Good Condition to Meet Rigors.

What damage the record-breaking temperatures which have been experienced in December may have done to hardy plants and shrubs will not be known until spring, but gardeners may be comforted to know that everything was better prepared to stand severe weather than last year.

Hardwood plants were thoroughly ripened by the dry weather of the autumn. Growth was stopped early and the wood was hardened, while a year ago a mild, wet autumn, during which growth continued almost up to Christmas, was followed by a subzero spell which wrought much damage.

Snow Good for Perennials.

Perennials are much benefited by the blanket of snow which covers the ground in most of our suburbs, and they have to fear an unseasonable thaw more than continued cold.

One source of damage likely to be aggravated by the present weather is girdling of young trees and shrubs by rabbits and mice. When snow and ice cover up other food sources these animals will attack the tender bark of young trees and shrubs just above the snow and often eat a circle around the trunk. This severs communication between roots and top as the sap runs in the inner bark. A tree so treated will die unless it is saved by a difficult operation in bridge grafting.

All young trees and shrubs should be protected from girdling by a wrapping of heavy paper tied about the trunk for at least a foot above the ground. The animals will not eat through the paper.

Mulches Should Be Examined.

Wherever heavy mulches were placed over perennials before the ground was frozen hard, examination should be made for the presence of mice. Such mulches keep the ground soft and the rodents are very likely to make their nests there and feed on the plants. The remedy is to rake off the mulch and let the ground freeze, after which the mulch may be replaced as its purpose is not to prevent freezing but to prevent unseasonable thawing and consequent heaving.

FAILED.

The number of business failures has been low considering the dull times. So far this year, 1700 firms a month have gone to the wall. That looks like a lot but not when you recall that the total amount of business organizations is around two millions. A lot of the men with small profit businesses would be better off if they failed and had to get into something else. Being your own boss is not always what it is cracked up to be.

Cod Liver Oil Now in Tasteless Tablets

Greatest Flesh Builder

No more will weak, thin, unfortunate children cry in protest when the nasty, fishy-tasting, horrible-smelling cod liver oil is brought out.

Medical science progresses rapidly, and now you can get at your druggist's real, genuine cod liver oil in sugar-coated tablets that young and old can take with ease and pleasure.

Even the run-down and skinny grown-ups, who ought to take cod liver oil, because it really is the greatest vitamine food and builder of healthy flesh in the world, will feel extremely joyful when they read this welcome news.

Of course, doctors have been prescribing cod liver oil in tablets under another name for several years, but it is only of late that one can walk into a drug store and get a box of these flesh-producing tablets just as easy as a bottle of cough syrup.

Thin, run-down, anaemic men, women and children who need to grow strong and take on flesh are advised to get a box of McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets, and if you don't gain 5 pounds in 30 days just get your money back.

One woman gained fifteen pounds in five weeks, according to her own doctor—another ten pounds in three weeks. A very sickly child, aged nine, twelve pounds in seven months, and now plays with other children and has a good appetite.

Just ask for McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets. Warne Drug Co., McDermid & Jury, Jas. Lynch or any good druggist will tell you that they are wonderful flesh and health builders. Only 60 cents for 60 tablets, and don't forget that they are wonder workers for feeble old folks.

Be sure and get McCoy's, the original and genuine.

IDENTIFY DINOSAUR TRACKS.

Interior Department Will Protect Ancient Footprints in Arizona.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—Animal footprints on the Navajo Indian Reservation in Arizona, near the Grand Canyon National Park, had been identified as dinosaur tracks made about 10,000,000 years ago. The tracks, the Interior Department said, were among the first footprints of the Triassic age found in the Rocky Mountain area and were consequently of great scientific interest.

These tracks occur in a thin layer of rock about seven miles from Tuba City, reached from Grand Canyon over the Navahopi Road. It is the intention of the Interior Department to afford protection to these from vandalism.

The footprints measure sixteen inches in length, with a greatest spread of thirteen inches. The step or stride is shown to be fifty-three inches in length.

Identification and measurements were made by Dr. C. W. Gilmore of the Smithsonian Institution.

When Parliament Opens

Ceremony and Procedure of the Past are Adhered to. Confederation Parliament met in Anxious Times. Important Matters dealt with in the First Session of 1867.

Canada's Parliament will meet on Thursday, February 6. Some predict that this will be the last session before a general election. A few months will show them true or false prophets. The future does not always confirm the convictions of the present, and Parliament still has a considerable period of legal life. Election dates rest with governments, whose hands may be forced occasionally.

The opening ceremonies and the coming session will be held in a time when peace at home and abroad promises an indefinite reign. There are many pressing problems for the legislators. But complex as they are, they are not so grave as those which weighted the hearts of its members when the first Dominion Parliament met in November, 1867. What a story in contrasts and comparisons could be told if any of the Parliamentarians of those days could stand on Parliament Hill, Ottawa, and watch the opening ceremonies of the present. The actual formalities would not differ greatly. Canada's parliamentary procedure follows very closely that of the British Houses. Every detail of the program has a meaning if one had the time to trace it to its beginnings. In nearly every instance it has a relation to some concession granted or won in bygone centuries and bearing upon the independence and dignity of Parliament.

The King is represented, of course, by the Governor-General, Lord Byng, as every Canadian ought to know, being the present occupant of that position. He comes to the Parliament Buildings in state, with a dashing mounted military escort surrounding his carriage. A salute is fired by an artillery unit as he reaches Parliament Hill, a guard of honor presents arms while a band plays the National Anthem. Inside the buildings there is still more ceremony: reception by members of the government and House officials, and a leisurely procession in which there is much color of military uniform and official dress, to the gorgeous Senate Chamber. Here the Governor-General reads the speech from the Throne, as the King does in the House of Lords when he opens the British Parliament, members of the Commons having first been summoned to the Upper Chamber to hear it.

If a new speaker has been elected by the Commons the procedure differs a little. The Speaker informs His Excellency that the House has elected him, "and will humbly claim all their undoubted rights and privileges." On behalf of the Governor-General the Speaker of the Senate replies that "he freely confides in the duty and attachment of the House of Commons to His Majesty's person and government, and upon all occasions will recognize and allow their constitutional privileges." This formality is a reminder of the sanctity of the Commons violated in Britain for the last time by a monarch in the person of Charles I.

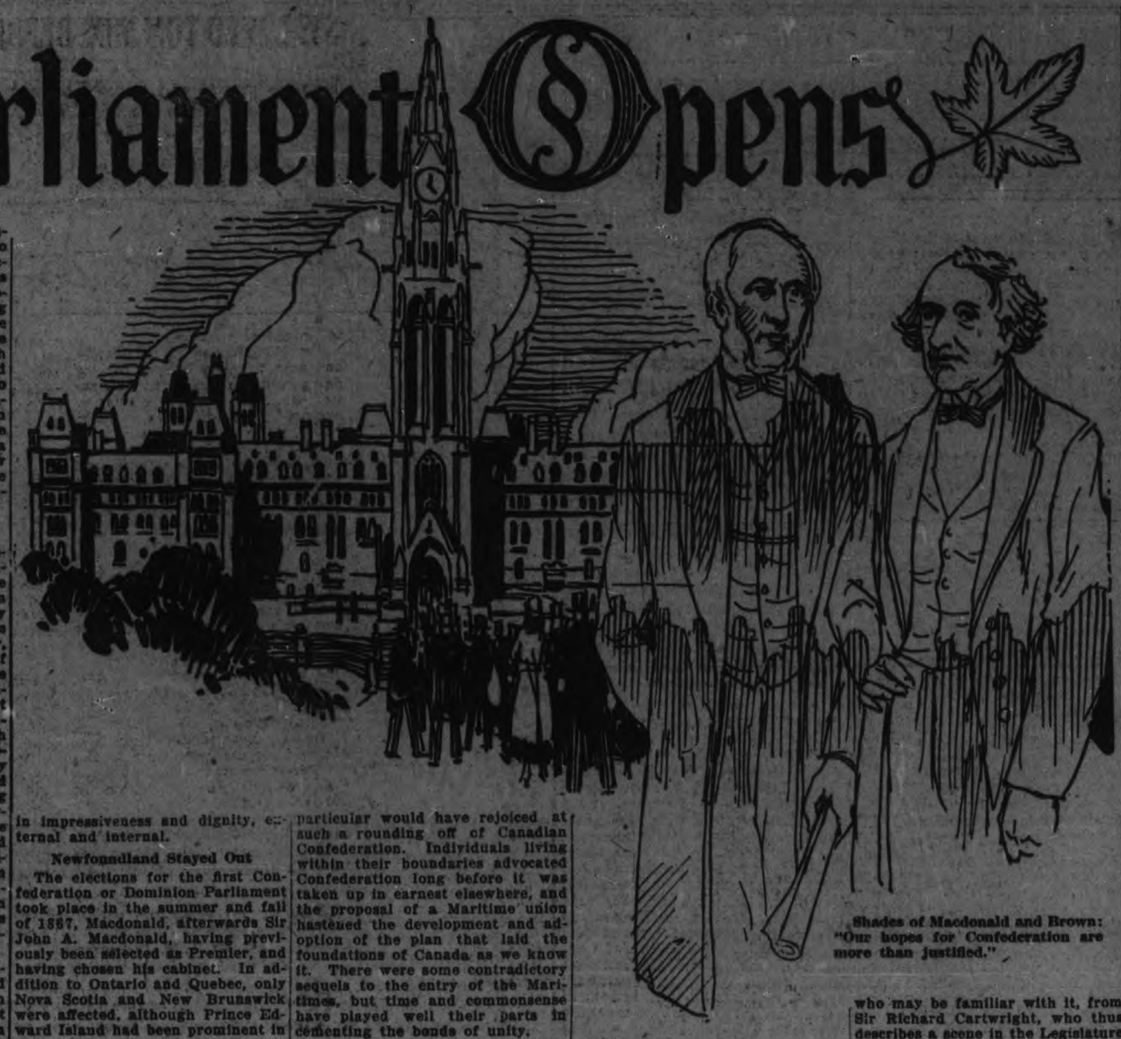
The very proclamation summoning Parliament to meet is based on the forms of the past. It summons Senators and members of the House of Commons to appear personally, "For the despatch of business, to treat, do, and act, and conclude upon those things which in our said Parliament of Canada, by the common council of our said Dominion, may by the favor of God be ordained."

All, or mostly all of this ceremonial is unnecessary say some who would reform Parliamentary practice and procedure. But Canada is not ready yet to forego this ceremonial, and may never be willing to absolutely abandon it. There are some traditions that have become part of the national life, though our knowledge as to their birth and development may be too hazy to give us any idea of their true meaning. For the basis of some of them we would have to turn again to the story of Runnymede and Magna Charta. There have been few changes of importance in procedure in the Dominion Houses, since Confederation.

The Parliament of '67

When the Parliament of 1867 assembled there was bitter feeling between Canada and Britain on the one hand, and the United States on the other. In the latter country the passions aroused by Britain's firm handling of the Trent affair, had not died out, and the threat of more Fenian raids, similar to those of '66, and with thousands of American civil war veterans to support them, was a menace to the Dominion whose charter, was the British North Act. This had been proclaimed on July 1, 1867, and many celebrations of the event were held throughout the country. Rejoicing over the linking together of hitherto separated colonies under the aegis of this Act were tempered by the obvious dangers of the moment. The optimism and faith in the future that had made Confederation possible, did not vanish in the face of these clouds, and burns as brightly in the peace time of today as then.

The last Legislature or Parliament of old Canada (Ontario and Quebec), held its closing session in the new Parliament Buildings at Ottawa, which were just finished in time to allow of that. This session opened on June 8, 1866, and was specially called to deal with the provincial constitutions under which Upper and Lower Canada—we would say Ontario and Quebec now—were to go their way as separated provinces in the new Confederation instead of as Canada. Thus the old preceeded the new in the use of historic buildings which served their purposes until fire destroyed them in February, 1916. The wonderful new buildings, now completed with the exception of the upper portion of the tower, take second place to none of their kind in impressiveness and dignity, external and internal.



Shades of Macdonald and Brown: "Our hopes for Confederation are more than justified."

Newfoundland Stayed Out

The elections for the first Confederation or Dominion Parliament took place in the summer and fall of 1867, Macdonald, afterwards Sir John A. Macdonald, having previously been selected as Premier, and having chosen his cabinet. In addition to Ontario and Quebec, only Nova Scotia and New Brunswick were affected, although Prince Edward Island had been prominent in the conferences looking to Confederation, and one of these gatherings was held at Charlottetown. Delegates from Newfoundland were also present on that occasion, and it seemed for a time as if that colony would come into the Confederation. In fact in 1869 provision in anticipation of such a step was made by the Dominion Parliament. But Newfoundland had already decided to retain its independence, and at a much later date reached a similar conclusion when it considered that its overtures to Canada had not been met in a generous enough spirit. The Maritime provinces in particular would have rejoiced at such a rounding off of Canadian Confederation. Individuals living within their boundaries advocated Confederation long before it was taken up in earnest elsewhere, and the proposal of a Maritime union hastened the development and adoption of the plan that laid the foundations of Canada as we know it. There were some contradictory sequels to the entry of the Maritimes, but time and commonsense have played well their parts in cementing the bonds of unity.

One characteristic of the first Confederation Parliament was that many of the men composing it had served in the legislative assemblies of the provinces or colonies as some of the provinces were known. That was an age of forensic and oratorical ability. It was also a period of extreme rigidity of political opinion and partisanship. The language of debate, no less than its mannerisms and delivery was often positively ferocious. To some of those elected to Parliament it was a blessed relief to escape from the narrowness of sectional fields to the broader arc of Dominion questions and politics. As we view it today there was far too much of partisan bitterness there too, certainly too much of it was allowed to affect private and social life.

That first Parliament consisted of 181 members of the Commons and 72 Senators, in comparison with 235 and 96 respectively in our time. It did not include Hon. George Brown, who had taken so prominent a part in making Confederation possible. He was defeated in South Ontario during the general elections, and did not again seek to enter Parliament. One can hardly refrain from quoting to readers who may be familiar with it, from Sir Richard Cartwright, who thus describes a scene in the Legislature of Canada, then sitting in Quebec. "In that memorable afternoon when Mr. Brown, not without emotion, made his statement to a hushed and expectant House, and declared that he was about to ally himself with Sir George Cartier and his friends, for the purpose of carrying out Confederation, I saw an excitable, elderly little French member rush across the floor, climb up on Mr. Brown, who, as you remember, was of a stature approaching the gigantic, fling his arms about his neck, and hang several seconds there suspended, to the visible consternation of Mr. Brown and to the infinite joy of all beholders, pit, box and gallery included."

Thus with all the bitterness that attended the debates of that time, there was occasions when the finer emotions swept the hearts of men, and they could not hide them.

A lesson in the development of self government is afforded in the contrast between the situation eighty odd years ago and that of today. The idea of any one of the Canadian colonies governing themselves freely through their elected representatives seems to have been very far from the minds of most of the Governors sent out from Britain. Their idea of exercising every power and prerogative held by the Crown was based on the old fallacy that otherwise the country would be lost to the British flag.

A few exceptions among the Governors saw clearly that the lighter the bonds, the more closely they would hold. That idea and ideal outlived everything in the political struggles that marked the long and trying pre-Confederation period. These struggles were not without actual violence, including instances of open rebellion by some who were too impatient. The history of that period is worth reading by any who would understand the Canada of today.

Important Legislation

Several questions of magnitude were dealt with in the very first session of the Confederation Parliament. Steps for the acquisition of Rupert's Land and the North-West Territory was one. There were prophetic minds then who foresaw what a tremendous asset the West would be to the Dominion. But how many had a thought of the great provinces that were to grow in it? Manitoba, Alberta, Saskatchewan, British Columbia, are strong links in the chain of Canadian provinces from ocean to ocean. But some of the fathers of Confederation had fears for a while that the penetration of anti-British elements from the United States, would make the retention and development of this great Empire impossible. Hence their eagerness to make it plain to all the world that Canada was in possession and would remain so. Legislation for the construction of the Intercolonial Railway, to connect the Eastern provinces with their sisters to the west, was another notable measure. Reduced postage rates and the establishment of a post office savings bank system were also legislated for, but a proposal to put the telegraph system under government control, as in Britain, was not accepted.

In the years that have passed since then Canadians have grown to a better understanding of how great a work the Fathers of Confederation accomplished. Their work can never be completed: it is for each generation to carry on, leaving to its successors a better, a greater and a nobler Dominion. Parliament alone cannot do this; the citizenhood of the country must share in the work and the responsibility.

CORRIGAN

by EDMUND SNELL

A single survey of the Englishman appeared to satisfy her.

"Not particularly. Perhaps you could help me just as well. If I stay up there much longer I think I shall go mad. I simply had to speak to someone. I've been watching your bungalow go up, plank by plank, wondering all the while who was going to occupy it. I thought at least it would be the manager."

He was close to her now and, strangely enough, the wilderness that surrounded him had taken on quite a different aspect.

"I'll do my very best," he stammered awkwardly. "Won't you come over and—er—look at the house. To tell you the truth, I designed it myself, and I'm no end conceited about it?"

"May I?"

"Of course."

She clambered through, disdaining assistance, and came to his side, flushed and smiling.

"It's awfully good of you to invite me over. I've been frightfully inquisitive ever since you took over the land. Arundill would be furious if he knew."

"Knew what?"

"Why, that I'd fraternized with the enemy. He hates you all—like poison."

Fellowes laughed aloud.

"Splendid! What on earth have we done to deserve this honour?"

"I'm not quite sure. You mustn't let that worry you. He's like it with almost everybody. He detests Jack cordially."

"Who's Jack?"

"My brother—Jack Vereker. I keep house for him. He was out here ages before Arundill and ought to have been made manager. It was a beastly shame. His contract's up in five months—and we're going to clear out."

Fellowes face dropped.

"Oh, don't do that," he said.

Her forehead wrinkled ever so slightly

"I'm afraid we must. Do show me over your house. There are four rooms, aren't there?"

"Five," corrected the assistant. "Two bedrooms, two sitting-rooms and a small place that serves as a combined cellar and office. Corrigan gave me a free hand, and I think it mighty sporting of him, considering that he has to foot the bill."

On the veranda Pamela paused.

"When I first came out, I met an awfully nice man in Jesselton. Jack couldn't get away and Martin looked after me splendidly. He had black water fever afterwards and died. We were both very sorry. He gave me a lot of useful tips."

"What were they?" demanded Fellowes sympathetically.

"One was 'Don't trust Arundill.'"

"Excellent!—and the others?"

"I couldn't possibly remember all of them, but I know he thought an awful lot of your chief. 'If ever you're in a hole—go to Corrigan.' That was the last thing he said to me when he put me on the train. Rather nice, don't you think?"

"That man knew what he was talking about. This is the veranda, you see. It runs all the way round and there are more steps at the back leading down to the kitchen quarters. I tried hard to be original, but I couldn't do better than keep the boys at a distance."

"I love the smell of new wood—and creosote. It is creosote, isn't it?"

"I believe so. Something of the sort, at anyrate. It rolled up labelled 'wood preservative.'"

They passed from one room to another, Pamela wildly enthusiastic—Fellowes sublimely content, until they came finally upon the cook boy in the act of preparing the table for the midday meal.

"You'll lunch with me, of course?"

The girl started.

"Oh, no! I'd like to immensely, but they're expecting me up there." She pointed through the open doorway to a roof of sago thatch just showing between the trees.

"I thought that was Arundill's place?"

"He lives right over on the far side—nearer the sea." She bit her lip, then looked straight into Fellowes' eyes. "He's a devil—that man! He wants me to marry him and I won't. Any self-respecting man would be satisfied with a definite refussal, but Arundill hangs round the house all the day and half the night. It's getting on my nerves. He's always finding some excuse to send my brother away—and it's horrible—alone!"

"Is your brother at home now?"

"No. He's over at Kudat waiting for a consignment of seed that probably only exists in Arundill's imagination."

"Then who's expecting you?"

"Oh, the servants. I ordered lunch for one—and it'll spoil."

"It won't." Fellowes assured her. "They won't let it do that. Now, all you've got to do is to settle yourself down in a long chair, let my boy mix you something particularly fizzy and cooling and tell me what's worrying you while lunch is preparing. You won't be putting me out in the least. We're used to coping with emergencies; besides, I was counting on Corrigan to stay—and he didn't."

She capitulated, sinking with a sigh of contentment into the chair the assistant pushed forward.

"I don't suppose I could make you realize how truly grateful I am to you for taking pity on me. I was feeling unutterably wretched when I saw you."

She leaned forward. "You must never let anybody know that I told you this—but Arundill's not playing straight. He was down with fever soon after he arrived and Jack managed until he was about again. There were all sorts of fishy-looking people rolling up at odd hours wanting to see Arundill on business, the sort of people Jack said, that no manager, acting in the interests of his company, could have dealings with. The accounts, too, seemed to be in a frightful muddle. Anyhow, there's something wrong somewhere. Jack knows it—And Arundill knows that he knows. I don't know if this sounds coherent. You asked me to tell you everything. There's just my brother, Arundill—and three juniors, who don't really count. Jack and his manager hate the sight of each other. Arundill's afraid of the knowledge Jack possesses, furious because I refused him, and working himself up into a state of mind that is making him capable of anything. My brother's torn between a natural desire to expose the man who pushed himself into his billet and a sense of loyalty to his superior. He swears he'll write to the London directors as soon as his time is up; but I'm beginning to be afraid Arundill will never give him the opportunity."

"How d'you mean?"

"I mean that one of these days Jack will walk into the trap Arundill has prepared for him. There'll be a frightful accident, he'll get caught in a burn, a tree will fall on him. . . ."

Fellowes almost jumped from his seat.

"My dear Miss Vereker!—people can't do that sort of thing——!"

She returned his gaze unflinchingly.

"Arundill can."

"But——!"

"Do you sleep alone—up there?"

"There's an old native woman who acts as my maid; that's all."

"No other protection?"

"There's the dog, of course; but he's an awful old fool."

"Good Lord!"

"It is pretty desperate, isn't it? Jack realizes my position keenly and wants me to go back to England. I couldn't hear of it, so he gave me this."

She produced from the pocket of her drill tunic a tiny revolver—an absurd affair of metal and mother of pearl that Fellowes could shut one hand completely over.

"Does it work?" inquired the man dubiously.

"Rather! We practiced with it the whole of one Sunday afternoon, until my ears positively sang. We stuck a bottle on a rock twenty yards away—and I tried to hit it."

The assistant's mouth twitched.

"Did you?"

"Yes—once; the first time, of course. My brother said it was beginner's luck, and I suppose he was right, for I never got near it again."

He handed it back to her.

"Does—Arundill know you possess this?"

She did not answer for a moment, but sat gazing over the rail, a faraway look in her eyes.

"Yes."

"Since when?"

"Since last night." She had relapsed into a dull, monotonous utterance, and all the while she was speaking a point of flame played at either cheek. "He came to my room and knocked. I was in bed. I thought at first it was the maid. He shut the door behind him and leaned against it. I told him to go away; but he still stood there, grinning; his mouth moving horribly. Then I threatened him with my pistol. I was terribly afraid. You see, I'd practiced standing up, and it didn't seem natural to fire from a lying position."

"Try leaning on your elbow," advised Fellowes. "You could hardly miss like that. He cleared out then, I suppose."

"Not at once. He laughed at me. 'You wouldn't dare,' he said. I advised him not to take chances, told him I'd been practicing for weeks. He asked me what for. I said—to kill anyone who came in when my brother was away. He shook his shoulders from side to side and leered. 'But you wouldn't want to kill me!' he said. 'I would,' I told him. 'With all my heart and soul'!"

Fellowes, a strange light dancing in his eyes, watched her in mute admiration.

"Lord!" he ejaculated after an appreciable pause; "what an outsider the man must be!"

"What would happen—if I killed Arundill?" she asked slowly. "Would they hang me?"

The assistant sprang to his feet and rested a heavy hand on her shoulder.

"Of course they wouldn't," he said easily. "But you're not going to do anything of the sort. Arundill's seen what kind of reception he's likely to expect—and that's all there is to it. Look here, we're pretty near neighbors. If, by any chance, anything should happen, fire, twice—in the air, out of the window, anywhere—and I'll be with you in a couple of shakes. Is that a bargain?"

She held out her hand.

"I don't think even Corrigan could do more than that," she said.

They lunched together in the most cheerful room Pamela had encountered since she left Singapore. The windows, even, boasted glass panes and a cluster of bewildered flies hung wonderingly from a fresh, white-painted ceiling.

"If I had a home like this," she ventured between the courses, "I should never want to leave it. It makes me ashamed of our—hovel up there."

"I expect you've succeeded in making it very comfortable," returned Fellowes gallantly.

"I haven't. I don't believe anybody could—not even you. None of the shutters fit and the rain comes in whenever there's a storm. It was run up in an emergency—and is now supposed to act as a permanency!"

"My last house was like that," said Fellowes. "Most of them are out here; but Corrigan's bent on replacing them gradually. You see, Miss Vereker, he's his own master, and it's his own money he's spending; not the public's. I suppose it's pretty sound economy in the long run. Men stop with a feller who troubles himself about their creature comfort. He hasn't the bother of constantly chasing round for fresh blood. Besides, a chap can do twice the work when he's well housed and looked after."

"I suppose so," agreed Pamela, dreamily. This Corrigan institution seemed a nice, comfortable sort of affair to belong to. She wondered why her brother had never told her about it. Perhaps he didn't know either? And then it occurred to her with surprising suddenness that everything was due to that strip of jungle that had hitherto stretched between the two estates. If Arundill had been looking after his firm's interests, he would have secured it long ago—and Fellowes would never have had the opportunity of building a bungalow within a stone's throw of her own. It's an ill wind that blows nobody any good, after all, and it would be nice to lean out of her windows and stare down on to the shingled roof, knowing all the while that she had only to give the arranged signal to have its occupant hurrying to her side. There was something about Fellowes, too, that made her feel snugly at home. In an odd sort of way she found herself wishing that something exciting would happen, so that she might have a chance of seeing the light of battle leap into his eyes and the muscles that rippled the sleeve of his tunic extend their sphere of action. Even in the remotest fringes of Corrigan's domain there lurked a subtle sense of security—and it was with an effort that Pamela Vereker rose to her feet and took leave of the man who had sworn to champion her cause.

"Good-bye, Mr. Fellowes. I'm ever so grateful to you—for everything. I feel ten thousand times better than I did this morning!"

"I'm glad of that," replied the man, simply. "To tell you the honest truth, I should rather welcome an opportunity of getting a knock in at our friend Arundill. There was something about the way he ignored my greeting the other morning that set my teeth on edge. Good-bye, Miss Vereker. When your brother comes back, bring him across. We might manage some cards or something."

SHRINERS' TEMPLE COST $2,500,000

Mother Temple of Ancient Arabic Order in New York Dedicated Yesterday.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—One of New York's most unique buildings, the mosque of Mecca Temple, mother temple of the Ancient Arabic Order, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, was formally dedicated with imposing ceremonies on Dec. 30.

The occasion attracted thousands of Shriners from various sections of the country. A picturesque parade down Fifth Avenue of the Arab patrols, bands and drum corps of 40 temples in the east preceded the event.

The mosque, a quaint bit of the Orient, is located just off the fringe of the theatrical district, and extends between West 55th and 56th streets near Sixth avenue. It cost $2,500,000

An immense red tiled dome, surmounted by the symbolic scimitar and crescent, covers the main auditorium which can seat nearly 5,000 persons. The front of the mosque is of white stone and vari-colored terra cotta work. There are only a few slit-like windows on the face of the building and great bronze oriental lamps hang over the half-dozen arched doorways.

On the 56th Street entrance there is a 12-storey administration building, topped by a roof garden. Three lodge halls, club rooms and the quarters for officers occupy this section. Here also are stored the first records of the Mystic Shrine in North America and the original jewel of the Shrine, worn by the late William J. Florence, actor and dramatist, one of the small handful of founders of Mecca Temple in 1872. Mecca now has a membership of 12,000.

The main auditorium has a stage larger than the majority of theatres in this city, equipped with special scenery and lighted by the most modern devices. The main floor has movable opera chairs, so that it can be used for dancing. Two large galleries reach almost to the base of the dome. A feature of the auditorium is a pipe organ, costing $50,000.

Under the auditorium is a banquet hall, which can seat 2,500 persons, and modern hotel-like kitchens.

The dedicatory ceremonies were in charge of Rosslyn M. Cox, of Middletown, N.Y., the Illustrious Potentate of the Temple. Bishop William T. Mannig of the Episcopal diocese of New York, delivered the invocation, and the ritualistic ceremonies were directed by William A. Rowan, Grand Master of Masons in New York State. Addresses were made by Supreme Court Justice Arthur S. Tompkins, Past Grand Master, and Mayor W. Freeland Kendrick of Philadelphia, Past Imperial Potentate of the Shrine.

In the evening the first ceremonial was held in the mosque, when 400 novices, in Shrine language, "crossed the hotsands of the desert."

Country Lady—"I've been expecting a packet of medicine by post for a week, and haven't received it yet."

Post Office Clerk—"Yes, madam. Kindly fill in this form, and state the nature of your complaint."

Lady—"Well, if you really must know, it's indigestion."

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE.

1925 IS EXPECTED TO BE A DRY YEAR

Since 1865 Every Fifth Year Has Been Wet in England.

LONDON, Jan. 5.—The year 1925 will be the driest the universe has experienced this century, an official of the British Meteorological Department told The Associated Press in explaining a new discovery which departmental experts have made, and which, it is declared, enables them to pick out the wet and dry years to come.

St. Swithin will have 12 months of large scale unemployment after Christmas, the department has emphatically predicted, and the drought to come will not only dry up these soggy islands, but extend to the rest of the world.

This statement was made after much study on the part of weather scientists, and as the result of the discovery that a close connection exists between rainfall, particularly in Great Britain, and the frequency of solar prominences. The latter are explained to be the tongues of flaming gas that dart out from the sun's surface, sometimes to a height of 250,000 miles and at a speed of more than 150 miles an hour.

Experts have spent three years studying the relation of this phenomenon with the fall of rain and have learned that the interval between the dates when these giant fireworks are most active has grown progressively shorter during the last half century, while the periodicity of wet years in England has shown a corresponding change. The mathematical curves indicate a relationship that is too definite to be overlooked, say the departmental chiefs.

This relativity is nothing new. It was noticed about 1865, and for the next 25 years, every fifth year in England was wet, the other four being dry or normal. All this time the solar prominences were appearing regularly and normally. At the end of the 25 years the flames appeared oftener and continued to appear at regular periods for 20 years, when every third year was wet. From 1910 to 1921 the flames were more active and alternate years were wet and dry.

The droughty year of 1921 appears to have been the turning point, for now the department experts have figured out that for the next period of increased solar activity the years will be in cycles of three, two wet years and one dry one. The year 1922 is reckoned as the last year on the late period, therefore the years 1923 and 1924 have been the wet ones, and 1925, if any faith can be placed in the constancy of the solar prominences of the sun, should be a dry one in England and a droughty one for the rest of the world.

PRISONERS.

Thirty years ago the average age of convicts sent to state prisons was from 32 to 42.

Now the average age is from 22 to 25 years. And nearly a third of them are under 21.

Among many reasons, the drug traffic looms largest. Majority of big crimes by young men are committed in temporary recklessness imparted by drugs. Dope is the foundation of modern criminality.

REV. M. C. MACKINNON DENIES TRUTH OF STATEMENTS MADE BY AN ANTI-UNION SPEAKER

World Wide Congratulation on Union Does Not Indicate Destruction, He Says.

DENIES COERCION.

More Safeguards Under Church Union Than by Old Presbyterian Constitution.

In a short address preceding the sermon by Rev. D. N. MacLachlan, of the Presbyterian Home Mission Staff, Toronto, in Knox Presbyterian Church last night, the pastor, Rev. M. C. Mackinnon, took occasion to correct statements made at a meeting of anti-Unionists on Friday night, and in the literature of the "Presbyterian Church Association."

Drawing attention to the statement that the Unionists are destroying the Presbyterian Church, Rev. Mr. Mackinnon asked who the ministers are who are doing so. "Is it those who believe God is leading us out into a wider fellowship with world-wide Christianity?" He quoted Dr. R. P. MacKay, Principal Mackinnon, Moderator of the General Assembly, the thirteen hundred Canadian ministers, including Rev. J. Rollins, Rev. R. Pogue, Rev. J. W. Gordon, Rev. Mr. Mitchell, Rev. H. J. Keith and Rev. J. A. MacKenzie, who are all entering the United Church. "Are these men destroying the Presbyterian Church?" the speaker asked.

The General Assembly of the United Free Church of Scotland expresses the "profoundest interest and satisfaction" in congratulating the Presbyterian Church on entering the United Church. "Would they congratulate us on the destruction of the Presbyterian Church?"

The Moderator of the Church of Scotland says to the Unionists: "You are setting an example to the whole Christian world." "Does he consider the Union the destruction of the Presbyterian Church?"

Ninety-five per cent. of the foreign missionaries of the Presbyterian Church are entering the United Church. "Are they destroying Presbyterianism?"

The Pan-Presbyterian Alliance Council unanimously and cordially welcome the United Church as a member of the world family of Presbyterian churches. "Are they welcoming the destruction of the Presbyterian Church? The assertion made by the anti-Unionists is obviously absurd."

Denies Coercion.

Rev. Mr. McConnell made the statement on Friday night that the Presbyterian ministers received instructions that they would only get two more days to decide whether or not they would enter the United church. Rev. Mr. Mackinnon denied the truth of the statement, saying, "I never received the slightest hint from the leaders of our Church in Canada as to the step I should take."

"The claim made on behalf of the Presbyterian Church Association that it had obtained a six months' period in which every member would have the right to vote is erroneous," Mr. Mackinnon said. "The amendment giving that stay was prepared and inserted in the bill by the Unionists in order to remove any appearance of coercion, and it was definitely opposed by anti-Unionists in the hope of defeating the whole bill."

"When Rev. Mr. McConnell said the anti-Unionists are holding the strategic points in the west, what about Regina, the capital city of Saskatchewan, where all five churches have entered or are entering the United Church?"

Council is not Autocratic

Referring to the powers imputed to the General Council by anti-Unionists, who say the Council has "all kinds of autocratic powers", Rev. Mr. Mackinnon compared the "Barrier Act" of the Presbyterian Church in Canada and similar acts in the old Presbyterian Church, showing that there are greater safeguards against changes by the General Council in the United Church than there are against changes by the General Assemblies of the Presbyterian Church.

The Barrier Act does not require that legislation be submitted to the people. In the United Church Act reference is specifically made to the General Council consulting with Pastoral Charges or people. This indicates greater safeguards in the United Church. The United Church Act, furthermore, guarantees that not even the General Council can interfere with the freedom of worship at present enjoyed by the negotiating churches. Mr. Mackinnon quoted from Section 5, paragraph 24, of United Church Act, and section 121 of the Rules and Forms of Procedure of the Presbyterian Church in Canada.

Ordination of Elders

"Rev. W. F. McConnell repeats a statement made in the Presbyterian Church Association pamphlet that the ordained eldership will be dropped. Section 2 (a) of the United Church Act guarantees that: In the management of their local affairs the various churches, charges, circuits or congregations of the negotiating churches shall be entitled to continue the organization and practices enjoyed by them at the time of the Union. As previously indicated, this privilege is made secure by greater safeguards in the United Church than the safeguards at present existing in the Presbyterian Churches of Canada and Scotland."

"With regard to charges to be formed subsequent to the Union, the Act declares the oversight of the spiritual interests of the charge by the minister (or ministers) and a body of men specially chosen and set apart or ordained for that work, who shall jointly constitute the session. The Westminister Confession of Faith, page 359, declares, ordination is the solemn setting apart of a person to some publick church office. In the ordination service prayer as indicated in the Westminster Confession of Faith and the Presbyterian Blue Book, the word 'ordain' is not used. The words used are, set apart; the exact words used in the basis of Union. And yet, the Presbyterian Church Association organizer declares that in the United Church the ordained eldership will be dropped! Can you depend upon their literature or statements?"

Hurls Back Charge

"Who are the men who are 'damning' the Westminster Confession of Faith?", demanded Rev. Mr. Mackinnon quoting the words of the anti-unionist speaker on Friday. "Have you ever heard Messrs. Keith, MacKenzie, your present minister, Pogue, Rollins, Gordon damn the Westminster Confession of Faith?"

The anti-unionists charge that the Unionists are giving up the Westminster Confession of Faith. In its chapter on Doctrine, the United Church Act says: We acknowledge the teaching of the great creeds of the ancient church. We further maintain our allegiance to the evangelical doctrines of the Reformation as set forth in common in the doctrinal standards adopted by the Presbyterian Church in Canada..... What are these doctrinal standards? After the Word of God, they are, the Westminster Confession of Faith, including the Larger and Shorter Catechisms. These then are carried forward into the United Church."

Warns Against Propaganda.

Rev. Mr. Mackinnon warned his congregation against last minute propaganda against the United Church, which he said might appear to-day, too late for a reply.

He refuted the current impression that those who do not vote are counted as Unionists.

After urging a complete vote of the congregation, Mr. Mackinnon asked the members, as they mark the cross on the ballot, to think of that other Cross on which the Son of God bled and died for the salvation of men. Not for the restricted few; "For God so loved the world that He gave His only-begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish but have eternal life."

Stirring Appeal.

Rev. D. N. McaLachlan presented a stirring message picturing the need of Western Canada that can be met only by the efforts of a United Church.

The inspiring and informing service was concluded with the singing of the grand old hymn "Shall we gather at the River?" with a heartiness that must have impressed every person present.

HOW TEACHERS OF ONTARIO ARE BEING TRAINED

Mr. R. F. Downey Discusses Subject Before Rotary Club.

A SPLENDID ADDRESS.

Rotarian R. G. Kingan Leads the Attendance Averages.

"How We Get Our Teachers" was the subject of a most interesting address given before the members of the Peterborough Rotary Club at its weekly luncheon at the Empress today by Mr. R. F. Downey. Mr. Downey's talks on educational topics are always appreciated and to-day's effort, a review of the struggles of the teaching profession to reach its present status, was full of information.

Mr. Downey, who was introduced by Rotarian Ross Dobbin in a speech in which reference to the curling peculiarities of the speaker of the day predominated, traced the development of the training of teachers

Ontario from 1810 when the monitorial system was introduced, down to the present day. He referred to the opening of the first Normal school in 1847, with 20 pupils, and contrasted it with the showing last year, when the Provincial Normal Schools trained 2,429 teachers. The speaker emphasized the facilities at present available for the training of teachers, devoting some time to the summer schools at the univeristies where hundreds of Ontario teachers were using the summer months in taking refresher courses that left them much better equipped for the work. Mr. Downey remarked that because of the shifting of the whole training of the child from the home to the school it was necessary that the teachers should be prepared for the responsibility thrust upon them.

Secretary McHardy reported that the average attendance during the year had been 85 per cent. and announced that one member, Rotarian R. G. Kingan, had an attendance record of 100 per cent.

The announcement was received with much applause and Rotarian Kingan was presented with an enormous cigar, the honours being done by Rotarian C. G. Graham.

Rotarian Dr. A. W. McPherson gave a resume of the work in connection with the fifteen crippled children taken in charge by Rotary, explaining the disposition of each case and declaring that so far satisfactory results had been obtained.

A RUNNING MARVEL.

NEWYORK, Jan. 5.—(Canadian Press.) — Paavo Nurmi, Finnish runner, who will be the chief attraction at the annual field and track meet of the Finnish-American Athletic Club in Madison Square Garden to-morrow night, faces double duty and has declared himself ready for the test.

Nurmi's first start in the United States will be in the mile, scheduled for nine o'clock. Two hours later he will appear in the 5,000 meters event. Two races in one day are anything but new to this marvel of Europe, who has won two victories in afternoon at Olympic games.

POPULAR FROCK

Rust colored flannel makes this very serviceable and practical frock that has a vest running clear to the hemline made of ecru-colored crepe de chine trimmed with tucking and a row of fancy buttons. or the school girl or business woman, this type of dress has become a favorite.

A record in simultaneous radio broadcast in Canada was achieved on Sunday night, December 28th, on the occasion of the first anniversary of the Radio Department of the Canadian National Railways.

Sir Henry W. Thornton, Chairman and President of the Canadian National System, and three of his vice-presidents, Messrs. J. E. Dalrymple, S. J. Hungerford and W. D. Robb, delivered short talks from station CNRM, Montreal. This station was tied-in with CNRO, Ottawa, and CNRT, Toronto, by telephone circuit, and the amplifying equipment at the two latter stations completed the broadcast as though the officers were speaking in person from either of these stations.

The same evening the same speeches were delivered from the other six broadcasting stations operated by the Canadian National Railways in Moncton, Winnipeg, Saskatoon, Regina, Calgary and Edmonton, so that the messages received a Dominion-wide circulation within the space of a few minutes.

In Montreal the speech of Mr. Robb was delivered in French as a compliment to the French-speaking Canadians, but it was translated into English at all the other stations not directly tied-in with CNRM.

Never before has simultaneous broadcast been attempted on such a large scale in Canada.

FEWEST BIRTHS IN FOUR YEARS

Marriages and Deaths Are the Lowest in Five Years—1924 Record.

YEARLY FIGURES.

There were 27 fewer births, 29 fewer marriages and 38 fewer deaths in 1924 than in the preceding year, and 33 fewer births, 9 fewer marriages and 42 fewer deaths than in 1922. In fact, the following comparison for several years shows an increasing tendency in Peterboro people not to be born, get married, or die:

	Births	Marriages	Deaths
1924	551	183	317
1923	578	212	355
1922	584	192	359
1921	586	206	320
1920	551	264	364

The monthly figures show that March, August and December are tied with equal numbers of births; June leads the marriage roll with September not far behind, and the greatest number of deaths take place in December. Here is the list:

	Births	Marriages	Deaths
January	37	14	22
February	39	5	24
March	54	11	28
April	39	17	25
May	48	16	29

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

HEART-FAILURE AND OMINOUS SILENCE.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

The British Columbia Legislative Assembly passed the Union Act on December 12th, 1924, requiring that equitable adjustment and allocation of each property be made with due regard to rights of minorities therein.

Three weeks have passed and the Presbyterian Witness has not been able to summon up enough courage to make known to its readers this sad and disastrous news.

Organic Union is on the rocks in British Columbia.

Ontario and Quebec will probably send this "Imp of Discord" to oblivion.

Organic Union Discredited in the Whole Protestant World. Even Germany has Repudiated This Prussian Fad.

The United States has a Federal Council of Churches and it comprises most of the Protestant Denominations in that Great Republic.

In 1918 the Council of Organic Union, which comprised representatives from nineteen Protestant Denominations in the United States, decided that the movement towards Church Unity tended towards Federal Union, which allowed for diversity of temperament, practice and doctrine, and not towards complete amalgamation of denominations (Organic Union).

In 1920 representatives from most of the Protestant Denominations in the United States met, and prepared a Statement of Faith and Basis of Union to the best of their ability, but the same was modernistic and indefinite. It was overwhelmingly defeated by the largest Presbyterian Denomination in U.S.A., and no other denomination even bothered to vote same down apparently.

The Anti-Unionists in Canada at the General Assembly in 1923 stood as a unit behind Rev. Dr. Drummond's resolution to substitute Federal Union or Co-operation between all Protestant Churches in Canada, in place of the proposed Organic Union between three, and thus avoid disruption of the Presbyterian Church in Canada. Co-operation in the Home Mission Fields is all that is essential in Canada.

Organic Union has been thrown into the discard in South Africa, New Zealand and Australia.

The Lambeth Council stands for the Anglican Church throughout the world retaining her fundamental standards.

The Pan-Presbyterian Council stands apparently, for the union of Presbyterian Churches only, and for the retention of all the historic standards of the Church.

In no part of the world does the Baptist Church favor Organic Union apparently.

Before "The Great War" a Calvanistic Denomination and a Lutheran Denomination consummated "Organic Union" in Prussia. No other instance can be found anywhere in the world. It is evidently not a success as Germany has repudiated that policy and adopted the policy of co-operation.

In 1922 twenty-eight Protestant Denominations comprising 36,000,000 members and adherents in Germany followed the lead of the United States and formed a Federal Union.

All Presbyterians in Canada should also repudiate this Prussian fad and vote "no".—Malcolm A. McKay, Secretary, Presbyterian Church Association, Port Arthur Branch.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—Two weeks ago when the first return of the voting from the West came in reporting a vote against Union the correspondent of the Peterborough Branch of the Presbyterian Association wrote of the matter in a spirit of triumph saying in effect: "There, now, didn't we tell you that the claims of the Unionists that the West was solid for Union were not correct. Here is the very first return and it is against Union. Just watch for future returns and see how they will belie the claim of these Unionists." Evidently the writer thought one swallow makes a summer.

After two weeks that same writer, when the figures from all over the Dominion stood 176 congregations for Union and only 10 against, takes up his pen to write again, but not, as an honest man, to admit his mistake, but to explain away, if he can, the significance of these figures. But he cannot do it, though he will attempt to do it just the same. Passing over the many large congregations which had voted in favor of Union, there are five of them in Regina, he proceeds to single out the number of small congregations which voted. Who ever heard of there being large congregations on the prairies of the West? Who ever made the claim that there were? Had there been large and self-sustaining congregations there the question of Union might never have been raised. It was because there were small congregations struggling for an existence, their struggle due to the unholy denominational rivalry which planted three churches in a community which could scarcely support one that Church Union became a burning question in the West and then all over the Dominion. Our sons and our daughters, our brothers and our sisters wrote back to us from the west telling us how many of them had no church services at all, others of them only occasionally, and others wrote saying, that owing to the cost of supporting church ordinances the burden was too heavy for a new country. They said: "If we had Union it would be different." The Church in the East replied: "You shall have Union. Union will make practically no difference to us. We are willing to make what little sacrifice may be necessary. We shall pour our gifts and our men into the West that our sons and daughters may have the means of grace, that the newcomer, from across the seas, may be evangelized, and that our land may be won for Christ and His Kingdom.

This whole Church Union Movement had its genesis in the needs of our West, the needs of the little places, the little congregations. And for a writer, representing the local Presbyterian Association, to belittle the significance of the votes of these congregations, who by their vote, reach out to us appealing hands, saying, "Come over and help us," is to reveal a strange blindness to the chief argument for Church Union ever since it was first brought before the church, namely, the crying need of the West. —Presbyter.

Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—After reading in Saturday's issue of your valuable paper an article with the heading "Modernism and Church Union," an instance that happened in Toronto some years ago came to me. A young Scotch girl was joining a certain Presbyterian Church in that city; the minister was asking her the usual questions that are always asked when anyone is to become a member of our church by profession of faith. The girl listened attentively, looking into the minister's face rather wistfully, and when he had finished she said, in her Scotch way, "I dinna ken ony o' that, but I do know I love the Lord Jesus and want to serve Him." The minister said to her, "My dear girl, that is the real essential and you are quite qualified to become a member of this church."

It is heart-breaking to reach such publications as Modernism and Church Union when one thinks of the simple faith that is required to be really a follower of Christ. I had the privilege of attending our General Assembly when it met in Toronto, June, 1913, and can never forget the impressions I got while attending almost every session of that splendid gathering, listening to the arguments for and against Church Union. They were most interesting.

Dr. Clarke, of Montreal, gave the summing up or closing address on this great subject and it seemed to me his face fairly shone with the vision he had for our church. When one thinks of men who also had and have this same vision, men like Principal Grant of Queen's, Principal Caven of Knox, Dr. McDonald, Dr. Milligan of Toronto, Dr. Symonds of the Anglican Church, and scores of other saintly men, it seems deplorable to read and hear men who have caught this vision trying to hold back a great church from doing what God would have her do unitedly with the other churches. There may be difficulties to overcome in the United Church, but if God be for us who can be against us?. Yours sincerely, —Union.

$125,000,000 IN BRITISH CONTRACTS

Salvation of the British Engineering Trade in View.

LONDON, Jan. 5.—Next year is boom year in railway development. Orders placed and work begun will constitute a record for many years past.

The work which the four great systems are projecting will prove the salvation of the iron, steel, and engineering trades, which, after a long slump, are now recovering, and appear to be well on the road to prosperity. All four groups are developing huge schemes, and it would probably be a conservative estimate to say that $125,000,000 will be spent during the year.

These schemes will benefit, in addition to the trades mentioned, waggon and coach-builders, equipment makers, builders, and the building trades.

The London and North-Eastern Railway have a scheme for spending six million pounds. Contracts have already been divided among a large number of firms, and work will begin immediately.

On behalf of the London, Midland, and Scottish Railway, it was stated that a big programme of work for next year is on the point of completion at an estimated cost of $3,000,000. This is only a small part of the scheme being developed. The sum set aside is likely to exceed $30,000,000.

The Great Western Railway improvements will involve an expenditure of several millions.

Finally, there is the great electrification scheme of the Southern Railway, on which at least $30,000,000 is being spent. Some of the work is already in hand, and when the company's plans are complete the cost will run into $65,000,000.

ONTARIO BUSINESS MEN WILL VISIT QUEBEC

Arrangements have been made and plans are now maturing whereby a large delegation of Ontario's prominent manufacturers, professional and business men, accompanied by His Honor Lieutenant-Governor Cockshutt, Hon. G. Howard Ferguson and members of the Ontario Cabinet, will pay a visit to Quebec as the guests of the Lieutenant-Governor and Premier, representing the Province of Quebec. The object of the visit is to further good relationship and better business conditions between the Provinces.

The Canadian National Railways are co-operating to the extent that they will operate a special sleeping car train to leave Toronto on Wednesday, Jan. 28, at 7.00 p.m., arriving in Quebec in time for breakfast on Jan. 29. This train will consist of standard sleeping and compartment cars and reservations may now be made through any agent of the company. 31-2-5-8

Cannot Sue for Breach of Covenant, Only for Premiums

Legal judgment delivered in 1620, during the reign of Charles I., was relied on by a solicitor in Bow County Court, when representing an apprentice sued by his master.

The case was one in which George Hicks, an upholsterer and cabinet maker, sued Edgar B. Cushings, aged 21, for £75 damages for the alleged breaking of an apprenticeship indenture.

Hicks' counsel said that Cushings was apprenticed by his father in 1921, for five years, at a wage of 10s. weekly, increasing 5s. a week each year. Cushings' father died in 1923, and last September, Cushings refused to serve any longer, saying he could get better pay elsewhere.

In evidence Mr. Hicks said that Cushings' departure had hampered him in his business. The £75 was prospective damages, representing the profit he estimated he should have made through Cushings during the two years he should have remained.

NO UNEMPLOYED.

Judge Snagge: You say there is a difficulty in replacing him?—Yes; the trade is so busy.

Are there no unemployed?—No, not in our trade at the present time.

Mr. B. P. Bridgeman (solicitor), for defendant, said that in 1620 it was decided in the case of Gylbert v. Fletcher that an apprentice could not be sued for damages for any breach of covenant, but could only be sued for balance of premiums.

The Judge: You mean that you cannot bind an apprentice to do anything that he undertakes to do?

Mr. Bridgeman: You cannot sue the apprentice, but the father or guardian.

AN "INFANT."

Mr. Bridgeman, after quoting other decisions which upheld the judgment of 1620, said that in the present case the defendant was over age, but was an "infant" when he entered into the apprenticeship deed.

The judge remarked that when an apprentice had received training for two or three years and then left his master in the lurch because he could receive more pay elsewhere, he did not seem to be acting properly.

Speaking on the general principle, Mr. Bridgeman said that when an apprentice became of age he was entitled to put an end to his apprenticeship, but he must give to his master reasonable notice.

HARDSHIP PLEADED.

Cushings told the judge that after the death of his father he went to live with an aunt, and found it impossible to live on his wage.

Both he and his aunt appealed to Hicks to release him from his apprenticeship under the circumstances, but he refused.

In view of the importance of the points raised, the judge reserved his decision.

DRASTIC PENALTY FOR SUNDAY FOOTBALL

Forty Players of Several Clubs Come Under Suspension Ban

Consternation has been caused in half a dozen football clubs in north-west Surrey by the official suspension of forty players for taking part in Sunday football. Seven out of the Ottershaw club's league team have come under the official ban, as also have players in the Chertsey, Addlestone, Oatlands Park, and Weybridge St. James clubs.

It appears that numerous players have been taking part in an inter-works cup competition on Sunday mornings within the private ground of the Firfield Sports Club at Addlestone, the men being employes of the Weybridge Motor and Engineering Works.

Last season all the players taking part in a match one Sunday morning were warned on the field by an official of the Surrey County Football Association. Six players promptly walked off the field, but the others continued, and matches have since proceeded.

Lately observation has been secretly kept, and the official suspensions are the result. It is stated that two official referees may also be concerned.

KEEPERS SHOT BY POACHERS ON ESTATE

Midnight Attack in Woods—Assailants All Escaped

Four gamekeepers were shot by poachers on the estate of the Honourable Mrs. Trollope-Bellew, of Casewick Hall, near Stamford, in a raid which took place at midnight.

The keepers—William Barsby, head keeper; George McCarthy, under head keeper, of Bracsborough; Percy Dudderidge, another under-gamekeeper; and Christopher Cook, rabbit-catcher—were on the outlook for the poachers.

Some time before midnight they heard shots fired, and went in the direction of the reports. They saw three men, two or three fields away, by the side of a plantation, and on going towards them, were fired at.

McCarthy and Barsby received the greater part of the charge, but McCarthy rushed at one of the men and tackled him. In his injured condition, however, he was unable to hold on.

Dudderidge approached the poacher from the rear, and in a desperate struggle he was struck over the head with a gun, which was broken. Cook had also been hurt by the discharge of the weapon previously. In their injured condition the keepers were unable to continue the chase any longer, and their assailants escaped.

The gamekeepers were taken to Stamford Infirmary. Barsby and McCarthy are dangerously wounded.

Jamaica has decided to take part in the British Empire Exhibition next year.

Dublin University Carries Motion to Repeal Royal Right

At a meeting of the Convocation of the National University of Ireland in Dublin a resolution to alter Article 4 of the Charter was carried by 50 votes to 20. The article reserves the right to the King, his heirs and successors, as visitors of the University.

The proposer of the resolution, Mr. Francis Burke, agreed to an amendment which would give the power of appointing visitors to the University itself.

BOXING LOSSES OF MORE THAN £17,000

Major J. A. Wilson is Examined in Bankruptcy Court

MONEYLENDERS AID

Agrees That Promotion of Contests is Just Speculation

Major James Arnold Wilson, the promoter of boxing contests, against whom a receiving order was made on June 26, was publicly examined at the London Bankruptcy Court on accounts showing liabilities of £17,310, and assets of £344.

He stated that he was granted a commission in the Army in 1914 and served through the war, retiring with the rank of Major in July, 1919.

"At the end of 1920," he added, "I took an office at St. Martin's Court, W., for the purpose of running boxing contests.

"The first contest which I promoted in 1920, was one between Moran and Beckett, and on that I made a profit. I lost £5,000 on the contest between Bloomfield and McGill. There was a profit on the fight between Carpentier and Beckett of £1,800.

LARGE PURSES.

"In 1923-24 my total losses on the promotion of contests were £11,000. I borrowed £4,000 from friends, and £11,000 from moneylenders, and this was all used to finance contests."

Major Wilson was asked why he offered such large purses, and replied that he was compelled to do so, otherwise he would be outbid by others.

"The contract for the fight between Bloomfield and Gibbons at the Wembley Stadium was signed three days after the receiving order," he added, "but the contract had been for a long time in draft and I went on with it in the hope that I would out of it be able to obtain sufficient to pay my liabilities. The venture, however, resulted in a loss of £15,000.

"I agree that all promotions of contests are speculations. I attribute my failure to losses on boxing contests, largely through delays and disappointments by boxers, to heavy interest on borrowed money, and to ill health."

The examination was concluded.

THRUST IN SACK BY UNSEEN HANDS

Boy's Story of Series of Adventures in Jersey

Gagged, bound, placed in a sack and left half-conscious in a cider press room of an unknown assailant is the fate that overtook Theophile Mirabel, a St. Clements (Jersey) farm lad as as he was returning from feeding the cattle.

He told a Press representative that he was suddenly seized hold of and dragged to the cider press room.

Here he was forced to the ground, face downwards; a gag was thrust into his mouth and secured with a strip of sacking; with pieces of the same material, his hands were then tied behind his back and his legs secured. He was then placed in a sack bound with stout rope.

At no time could he catch a glimpse of his assailant, and he could not say if there was more than one.

He was lifted up and carried to the other end of the press house and deposited on some cider barrels with his back to the wall. His legs slipped between the wall and one of the barrels and he remained in this awkward position for an hour, when he was discovered half-conscious.

FLYING MOTOR CAR TO SOLVE PROBLEM

Sir Charles Wakefield's Scheme to Overcome Traffic Difficulty

Sir Charles Wakefield suggests a flying motor-car as a solution of the traffic problem.

"Why not," he asks, "have a light motor-car fitted with wings, so that it could take either the road or the air, as the traffic demanded?"

The car-plane consists of a light car, driven by propellers like those of an aeroplane, and light wings which can be folded back on the roof of the car when not in use.

A tailor told Judge Cluer at Whitechapel County Court that his family of five slept in one room and his servant slept in the workshop.

GETS WAR MEDALS AFTER SIX YEARS

Six years after the Armistice, Lieut. Hamilton Sanford, who served in the European War from August, 1914, till November, 1918, has received his decorations—the British war medal, Victory medal, and the 1914-15 Star.

Lieut. Sanford, who is now stationed at Aldershot, received a notice from the Adjutant-General's department telling him what steps to take to acquire the medals, but he heard nothing further.

Three weeks ago he wrote and asked about his medals and gratuity, and has now received the decorations, but the gratuity has not been forwarded.

"I want a summons against my wife for not speaking to me for three months," said a husband at Willesden. "Many husbands would give anything for a wife like that," commented the magistrate.

NOVEL PLEA IN BOGUS CURATE CASE

Defence Counsel Says Nothing to Prevent Layman Marrying People

BOUND OVER

Judge Hopes Incident Will Be Lesson to the Accused

He wondered that one who set up to be a preacher, and who looked at things higher than the law, should not have hesitated to do something which might have irretrievably offended those who came to the church to have their marriage blessed, and went away finding that they only got the blessing of a man who was acting on false pretences.

Mr. Justice Branson used these words at Leeds Assizes, in binding over Alfred Barbour, aged 25, described as a lay preacher, on a charge that he, "pretending to be in Holy Orders, did solemnize matrimony according to the rites of the Church of England at Queensbury on August 9."

Walter Hedley, for the Director of Public Prosecutions, recalled the new familiar story of how Barbour secured a post as temporary curate through assuring the Rev. Ernest Dawe, Vicar of Queensbury, that he had been ordained at Worcester.

Evidence was given that Barbour had never been ordained at Worcester.

Mr. Morley, for the defence, submitted that:

There was no law which prevented anyone who was not in Holy Orders from solemnising holy matrimony in the Church of England and according to the rites of the Church of England.

The history of the marriage laws went back a very long way, and at one time a layman not in Holy Orders could solemnize a valid marriage all over Europe.

When certain alterations were made by the Council of Trent the marriage laws of England were not altered. Laymen could still perform a marriage ceremony.

The jury having found Barbour guilty, the judge, addressing him, said he was ready to take the view that he had been led on to this from one step to another. In the hope that it would be a lesson to him that would last him his life he was not going to send him to prison.

He did not want to send Barbour to jail to spoil his life. He therefore proposed to bind him over to come up for judgment if called upon.

Badly Educated Clergy Object of Remarks by Bishop of Birmingham

Dr. Barnes, the new Bishop of Birmingham, has followed his recent indictment of the Anglo-Catholic clergy in his diocese by an attack on the educational standard of the clergy in general, many of whom, he states, are "too poor to buy books."

"At the present time," he declares, "the standard of educated ability among the clergy is lower than it has been since the beginning of the Victorian era.

"Boys from the middle classes have largely ceased to enter the ministry, and poorer boys of character and ability whom the Church would welcome with enthusiasm are naturally attracted by more promising vocations.

"The true solution lies in the Church paying its clergy at least as adequately as the State pays its teachers.

"In an age of emotional and intellectual ferment religious enthusiasm which is not continuously disciplined by knowledge is dangerous."

POST OFFICE MADE TO RUN ITSELF

Three Important Services Given Without Anyone on Duty

A miniature automatic post-office, which will supply three important services without anyone having to be on duty, has been built for the G.P.O., and is to be seen in the courtyard at St. Martin's-le-Grand.

Little bigger than a telephone-box, it contains a letter box, a telephone and automatic stamp machines. The letter-box is built into the back of the kiosk-like construction, and above it are the stamp machines. At night it will be lit on the top by a lantern displaying the words "Post Office," "Stamps," and "Telephone."

It is to be sent to Bath, where it will act day and night as substitute for a sub-office which is to be closed for reconstruction.

"The idea is not likely to be generally adopted," a G.P.O. official told a "Daily Chronicle" representative yesterday. "The kiosk, which is 8½ ft. by 3½ ft., and about 9 ft. high, would take up too much space on the pavements to be really practicable.

"At present we have no intention of making any more, this one having been built for its special purpose at Bath. If it is a success we might consider its adoption in other places where an office has to be closed for repairs."

He added that the booth is soundproof, so that a person using the telephone will not be disturbed by anyone using the stamp machines.

"BEWITCHED" PIGS DEFENCE TO ASSAULT

A plea of justification on the ground that the woman had "bewitched his pigs" was put forward by Alfred John Matthews when he was sentenced to a month's imprisonment at Cullompton, Devon, for assaulting Ellen Garnsworthy.

She had cast an evil eye over the pigs, he said, and they died.

Matthews had scratched the woman's arm with a pin, one of the scratches being five inches long, in order, as he thought, to rob her of her supposed power.

TONS OF FLIES.

Thirteen tons of dried flies formed part of the cargo of the motor-liner Rio Panuco, which, on her maiden voyage, arrived at Plymouth today from Mexico and Cuba. The vessel's captain states that the flies were consigned to England for use in the manufacture of paint.

ON VISIT TO EAST AFRICA

Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of York are spending the holiday season travelling to outposts of the Empire, in Kenya, Uganda and the Gold Coast.

DRIVER OF FIRST TRAIN IN CHINA

William G. Jackson, who drove the first train that was ever run in China, died at Reydon, Southwold, aged 75. Until a few years ago he was engineer of the Southwold Railway.

The Chinese, resenting the introduction of the railroad, at first tore up the lines, and the officials had a very anxious time until the people became accustomed to the presence of the trains.

PREHISTORIC TOOLS FOUND IN BUCKS

Flint tools of pre-historic origin have been found in Chalfont Park, Gerrards Cross (Bucks).

About a dozen roughly-shaped axes and other instruments, together with some fragments, have been unearthed. An expert from the British Museum has certified them as genuine relics.

It is thought that they must be about 40,000 years old. Marks on some of the implements and on the stones in the neighbourhood indicate that they are relics of the Glacial period.

The tools were found very near the surface in loose soil.

CAPT.'S "FAREWELL" OF 11 YEARS AGO

"Farewell" messages written 11 years ago by the captain of the motor ketch Fort Churchill when he had abandoned all hopes of saving his vessel, which was caught in a blizzard at Port Perrique Bay on the Labrador coast, have just been found.

Captain J. R. Moore enclosed the messages in a bottle, which was thrown overboard, but afterwards it was found possible to beach the ketch, and the captain and crew were saved.

The skipper is now the landlord of the King's Head Hotel at Falmouth, and he has received news from the Hudson Bay Company to the effect that the bottle with the messages had been washed up on an island at Labrador, and had been forwarded to them.

GROOM VANISHES ON WEDDING MORN

Village people flocked to St. Mary's Church, Purton, near Swindon, on Saturday to see the marriage of Miss Alice Curtis and Mr. Charles Whimpey.

The bridegroom, however, did not appear, and efforts to trace him since have failed.

Accompanied by his mother, who lives at Southampton, Mr. Whimpey arrived at Purton and stayed at the home of Miss Curtis's parents.

He went out on Saturday morning, saying he was going to inquire about a parcel which he had expected by that morning's post. He was seen on the platform of the railway station, and is believed to have taken a ticket to Swindon, but he did not travel on the train.

If cyclists had to carry rear lights he did not see why every cow that strayed across the road and every pedestrian should not carry one.—Lord Wolmer.

KITCHENER FUND TOTALS £699,000

The huge figure of £699,240 has been reached by the Lord Kitchener National Memorial Fund.

Between July, 1916, and September, 1924, £443,156 was given in subscriptions and donations. It was stated at the annual meeting of the council that £117,642 had been spent on scholarships and payments in connection with the memorial chapel, and that £495,278 remains invested.

All the structural work in the Kitchener Memorial Chapel in St. Paul's has been finished, and Mr. Reid Dick is now working on the figures of the military Saints, which will probably be ready for erection early in the New Year.

The sum expended on the chapel to date is £18,926.

MAN OF PARTS IS BEFORE THE COURT

Bound over at the Old Bailey for converting £25, William Howden, aged 35, was said to have been at various times:

A head waiter at a London hotel.
Director of a sawmill.
Minuting secretary to the National Union of Railwaymen.
Proprietor of a night club in Covent Garden.
Municipal Councillor.
Owner of an employment agency.

In the calendar of prisoners he was described as an agent.

The Recorder (Sir Ernest Wild) said it was a pity Howden gave up his employment as a waiter. English waiters were the best in the world.

CRUSHED BY BELL IN CHURCH TOWER

While attending to the clock in the tower of St. Peter's Church, Thetford, Norfolk, William Marris, a local jeweller, was killed by one of the bells pinning him against a beam. It is believed that he accidentally knocked against the bell while engaged in his work.

Mr. Harris, who was an elderly man, and had been established for many years in Thetford, was engaged to clean the church clock. His wife became anxious because he did not return home at the hour appointed, and went in search of him to the tower, where she found him dead.

VARSITY "RAG" IN LONDON THEATRE

Undergraduates "celebrated" the Oxford and Cambridge Rugby match in the theatre district of London.

There was a disturbance outside the Empire Theatre, and fifteen undergraduates left in rapid succession, assisted by the janitors and the police. The entire Oxford team was present, with hundreds of other undergraduates at the Hippodrome. Cat-calls and cries continually interrupted the performance. Paper streamers were thrown everywhere, and a football was thrown at George Robey.

Youths climbed on the outside balcony of the Duke of York's Theatre and addressed the crowd. They removed electric bulbs and threw them into the street, turned on the fire hose in the bar, and even attempted to climb on the stage.

GRAVE INCREASE OF SLEEPY SICKNESS

The steady increase in the number of cases of sleepy sickness in this country was referred to by Dr. A. F. Tredgold last night in a lecture to the People's League of Health.

In 1918 we had only a few hundred cases, said Dr. Tredgold. We have now 6,000. In London 300 children of school age have been seriously affected mentally as an outcome of this disease.

Sleepy sickness was undoubtedly due to some germ which, he believed, entered through a small plated and perforated bone of the nose into the brain, with which the bone was connected by channels.

There were medical records of the disease dating back 300 years.

BRIDE WHO BOBS IN CHURCH VESTRY

"Some women are so constantly changing their appearance that their husbands live in perpetual dread of being arrested for bigamy."

So writes the Rev. A. Wellesley Orr, vicar of St. Paul's, Kingston Hill, Surrey, in his parish magazine.

"Can you wonder there is so much demand for divorce?" he asks.

"Even while we are signing the marriage register in the vestry the bride may get in a few moments' work before the mirror with a powder puff, scissors and a bottle, and then—may the Saints preserve us!—the man who came into church in love with a blushing blonde takes out on his arm a blooming bobbed brunette."

LADIES GOT WISH AND DOLLAR FINE

Lady Charles Bentinck and Miss Elizabeth Bentinck, of Monks Tower, Lincoln, wife and daughter of Lord Charles Bentinck, a half-brother of the Duke of Portland, were each fined 5s. at Lincoln Police Court for riding horses on the footpath.

A policeman stated that when Lady Charles Bentinck was stopped she said that the roads were slippery and the horses could not keep their footing. She added: "You can summon me if you like. I wish you would. I should just like to meet some of your magistrates."

Lord Charles Bentinck stated that when he saw a policeman the next day he said: "Do you call this a footpath?" The policeman replied, "No, I do not, but the county council does."

GLASGOW TO HAVE MUNICIPAL BUSES

Glasgow Corporation Tramways Department started a service of motor-buses from the east-end of the city to Maryhill, via Partick.

In 1872 the corporation laid down its tramways; then it leased them to a private omnibus and tram company, but later took them back.

Now the exigencies of modern traffic requirements have forced the corporation to omnibuses.

A woman sought a possession order against her father at Whitechapel, and offered him alternative accommodation. An agreement was reached.

UNIQUE RECORD OF LONG SERVICE

Gold Watches Presented by London Firm to 385 Employes

THIRTY YEARS

All Had Continuous Service With Concern—Woman's 44 Years

A remarkable function took place in London recently, when 385 directors and employes, each of whom has at least 30 years' continuous service with the company, met at a dinner at which each received a gold watch as a souvenir of long service.

The occasion was the first annual dinner of the Long Service Corps of United Dairies, Limited, and associated companies.

Formed less than a year ago, the Corps number 361 men and 24 women. It was originally proposed to make 25 years' service the qualification, but this would have meant a corps of 700.

It is believed to be the first organization of the kind in the country.

Included in it are nearly all the directors, who will receive their gold watches together with the most humble roundsman. The veterans will also receive silver badges and certificates of merit.

54 YEARS' SERVICE.

J. H. Maggs, managing director of United Dairies, who has been 35 years with the company, will make the presentations, and in turn will receive his own watch, badge and certificate at the hands of the greatest veteran of all, George Wheeler, a cheese buyer, of Frome, Somerset, who has spent 54 of his 72 years in the service of the company.

Two London men, S. J. Slade, Old Kent road, and J. Kent, Beresford street, S.E., have each 51 years' service, and Miss Catherine White, of Aylesbury, with 44 years, holds the record among the women.

The place of honor among the directors is taken by J. H. Emerton with half a century.

Despite their long years of service, some of the veterans are by no means old. One man who has been with them for 35 years is only 49, and another with 30 years' service is but 44. A good many of the gold watch brigade served in the war.

Southport Town Council will tomorrow evening consider the question of increasing the mayor's salary from £500 to £750. The provision of a motor car for the use of the mayor had been proposed.

CLAIM OF KRUPPS' REMARKABLE CASE

Seek Royalties on Fuses Made During War by Vickers

An important and in many ways remarkable claim by the German firm of Krupps against Vickers, Limited, should have come before the Anglo-German Mixed Arbitral Tribunal, but the hearing has been postponed.

The claim is in respect of royalties on many millions of shell fuses manufactured for the British forces by Messrs. Vickers during the first three years of the war, says the Times.

Krupps, as creditors in the action, ask for the delivery of accounts up to September 30, 1917, of all sorts of time fuses and combined time and percussion fuses of any description whatsoever manufactured by Vickers, Limited, and by other persons, firms or corporations authorized or instructed by the debtor firm.

A 1902 AGREEMENT.

They further ask for an order that an amount of 14d. for each fuse up to a specified size and of 18d. for each fuse above that size contained in these accounts, together with interest at 5 per cent., shall be treated as a debt due from the debtor to the creditor, and dealt with under the provisions of Article 296 of the Treaty of Versailles.

The claim is based on an agreement between the creditor and debtor firms dated October 1, 1902, which was to remain in force until September 30, 1917.

Obligations incurred by Vickers, Limited, up to August 4, 1914, under this agreement have, it is understood, been met, and the accounts and payments now demanded are concerned with fuses made between the outbreak of war and the date when the agreement would, under normal conditions, have expired.

CANCELLED BY WAR.

Messrs. Vickers in their response to the claim contend that there is no debt due, and that Krupps are not entitled to any of the accounts claimed. They assert that the agreement of October 1, 1902, was dissolved on August 4, 1914, by the outbreak of war, and, or was dissolved as from August 4, 1914, by Article 299a of the Treaty of Versailles. They further rely upon Article 306 of the Treaty, by reason whereof they assert that the creditors' claim is barred.

It is understood, adds the Times, that if Kruppa were to succeed in their claim the greater part of the money would have to be found by the British Government, as Vickers, Limited, have been indemnified by the Ministry of Munitions and the Admiralty against any such claim by the German firm as that which is now before the Tribunal.

RE-MARRIED WIDOWS 20,797 IN BRITAIN

Of the 20,797 widows who re-married in England and Wales during 1923, 11,551 chose bachelors as their second partners and 9,246 were led to the altar by widowers.

In the same year 24,906 widowers ventured again on the sea of matrimony, 15,657 marrying spinsters.

These figures are contained in the Registrar-General's statistical review of the year.

The total number of marriages during the year was 292,408. There were 750,131 births registered, and the deaths numbered 444,365. The estimated population in the middle of the year was 38,403,000. Suits for dissolution of marriage numbered 2,763, and for annulment 71. The number of decrees nisi made absolute was 2,067.

W. H. Brown, J.P., secretary of the Metropolitan Railway Company, is retiring, after over 52 years' service.

ALL RED AIRSHIP LINE; TRIAL FLIGHTS TO BEGIN IN NEW YEAR TO EGYPT

Plans for the "all red" airship line to India and Australia are so far advanced that trial flights to Egypt will be made early in the New Year.

These will be carried out by the reconditioned R 33 and by next summer it is expected that the necessary data will have been obtained for the construction of the Air Ministry's new craft.

There will be a saving of 10 days on the trip to Bombay and the fare from London to Bombay will be about £52. Construced with a skeleton of stainless steel, the airship will carry 100 passengers.

From the spring of 1927, The Daily Chronicle learns officially, it is expected that the new giant sky liner now being constructed at Cardington, near Bedford, will be in commission on the airship route to India.

Trial trips to Egypt will be made by the reconditioned R 33 early in the new year.

By the summer of next year it is anticipated that the shed at Cardington will have been enlarged and the necessary technical data obtained from the flight of the sister ship to permit of the laying down of the keel of the R 101, which is the designation of the Air Ministry's new craft.

The skeleton of the airship will be built of stainless steel, and each separate part, although extremely light, will be capable of withstanding an enormous strain.

Accommodation is to be provided for 100 passengers. There will be every comfort and every luxury, and, for the first time, it will be possible to smoke with safety on board.

This will eliminate one of the few disadvantages of travel by air, for even on the Continental air "expresses" smoking is prohibited.

SLEEPING BERTHS.

The ship has been so designed that the sleeping accommodation is on a separate deck from the living and smoking rooms.

Three important airship stations are to be constructed — at Cardington, Cairo and in India. These stations will be equipped with repair sheds—the dry docks of the sky liners—mooring masts of a height of 180 feet and equipped with passenger and goods lifts for connecting with the stationary ship from the ground, and with commodious hotel and other accommodation for the comfort of the ultra-modern traveller.

Each of the two new ships to ply on the route to India—already dubbed the Socialist airship and the Capitalist airship respectively, because one of the craft is being built by the Air Ministry and the other for the Ministry by private enterprise—will be equipped with seven engines, each developing 600 h.p.

These motors, now being developed to the point of perfection, will burn heavy gas oil fuel instead of petrol. This will not only reduce to a minimum the risk of fire in the air, but will make for a much lower cost of running.

25 DAYS' "RANGE."

A speed of between 70 and 80 miles an hour is anticipated from the leviathans. The trip to Bombay will be carried out in two stages, the first part being a non-stop flight to Cairo, and from there the ships will go on direct to India.

The trip to Bombay will take about 5 days, a saving of 10 days on the present time. With the extension to Perth, in Australia, as is ultimately contemplated, it will be possible to reach Australia in about 11 days instead of the 24 needed at the present time.

Arrangements are being made for the craft to be made available for reconnaissance and other purposes in case of national emergency. They would each have a range of approximately 11,500 miles at a speed of 70 miles an hour.

If the speed were halved, the airships, still scouting over the face of the world at a much faster pace than any sea-going vessel, would be able to remain in the air for no fewer than 25 days, and cover a distance of over 20,000 miles.

LETTERS FOR 1½d.

The cost of the two craft will be rather less than £500,000. When in use for commercial purposes a crew of about 35 will be carried, including stewards and other personal servants.

From London to Bombay by airship will cost about £52, and a charge of 1½d., the same as inland postage, will, it is believed, be made for the carriage of letters.

The ships will be lighted throughout by electricity, and the kitchens will be equipped with electric cooking apparatus.

Plans are now under consideration for the establishment of feeder aeroplane services for the main airship route to India, and it is to consider these that Air Vice-Marshall Sir W. Sefton Brancker is, in part, making his air trip to the East.

WOMEN IN QUEER TRADES IN BRITAIN

Interesting Statistics on How People Earn Their Living

982 STREET ARTISTS

Girl Glaziers and Slate Masons Among Many Occupations

In all England and Wales there were in 1921 only 982 street artists, of whom 105 were women.

This is but one of the many curious facts to be gathered from a study of the "Census of Occupations," which has become available to the inquisitive at the price of 24s.

Of the male population of 13,901,108, who were twelve years old or more, only 1,738,300 were unoccupied or retired. Out of the total of 15,699,505 women and girls under the same classification, no fewer than 10,634,478 were registered as unoccupied.

By far the most populous occupation is that of personal service—including institutions, clubs, hotels, and so forth— which employed 1,676,425 women and 339,044 men, but of these totals 1,148,698 women and 61,000 men were engaged in indoor domestic service.

Agriculture and mining and quarrying were the runners-up for first place.

No fewer than 1,743 women were employed in trades having to do with building. Two hundred and sixty of them were employed as managers, seventy-six were glaziers, 127 tile-layers, eighty-four stonecutters and dressers, and sixty-nine slate workers and slate masons.

Entertainment and sports employed 67,305 men and 27,981 women.

There were 568,034 men and 420,695 women engaged as clerks, draughtsmen and typists.

Perhaps the most unexpected occupation upon which women have entered is that which comes under the heading of "Stationary engine driver and dynamo motor attendants." There were 156,281 men thus engaged—and two women.

The foreign-born population totalled 230,134 persons. The country from which the largest number came was Russia, with 24,023 men and 23,308 women.

LORD ASHFIELD TO HEAD DYE CONCERN

Appointed Chairman of British Dyestuffs

Lord Ashfield has been appointed chairman of the British Dyestuffs Corporation, in succession to Sir William Alexander, M.P., who, a few months ago, announced his intention of resigning.

The concern has a capital of more than £9,000,000.

Lord Ashfield was born in 1875, at Derby, but went to Detroit soon afterwards. He started life as a messenger in the Detroit Tramway Company at fourteen years of age. When he was seventeen he was made a superintendent, and was later appointed general superintendent at a salary of £1,000 a year.

At the age of twenty-eight he went as general manager to the New Jersey Tramways Company at £3,000 a year.

He is chairman and managing director of the Underground Electric Railways, Metropolitan District Railway, London Electric Railways, Central London Railway, City and South London Railway, London General Omnibus Company, Associated Equipment Company. He was President of the Board of Trade from 1916 to 1919, and in 1917 was Mr. Lloyd George's youngest Cabinet Minister.

Lord Ashfield's previous position as a Government representative on the board of the British Dyestuffs Corporation has been filled by Sir Alfred Mond.

MEN WHO PAINT BUT CAN'T WRITE

Dockers' Art Academy Has Brilliant Members—Clever Mathematician Found

Pictures painted by dockers, vanmen and unemployed working men of Stepney, were on show when an exhibition of the work done by the Stepney Men's Institute was opened by Lord Eustace Percy, the Minister for Education, at the Ocean street London County Council school, Mile End, E.

More than six hundred men living and working in the Stepney district belong to the institute. Two hundred of the present members are out of work.

MIGHTIER THAN THE PEN.

"Many of these men who paint or work here cannot read or write," said W. T. Young, the head of the institute, yesterday. "Give some of them a pen and they are beaten. Give them a paint brush and colors and they will in time turn out quite brilliant pictures.

"Some of the men—many of whom are middle-aged—are excellent musicians, and save up money to buy their instruments. They study with interest the intricacies of musical theory.

"In mathematics our men have won many high certificates. One man who joined when he was just an idle loafer who had never done any work at all, proved so brilliant that he passed examination after examination, and is now earning a good salary as instructor in a school."

A stained-glass window in memory of the late Duchess of Albany is to be unveiled in Esher (Surrey) Parish Church, where the Duchess was a regular worshipper during her residence at Claremont Palace.

Man Forgets His Wedding Day and is Hustled to Church

"Christmas is a popular season for weddings. I have attended as many as 12 in one day."

This is the testimony of H. H. Hutson, who with his father has served as registrar at Uxbridge for nearly half a century and is now about to retire.

Mr. Hutson tells how, on one occasion the bride waited vainly for the arrival of the bridegroom. As the hour was getting late messengers were sent to the man's home, where they found him in his shirt sleeves, digging in his garden. He had forgotten the date of the wedding!

Minus coat and waistcoat, the bridegroom was hurried to the church and, in that unconventional dress, he went through the ceremony.

Mr. Hutson has attended the wedding of a millionaire and that of a couple who were so poor that they had to sell some of the wedding clothes in order to pay the fees.

Only one ceremony of the thousands Mr. Hutson has attended was stopped. The bridegroom's father objected, and a week later the disappointed young man took his life.

YELLOW STARLING HAS 10-INCH TAIL

Amongst the 12,000 entries in the International Poultry and Pigeon Show, which opened at Olympia, the rarest bird was said to be a yellow-breasted starling, with a tail about 10 inches long.

One of a pair, it came from Abyssinia, the companion dying on account of the British climate.

The survivor has to be fed on ant eggs and dried flies.

Three large turkeys on view were valued at £100 each.

BROCK ST. RINK NOT OPEN UNTIL 8 P.M. TUESDAY

Action by Management to Ensure Best Possible Ice for Senior Game.

HAMILTON HERE

Rowing Club Revealed Strong Team Against Parkdale at Toronto Arena.

In order to ensure the best possible ice conditions for tomorrow night's Senior O.H.A. game at Brock Street Rink between Hamilton Rowing Club and the Petes, it has been decided not to open the rink to the public until 8 o'clock. General admission tickets will be on sale at Wright's tomorrow afternoon and evening so that the majority of the fans will be able to get their pasteboards before going to the rink, and there should be no confusion over the late opening.

It has been found in other seasons that when the fans were admitted early the ice failed to stand up, and even on a cold night grew sticky before the game was over. With nobody allowed in until 8 o'clock, the conditions should be much better.

The regulation in regard to smoking will also be strictly enforced.

Tomorrow's game, the first Senior O.H.A. game to be seen here since the Petes battled against St. Michael's and other Toronto teams years ago, is arousing great interest, and the accommodation of Brock Street Rink will be severely taxed.

The Hamilton team is confident of giving the S.P.A. champions a terrific argument for the honors, while the Petes, on the other hand, while aware of the fact that the Scullers have dug up a very strong outfit, are hopeful of adding another scalp to their already long string that up to date includes Niagara Falls, Preston, Parkdale, Sault Ste. Marie and Aura Lee twice. The Petes expect to start their regular line-up against the Ambitious City invaders, and are taking no chances in view of the stand made by the Scullers against Parkdale.

Tomorrow's game is the only home game for several weeks, as the Petes play Parkdale in Toronto a week from tomorrow and Varsity at the Arena the following Tuesday before their next home game, which brings Parkdale here on Friday, Jan. 23rd.

The game will start at 8.30 p.m. sharp.

MAJOR LEAGUES OPEN ON TUESDAY, APRIL 14

Ban Johnson at Session, But Mum on Landis Dispute.

PITTSBURGH, January 5. — The drafting of the major league baseball schedules for 1925, to open Tuesday, April 14, and close October 4, was completed on Saturday by the schedule committee of the National and American Leagues which has been in session here for two days. The opening dates for the two leagues were announced as follows:

National: Pittsburgh at Chicago; St. Louis at Cincinnati; New York at Boston; Philadelphia at Brooklyn.

American: Cleveland at St. Louis; Chicago at Detroit; Boston at Philadelphia; Washington at New York.

B. B. Johnson, president of the American League, who was unable to attend the first sessions of the schedule committee, finally arrived, and participated in the final session. The National League was represented in the schedule meeting by President John Heydler and Barney Dreyfuss, owner of the Pittsburgh club.

Mr. Johnson's only statement on baseball matters while in Pittsburgh was confined to the prediction that "baseball is in for a big year."

He declined to comment on the recent controversy with Baseball Commissioner Landis.

SENATORS WIN FROM HAMILTON

Cy Denneny in Great Form And Scored Both Goals in 2-0 Victory.

AN OPEN GAME

OTTAWA, January 5. — Registering their third consecutive victory within a week the Ottawa Senators triumphed over the league-leading Hamilton Tigers here on Saturday night by a score of 2 goals to nil.

The victory keeps the locals on even terms with Montreals in the National Hockey League race.

A capacity house turned out to see the two teams, which in their last local encounter battled 80 minutes to a scoreless draw. The hockey throughout was high class and replete with thrills. The close checking hang-on-to-your-man type of hockey which usually attends a game between two such evenly matched teams was missing last night and in its place the spectators were treated to a splendid exhibition of the open game. While the checking was hard, close and consistent there was enough of the aggressive hockey by both teams to present numerous chances for goals, and to keep the crowd in a high state of excitement at all times.

The veteran star of the Ottawa team, Cy Denneny, earned the highest laurels. The sharpshooter turned in one of his very best games, and it was appropriate that the two goals secured by his team should both have gone from his stick.

PIRATES TO COAST

Pittsburgh Team Will Leave for California on February 24.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Jan. 5.—The Pittsburg National League Baseball Club will leave Tuesday, February 24, for the spring training camp at aso Robles, Calif., it is announced. Three weeks of practice ending March 20 will be followed by a series of exhibition games with San Francisco, Los Angeles and Vernon clubs on the Pacific Coast. The return east will be started April 6 with a number of other exhibition games arranged before arrival at Chicago for the opening game of the National League season with the Chicago Cubs on April 14.

CHAMONIX CHOSEN

1928 Olympic Winter Sports Will Be Held There.

PARIS, Jan. 5.—Following negotiations between the Dutch and French Olympic committees during the past two months it has been virtually decided that the winter sports of the 1928 Olympic games will be held at Chamonix, France.

The choice of the Dutch Olympic committee of Chamonix which was the scene of the 1924 winter sports ends the controversy between the Scandinavian countries and Switzerland which had reached an acute stage owing to the efforts of these nations to persuade Holland—which is unable to hold winter games because of the lack of ice and snow—to turn over the winter part of the 1928 Olympic programme to them.

"CARDS" RELEASE BELL.

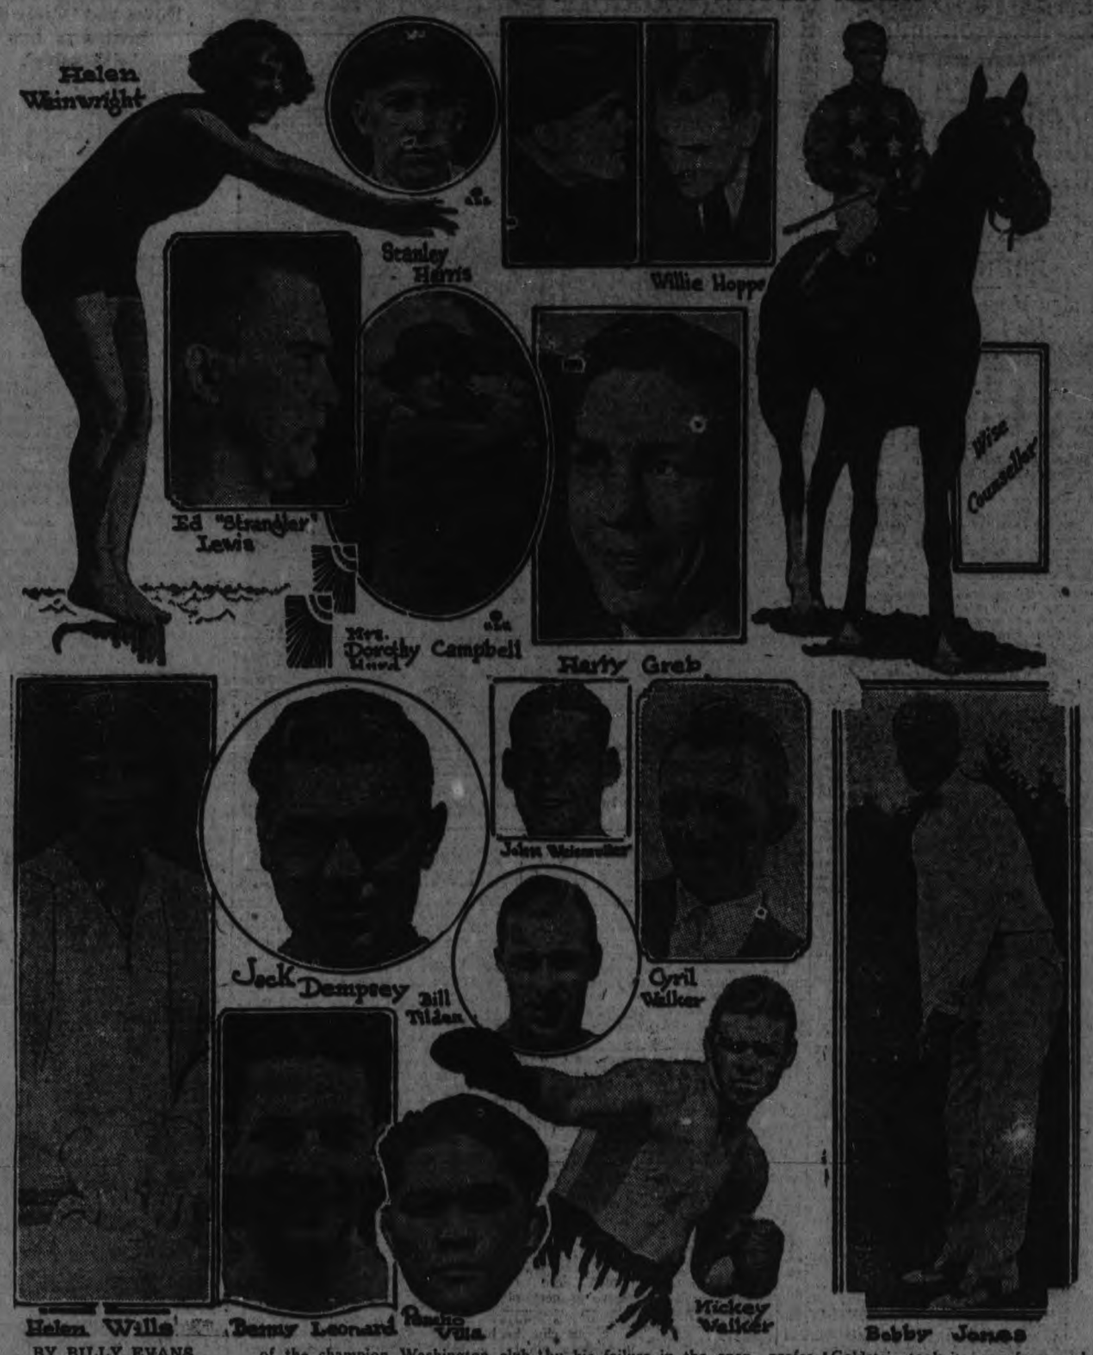
ST. LOUIS, Mo., Jan. 5.—Herman Bell, the big right hander, who gained fame with the St. Louis Cardinals by defeating the Boston Braves in both games of a double-header last July 19, has been released under option to the Milwaukee Club of the American Association, it is announced.

VARSITY WON IN BOSTON.

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 4. — Toronto defeated Boston College 4 to 2 here last night in an exciting hockey game. Notwithstanding the fierceness of the play it was the kind of a contest that pleased the large crowd.

FEW NEW CHAMPIONS CROWNED IN 1924

OLD FAVORITES LIKE TILDEN, WILLS AND HORNSBY REPEAT



BY BILLY EVANS

The biggest upset of the year in sport circles was staged in major league baseball.

Washington, more or less an outsider, not only won the American League pennant but also captured the world series from the Giants.

The triumph of Washington was all the more unusual, since Stanley Harris, youthful manager, was making his big league debut.

Rogers Hornsby repeated his specialty of leading the National League in batting, while Babe Ruth showed the way in the American.

Hornsby, by taking down the 1924 honors, established a new National League record, the winning of the title for five successive years.

Ruth, who has tasted of almost every other baseball sweets, finally achieved his ambition of leading the American League in batting.

Walter Johnson, famous pitcher of the champion Washington club, and Dazzy Vance, Brooklyn's ace, were voted the most valuable players in their respective leagues.

Tennis and Golf.

Bill Tilden, although harder pressed than usual, still retains the title of world's greatest tennis exponent. Vincent Richards gets second position. As usual the United States won the Davis Cup, the world series of tennis.

Among the women, Helen Wills, the California marvel, dominated the tennis field as clearly as did Bill Tilden.

It was as usual a bad year for golf champions. No major champion succeeded in repeating. Bobby Jones took the amateur title away from Max Marston, but in turn was deprived of his open laurels by Cyril Walker.

Gene Sarazen lost further prestige by his failure in the open professional championship, which went to Walter Hagen, also a victor for the second time in three years in the British open.

Dorothy Hurd of Pittsburgh provided an upset by winning the women's championship, succeeding Edith Cummings.

For the first time Chick Evans was unable to win the western amateur, his monopoly of this important sectional tournament being broken by Harrison Johnson of St. Paul.

Larry Nabholtz made the most rapid forward stride of any young professional in the country last year, while George Von Elm in the far west was the leading amateur, next to Jones.

Aside from activity in the bantamweight division, the year was a flop in Fistiana. The bantamweight title changed heads twice. Abe Goldstein took it away from a shadow of the old Joe Lynch, and was in turn dethroned by Eddie Cannonball Martin just as the old year was limping out the back door.

Johnny Dundee grew too fat to defend the featherweight title and gave it up. A featherweight tourney was held and it simmered down to Kid Kaplan of Meriden, Conn., and Danny Kramer, the Philadelphia southpaw, and Kaplan was crowned champion Friday night in their bout at Madison Square Garden, New York.

The total and complete explosion of the Luis Firpo heavyweight boom was another note of interest. The so-called Wild Bull looked a joke fighter against Harry Wills and Charley Weinert, bearing out predictions of expert observers that he would be a mark for any fairly good battler who fought him intelligently.

BOSTON BRUINS GAVE MONTREAL A BATTLE

Tailenders Tied the Score, But Lost by 4-3.

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 5.—Montreal just managed to snatch victory from the hustling plugging Boston Bruins in the scheduled National Hockey League game played here Saturday night, Cecil Hart's newly gathered team defeating their equally recently assembled opponents 4 to 3.

Victory came only after a stubborn third period in which Art Ross Bruins overcame a 3 to 0 lead registered against them and tied the count after persistent rushes. However, the game was only deadlocked fifty seconds before Dutch Cain, substitute Montreal defence player, cleared from in front of Benedict and, working his way through the Boston opposition, circled the final defences and beat Stewart for what proved the winning tally. There were five players a side when the score was registered.

It was a hectic third period, with a free fight between Sammy Rothschild and "Red" Stuart, which for a time threatened to become general, and other minor frays thrown in and generally mixed with the swaying tide of fortune as the visitors made their final effort to come from behind to break their long list of consecutive losses.

Outside of that it was not a great hockey struggle. Then the teams started slowly and failed to show any thrilling hockey until well on in the middle session, if some spectacular work by both Benedict and Stewart in the opposing nets is excepted. These two gave some pulse-throbbing exhibitions behind rather wobbly protection in the early stages.

Whooping Cough Is a Very Serious Trouble Her 5 Children Had It

Mrs. S. H. Craig, R.R. No. 1, Palmerston, Ont., writes:—"Two years ago last winter, our five children had very severe attacks of whooping cough. We were recommended, by our druggist, to use which we did with the greatest of success. It cleared out the throat and bronchial tube, and loosened the phelgm so that they were able to cough it up, and in no time I had quenched the 'whooping'."

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP

"Dr. Wood's" is put up only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, and has been on the market for the past 35 years. Be sure and get the genuine.

CAMPBELLFORD JUNIORS GOOD

Trent Town's "Home Brews" Unselfish and Check Hard.

SANDERS A STAR.

The following is a Belleville impression of Campbellford's junior hockey team which lost by one goal in the overtime game played in Belleville Friday night.

Campbellford presented a full team of "home brews" and they certainly will be considerably better if they will stick together. All work with a vim and are unselfish to a degree in passing the puck. It was the first game for many of them in the O.H.A. and although a trifle nervous they soon found their bearings and went about to play hockey as they learnt it. Saunders their goalie is a real team in himself and quite overshadows some intermediate goal tending seen right in this rink and there has been some good ones seen between the sticks. Copperthwaite and Lemeyre are big husky boys who can give a legitimate check and make one feel it as Red Townsend and a few others can testify. They rush straight up the ice and each of them carries a wicked shot. Ayrhart at centre and Parsons on the wing are the speed boys of the outfit and are good, Ayrhart being especially lucky and plays his position neatly. Parsons' wings them from the left boards right smartly and has good hockey brains. Blue the other winger is an exact counter part of Newsy Lalonde when he was breaking in. He skates in a stooping position with a long graceful stride and uses only one hand on the stick when going fast and wow! he does pack them in when in a scoring position.

Why did not Belleville win farther off. Two reasons stand out clearly bunching in centre and roaming all over the ice. On this team here as composed there are boys who have been playing hockey for some time and they showed for some time last night that they had assimilated little or nothing that has been taught them. Not staying in position, bunching and above all when breaking, doing circles leaving the wings to go on their own. Then if they did break with the wings they would not pass the puck and thus many fine opportunities were lost. This was corrected to a great extent in the last period and in the overtime and when they got squared away they smothered the opposition.

HASTINGS AT MARMORA

Trent Valley League Opening Tonight With Hastings as Visitors.

MARMORA, Jan. 3. — Marmora commences its hockey season on Jan. 5th, when Hastings will be encountered on the local rink. A good game should result.

Mr. F. H. Chapman is spending a few days at his home in Kingston.

Mr. John Wiley spent New Year's Day in Trenton.

Mr. W. L. Regg is taking a short holiday in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry McWilliams, of Belleville, are spending a few days with the former's mother, Mrs. C. McWilliams.

Colds seem to be very prevalent here just now.

IN POLITICS

There will be a hot time in Chicago's city council if this red-skinned gentleman succeeds in breaking in. He's a candidate for alderman form the 47th ward. More than 400 voters signed his petition. His name is Hurci Warweley, for political purposes, but Horse War Water in the Cherokee tribe of which he is a fullbloded member.

ANDERSON FREED, RE-ARRESTED

When William H. Anderson, New York superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, was released from Sing Sing after serving nine months for forgery, he was rearrested on four bench warrants on four indictments pending against him. Anderson is shown in the center with Detective Kane at the left and Rev. Charles F. Ross, pastor of the Central Methodist church of Yonkers, N.Y., at the right.

MAY OUST MINISTER.

Church Board Objects to Down and Outers Being Invited to Join in Worship.

CHICAGO, Ills., Jan. 5.—(United Press.)—Rev. T. A. Mills, fighting pastor of the aristocratic New England Congregational church, who may be forced to resign because he invited radicals and down and outers to his church, has served notice that he will not be swayed from his ideas and ideals.

At the Sunday services yesterday, Rev. Mills, a major in the World War, passed out pamphlets to all who entered the church. The pamphlets read:

"Welcome to all who are weary and seek rest; to all who mourn and long for comfort; to all who struggle and desire the victory; to all who sin and need the Saviour; to all who are idle and look for service; to all who are strangers and want fellowship; to all who hunger and thirst after righteousness; and to whosoever will come, this church opens wide her doors and in the name of Jesus Christ, her Lord, says welcome."

A meeting of the Church Council January 14th is expected to determine whether Rev. Mills is to stay or leave.

Referee Suspended — Montreal Club's Progress.

ON THE SOCCER FIELD—C

The Scottish Junior F.A. has been handing out some stiff sentences that should interest all connected with the game here. A strange point arose in a recent case, where a linesman was suspended sine die. The referee who had originally complained against this linesman withdrew the charge, so the secretary suggested that the best thing to do was to raise the suspension on the linesman and strike the referee off the list. This strong measure was immediately agreed to and acted upon without one dissentient voice. Another case was where a player who had been suspended for three months appealed for a reduction of his sentence. Without wasting ten seconds in considering the appeal, the committee intimated that the original sentence must stand.

Enterprising Club.

The Lachine club, of Montreal, is blessed with a bunch of loyal supporters. They have organized a club within the club, and have pledged themselves to provide a real ground for the team that will eventually cost $20,000. The ground has already been purchased near Dominion station, and $7,000 has been put down as a starter. It is completely enclosed, and just before the cold weather set in the field was plowed. A start has already been made on the grand stand, and by the opening of next season the Lachine club will have one of the best soccer grounds in the Dominion.

TORONTO, Jan. 5. — (Canadian Press).—Although the Canadiens had a strenuous game in Hamilton on Thursday night, and were not in the best of shape to meet the St. Patrick's at the Arena on Saturday night, the Irish started out in the first period to play the puck instead of the man, and this apparently wrong selection of tactics resulted in the Canadiens scoring a 3 to 1 victory, and as Hamilton lost in Ottawa, the habitants are again back on top running of leader with the Hams.

REGINA, aJnuary 5. — Canadian Press. — Herbert S. Maier, charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of his twelve year old son, Herbert, on December 9th, and committed for trial at Maple Creek on Saturday, declared in court, "I am to blame. I wish I had a gun to shoot myself and end all."

Two brothers and a sister of the dead boy, gave the court a story of abuse by the father, and this evidence with that of Doctor Dawson, moved the court to commit Maier.

Mrs. Maier, the step-mother of the dead boy, is also charged with manslaughter.

NEWS OF BRIGHTON.

Three Act Comedy Staged in the Town Hall — Personals.

BRIGHTON, Jan. 5.—A most amusing farcical comedy, in three acts, entitled "All Tangled Up," was staged in the Town Hall on New Year's night, under the auspices of the Willing Workers of the Presbyterian Church.

The play was under the direction of Miss Ruby M. Cheer, and those taking part reflected the hours of work and planning of not only their directress but of each individual. Those who were fortunate enough in being able to attend were kept almost continuously in convulsions of laughter.

Specialties between acts were of a high order. A number of delightful solos were sung by Mrs. F. Bradley and Mrs. E. W. McHenry. Little Miss Dorothy Blythe was given very hearty applause for the rendering of the sword dance and other Scottish dances. The well-known comic singer, Mr. Rannie McConnell, sang in excellent voice "Shall I Have It Bobbed or Shingled?"

St. Andrew's orchestra, consisting of sixteen local musicians, played several musical numbers, which were well received. The orchestra is certainly something worth while, and is always willing to assist the various churches in rendering an up-to-date musical programme.

The cast was composed of Mr. Cecil Brown as Major Hallis Halliday, who first became all tangled up in his social affairs and was forced to seek the assistance of his partner in business, Lester MacVey, acted by Mr. H. Little. Mr. Hubert McConnell acted to perfection the part of Keeling Plantum, who not only buried his dead, but carved their tombstones and wrote the epitaphs. The remaining parts were well taken care of by Mr. Rutherford Langdon as Lieut. George Rapley, Miss Edna Ross as Mrs. Halliday, Miss Colleen McCann as Vernie, Miss Muriel Ross as Clara, and Mr. Kenneth Langdon as O'Toole, the Irish butler, who was always getting his master into trouble with his better half.

A large number of local people and many from the surrounding district were present, the hall being nearly filled. The sum of one hundred and forty-one dollars was realized.

Miss Madeline Bellamy has again taken up her studies at Peterborough Normal School.

Master Harold Lake has returned home after spending the Christmas holidays in Belleville.

Mr. H. M. Stoneburg is at home again after spending the summer in Rochester.

Mr. Charles Plumpton and his bride have returned from their honeymoon and are now residing in Brighton.

Among those returning to Toronto after the holidays are Misses Evelyn Wilson, Bertha Mowry, Alice Ross, Audrey Harden, Rose Strong, and Messrs. C. King and W. Rudd.

Miss Lyda Lapp has returned to Ottawa after having visited Mrs. C. P. Lapp.

The local plant of the Canadian Canners Ltd. has resumed operations after two weeks' idleness.

OLDEST BUSINESS MAN.

Kupper Biere Runs Butcher Shop at the Age of 105 Years.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—(Canadian Press).—Kupper Biere, a butcher who says he is the oldest active business man in the United States, celebrated his 105th birthday at his home in Hoboken yesterday by eating a hearty dinner, smoking a strong cigar, and refraining from giving advice on how to attain long and happy life.

"I've taken care of myself," he said. "I've gotten up every morning at six; I've worked hard, but just the same I've always done what I wanted to do and have never worried. There's nothing to say beyond that."

NEW YORK GLIMPSES

The Unbidden Guest at Social Functions Problem for Hostesses.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—The unbidden guest is disturbing hostesses in New York's upper society. Social conventions have been generally disregarded by the younger set for several seasons past. Acceptances to invitations are not sent, and the hostess has no way of knowing how many guests she will have.

Because of this condition it has been possible for a number of people, especially young lounge lizards who are not on the best lists, to attend the functions of the ultra-exclusive.

Many of the younger girls are not a bit particular as to whether their young men friends are listed in the social register and, really, you know, those bounders have no business at some of the parties they attend.

Yet they presume on their acquaintances and walk in on parties with a merry hello to everybody they recognize—and the poor hostess can't recall for the life of her whether they were on her invitation list. Indeed, she may not have known by face half of those she invited. This is especially true of big functions given at hotels.

Now in the very best circles a young lady who knows faces is stationed at the entrance, and if she is in doubt looks over the list of acceptances and asks the intruders to leave.

"Really, I think you have made a mistake in the address. Your invitation possibly was to another party," is her polite formula of ejection.

Here's a New York romance for you The first time he saw her he was on a Broadway car and she was on the pavement. Before he could get off she was lost in the crowd. The second time he saw her was as a theatre audience rose. Somehow she got away. The third time he was in a subway express and she was in a local and both trains were stalled. Their windows were opposite. The fourth time they were in a Fifth Avenue bus and he might never have seen her, except that he overheard her tell the conductor that she lacked the necessary dime. So now they are married.

Caruso's last public appearance was in "La Juive." Many regarded his make-up the best he had ever achieved. He had visited many strange parts of the city to study Hebrew characteristics. Now the role of Eleazar has passed on to Martinelli, who in turn has spent many days in research. He sat one entire afternoon on the grounds of the Jewish Home for the Aged in the Bronx studying the inmates.

Business is driving the churches as well as the private mansions from Fifth Avenue. The Church of the Heavenly Rest at 45th Street has been sold to make room for a 22-storey office building. The buyers paid $2,000,000 and the church in turn paid $1,000,000 for a plot at Ninetieth Street and Fifth Avenue on which a new edifice will be built. The old church contains some of the finest wood carvings in America.

THEATRES

AT THE ROYAL.

"SIREN OF SEVILLE."

Elaborate and Spectacular Film at Royal To-Day.

All the glamour of old Spain, all the romance of love-mad nights, all the passion that throbs in Latin breasts have been injected into "The Siren of Seville," Priscilla Dean's first Hunt Stromberg production for Producers' Distributing Corporation, which is to be the special attraction at the Royal Theatre to-night.

To see "The Siren of Seville" is to be transported from the humdrum eternally busy world to a country of eternal love.

Few screen plays have had such a colorful and authentic background as this fiery romance. Not only has Seville been reproduced for the picture, but the highways and byways of provincial Spain serve as the setting for some of the most thrilling action.

One of the outstanding features of "The Siren of Seville" is the bullfight. For the first time in the history of the screen authentic scenes of Spain's national sport are shown. This is not faked action, but the genuine thing, especially staged for the camera by a retinue of professional matadors from Mexico City and Seville. Moreover, these skilled performers were able to enact such a thrilling sequence without bloodshed either to the animals or themselves.

In the title role Priscilla Dean gives the most effective performance of her brilliant career. The role offers her as colorful a characterization as "The Virgin of Stamboul" afforded her, and she takes advantage of it with a riper, better rounded knowledge of her art than she possessed when she starred in the earlier success.

AT THE CAPITOL.

ELINOR GLYN'S ROMANCE AT CAPITOL TODAY AND TUESDAY

Elinor Glyn is one novelist who writes entirely on inspiration. The picturization of her story, "His Hour," is at the Capitol today and Tuesday. This follows close upon the heels of the other great authoress' pictures, and promises even more of a thrilling love story than her elaborate screen production of "Three Weeks."

"His Hour" is an absolutely faithful picture of Russian aristocratic society before the revolution. Each character is drawn from life, each palace shown upon the screen is copied from its real prototype, and the writing of the novel was inspired, urged and supported by the Russians.

When Mrs. Glyn wrote "Three Weeks," the characterization of "the Lady" was considered by Russia to be very perfect and in consequence of this, the authoress was invited by members of the Royal family to pay a visit to St. Petersburg, with view to writing a novel with a Russian background.

"His Hour," Elinor Glyn's first production since "Three Weeks," is a film version of Mrs. Glyn's novel of a royal love in the Russia of old, has a cast headed by Aileen Pringle and John Gilbert, and includes such players as Emily Fitzroy, Bertram Grassby, Dale Fuller, Mario Carillo, Laurence Grant, and others.

Aileen Pringle was the heroine of "Three Weeks" and John Gilbert, the young leading man whom the English authoress selected as her ideal of a lover.

Miss Pringle has come into popular favor with astounding rapidity since her appearance in "Three Weeks," and later, in "True as Steel." Gilbert first won fame in the title role of "The Count of Monte Cristo," but has started an entirely new ascendency in popularity since coming under the guidance of Mrs. Glyn.

Others in the cast include Emily Fitzroy, Bertram Grassy, Dale Fuller Mario Carillo, Laurence Grant, Jacqueline Gadson and David Mir.

AT THE REGENT.

The Regent to-day brings before its patrons a masterpiece of film presentation, "The Orphans of the Storm." This is conceded to be D. W. Griffith's greatest picture. The extravagant gaities of the voluptuous court of King Louis, as well as the grim horrors of the French Revolution, are vividly brought before the eyes of present-day beholders. This makes this film of great educational value. The famous Gish sisters are at their best in this splendid film. A fine music score has been prepared for this picture, which will be presented by Ken. Blood's Concert Orchestra.

AT THE GRAND.

MUTT AND JEFF.

Bud Fisher's heroes are two cartoon creations that prove as amusing on the stage as in the newspaper strip, and as played by the old favourites, Freeman and Sullivan, in the performance of "Mutt and Jeff" at the Grand on Saturday, were responsible for gales of laughter. Little Jerry Sullivan has been seen here frequenly as "Jeff" and he grows funnier with each visit, while Freeman is always amusing as Jeff's elongated pal. The performance throughout was decidedly above the average. The principals all sang and danced cleverly and the chorus was well trained and not hard on the eyes. There was plenty of tuneful music and specialties of much merit, a sister team of dancers carrying off the bulk of the honours in this respect and at one time threatening to "stop the show." Tom Dalton gave an Al Jolson imitation that was most amusing and other specialties by the principals were well received.

The production will be remembered as one of the cleanest, brightest and liveliest "Mutt and Jeff" performances that has been seen here.

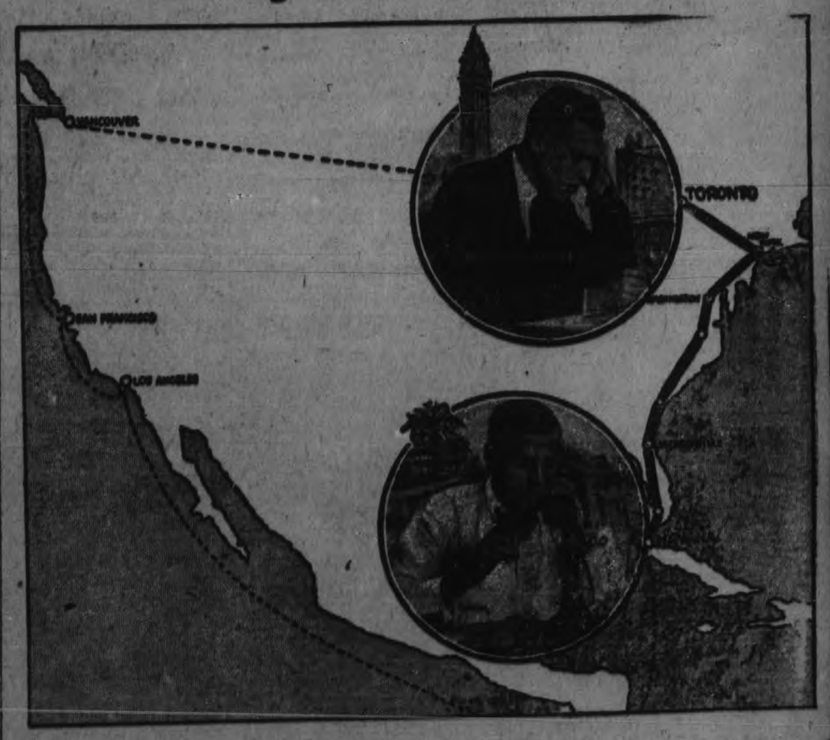
Staving Off Unemployment



Harry Turner, senior—self-made man, owner and manager of one of Canada's leading manufacturies was in need of a change. It was a case of rest now or a complete breakdown. He decided to rest and in his usual quick way purchased tickets for the Toronto-Vancouver tour via the Panama canal.

Harry Jr. was soon reigning in his father's stead. All went well until the chief chemist of the plant was struck down by an automobile and died without regaining consciousness. The secret formula for the manufacture of their specialty was known only to the chemist and Turner, Sr.

A few years ago such a situation would have been serious. Harry knew that his father would be spending a few days in Havana, Cuba.

In less time than it takes to tell, Turner Sr., was located by telephone and his son was advised where to find the precious formula.

So quickly was the information secured that not one of the employees in the factory ever knew how near they had come to an enforced holiday.

YET

Surplus army supplies have not all gotten on the market yet. Government still has 68 million dollars worth. Of this, 27 millions is in land and improvements.

While Uncle Sam lost money in the end, by selling for about a third of what he paid, some mighty good buys were made by tax-payers who were eventual consumers of the left-over war supplies. For instance, mosquito tents that ordinarily cost $6 apiece have been sold to the public as low as $1.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of our dear mother, Druscilla Arnott, who passed away January 4th, 1922:

When the evening shades are falling,
When we are sitting all alone,
To our hearts there comes a longing
If she only could come home,
Oft and oft our thoughts do wander
To the grave not far away
Where we laid our loving mother
Just three years ago to-day.

The marriage took place quietly on the afternoon of New Year's Day, at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Alden F. Bookhout, 516 Charlotte St., of Katharine Lucile Adee and Hubert Ryerson Sills, B.Sc., formerly of Kingston. The immediate relatives and friends of the bridal couple witnessed the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. A. J. Langford, pastor of Trinity Methodist church.

The bride who entered the drawing room on the arm of her cousin, Alden Bookhout, wore a beautiful gown of white chiffon taffeta, trimmed with point lace, and carried a bouquet of ophelia roses.

After the ceremony, a luncheon was served, Mr. and Mrs. Sills leaving for their home, at 204 Frederick avenue.

HEATH—RANGER.

A quiet but pretty wedding took place at six o'clock this morning at the Church of the Sacred Heart, when Evelyn, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Ranger, Romain street, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Clinton D. Heath of Norristown, Pa., son of Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Heath, Peterboro. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Gerard Maher.

The bride, who entered the church on the arm of her father, to the strains of the wedding march, played by Mr. J. Armstrong, wore a stylish gown of fawn crepe de chine, with beaded ornament, and a picture hat of black panne velvet with ostrich mount. She also wore an Isabella fox fur and carried a bouquet of ophelia roses.

The bridesmaid, Miss Gladys Heath was attired in a lovely frock of turquoise blue panne velvet, trimmed with grey fur, an Isabella fox fur neckpiece, and hat of metallic cloth, with ornament of gilded berries. She carried columbia roses.

Mr. Wilfred Ranger acted as best man.

After the ceremony, a dainty wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents, to immediate relatives and friends. Mr. and Mrs. Heath left on the noon train for their home in Norristown, Pa., the bride travelling in a tailored suit of blue cloth, with hat to match, and fur neckpiece.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of the late Mrs. Margaret Howden, 103 Rubidge street, Peterborough, who passed away 4th January, 1924:

Our mother dear who passed away
From earth to dwell in heaven,
The summons came, she could not stay,
Our earthly ties are riven,

Our family group is broken now
One vacant chair is there,
An empty place at our repast
Gives grief that we must bear.

Her smile it always cheered our way
And made our burden light,
A shade has grown o'er the day
Since she has left our sight.
—Inserted by the Howden Family, Ennismore, Ontario.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of Richard Davis, aged 96 years, who departed this life on Jan. 4th, 1924:

Hush! blessed are the dead
In Jesus' arms who rest
And lean their weary head
Forever on His breast.
—Inserted by His Grandaughters, Pearl and Exetta Davis.

IN MEMORIAM.

WALLER — Robert James. A loving tribute to the cherished memory of my angel Daddy, who passed on to the realms of peaceful rest on January 5, 1923.

Earth was more beautiful because of you.—Heaven enriched.
God's will be done! Your memory lives
A sacred thing I hold and cherish
Until the lonesome meet again;
The love I bear you does not perish.

The garment of your soul has passed away,
The shining spirit and the love-light stay;
The echo of your voice,—your eyes,—your smile,
Just as they were, are with me all the while.

Daughter Olive Jewell, New York City.

SIXTH SUCCESSIVE MAYORAL TERM FOR A. J. MEYERS, CAMPBELLFORD

High Honor for Son of Alderman W. H. Meyers Paid by Neighboring Town.

MAJORITY OF 233

Defeated Henry Redden — Majority of 29 for Memorial Monument.

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 6. — For the sixth successive year A. J. Meyers was elected Mayor of Campbellford yesterday with a majority of 233 votes in a contest with Henry Redden. This renewal of the electors' confidence was a notable personal tribute to Mayor Meyers and a graceful and generous recognition of the progressive and economic administration which, with the assistance of his municipal assistants, he has given this town during the last five years.

Mayor Meyers received majorities in three of the four wards.

Charles W. Palliser defeated Jas. L. Dorie for the deputy-reeveship by 758 to 400, with a majority of 358, and returns to the Council after an absence.

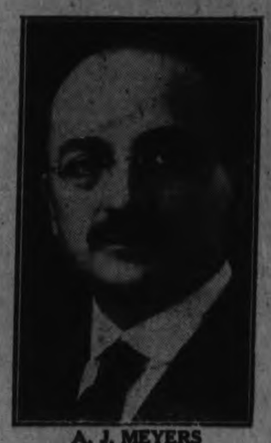
The councillors elected were G. A. Kingston 673, S. J. Moore 529, R. H. Cole 525, R. S. Southworth 518, W. S. Wiggins 499, and W. J. Abernethy 483.

War Memorial Vote.

The result of the plebiscite on the question which the Council referred to the ratepayers as to whether they desired that Campbellford's war memorial should be a monument or a community hall was rather indecisive. A majority of 29 was counted for a monument, the polling being 536 votes for a monument and 507 for a community building. Quite a number of ratepayers, judging by many blank ballots, could not make up their minds in a preference for a war memorial, and yesterday's vote is regarded as helpful and directive to the new council.

Reeve C. H. Davidson, who was re-elected by acclamation, completes the council for 1925, which was considered in the conversations last night as well equipped in municipal experience and ability. The four new members this year, all of whom have been in the council before, are Reputy-reeve Palliser and Councillors Moore, Southworth and Wiggins.

SIX TIMES MAYOR



A. J. MEYERS

Mayor of Campbellford for the past five years he was re-elected yesterday for his sixth successive term by a majority of 233 votes over Henry Redden. Mayor Meyers is a son of Alderman J. W. Meyers of Peterboro and evidently has given Campbellford efficient service. He is well known throughout Ontario among representatives of urban and rural municipalities.

LORD MAYOR OFFENDS.

Urges Strikers to Tighten Their Belts and Win Out.

LONDON, Jan. 6. — (Canadian Press Cable).—Lord mayors or mayors of English cities and boroughs, chief magistrates for the time being, are naturally expected to observe strict impartiality toward all sections of their fellow citizens; but Alderman Bailey, Lord Mayor of Sheffield, and for many years a trades union secretary, has somewhat shocked those who while differing from him politically supported his election to the chief civic office by his utterance in addressing local forgemen who are on strike.

"If I were you" he said "I should use all my power to win and if it took another six weeks I should tighten my belt and let them see I am not prepared to submit to the dictation of slavery".

Since delivering this address Bailey has stated that he was speaking merely as a trades unionist and not as Lord Mayor of the city, which statement hardly has been accepted as complete vindication. He absolutely dissociates himself from an attack of the strikers on a forge manager.

The majority of labor men who are elected lord mayors withdraw from trades union work during their year of office, but Ald. Bailey is carrying on both jobs.

A difficulty has arisen in Bradford, where the labor lord, Mayor Palin, refuses to utilize the chief magistrate's automobile unless his chauffeur joins the trades union. The corporation of Bradford, however, declines to insist upon the chauffeur joining the organization.

CANADA NEGOTIATING GERMAN TRADE TREATY

Only One of Dominions Seeking Favored Nation Treatment.

BERLIN, Jan. 6. — (Canadian Press cable, via Reuter's).—Standing alone among the British Dominions, Canada has opened negotiations with the German Government for a Customs agreement from Saturday next, when Germany's obligation under the peace treaty to give the Allies the most favored nation treatment expires, Britain's position was secured under the recent commercial treaty which contained a clause giving the Dominions the option of adhering to it.

Reuter's correspondent learns that Germany does not intend to give the most favored nation treatment to any of the Dominions after Saturday which has not responded on the same basis. Incidentally no agreement has been reached yet with France, Italy and Belgium, consequently the negotiators these days are making haste.

BOY VANISHES DOWN MANHOLE

Tripped While Grasping Straw From Waggon in Montreal Street.

YOUNGEST OF TEN

MONTREAL, Jan. 6.—Trying to get straw from a passing farmer's waggon, to feed his neighbor's goat cost seven year old Douglas Dillon his life here Monday morning, when he tripped as he was grasping the straw and fell head first down a man hole.

Employees of the City Sewers' Department working in the icy waters of the gulley here failed to reveal a trace of the body. The sewer runs straight to the river and it is estimated that in 20 minutes at most the boy would have been carried into the St. Lawrence.

Delphis Gervais, who was guarding the manhole which has been opened to receive snow, was within a yard of the sewer at the time. The boy apparently holding on to the sides of the sewer near the bottom, was screaming for help, Gervais lowered another civic employee at the end of a rope, but Douglas had mean while been swept away by the water which travels at a speed of about 10 miles an hour.

Cyril Dillon, aged 11, was a witness to his brother's fall. He told of the wagon approaching and Douglas running after the vehicle as it neared the manhole. Just as the wagon pass ed with Douglas clinging to the rear the boy lost his hold on the straw and pitched through the grating.

"Duggie" as he was called by his family was one of the youngest of 10 sons and daughters of Mr. and Mrs. George Dillon, of this city. "He is the first of the ten to go" said his grief-stricken father at the Dillon home last evening.

When news of the fatality reached the boy's mother she rushed to the street and attempted to jump down the sewer after her son, but she was seized by friends and passers-by who had been attracted to the scene by the screams of the grief-stricken mother.

GOUGH UNAWARE RETURNS FALSE EVIDENCE ENDS

Examination of Home Bank Director Concluding After Days on the Stand.

TIMBER VALUABLE.

Gough Declared He Believed Bank Audit Was Regular and Efficient.

TORONTO, Jan. 6.—Evidence in the trial of R. P. Gough, vice-president of the Home Bank, which closed its doors in August 1923, on charges of making false statements to the ministry of finance, will probably be concluded to-day, and counsel will start to address his Honor Judge Coatsworth. Two witnesses, Hon. W. A. Charlton and G. G. Boyd, a former British Columbia lumberman, gave evidence for the defence Monday afternoon regarding the British Columbia limits held by the Home Bank. Examination of Mr. Gough, who took the stand in his own behalf, was concluded shortly after noon after he had been in the box for over 32 hours, extending over a period of several days.

Mr. Gough answered a few questions at the afternoon session, stating that W. A. Machaffie, a former Home Bank employe, in his complaints about bank policy, had always aimed his criticism at General Mason, the general manager of the time and at M. J. Haney, the president of the time and he had never heard him criticize Cooper Mason, who succeeded to the general managership. Mr. Gough also stated that he knew the Frost, Pellatt and New Orleans accounts had been reviewed by the Minister of Finance. At the time there was another huge account from the Grain Growers which ran sometimes as high as three or four millions. This account was always well secured, said Mr. Gough. He didn't know yet that the monthly returns he had signed were false. He had always understood that a regular running audit of the bank was being made. He thought the auditor was efficient.

Valuable Timber.

Hon. Mr. Charlton said he was the member of a syndicate which owned a timber limit next to the Port McNeil limits on Vancouver island owned by the Home Bank or companies in which the bank was interested. He gave evidence that the Port McNeil was a good limit and valuable. He said there was little fire hazard and figured the increase in timber on a limit at from one to two per cent. a year because of natural growth. There would be a demand for all good timber in the future he stated.

G. G. Boyd was also interested in a firm which controlled limits on Vancouver island. He thought that from 1910 to 1918 the value of timber had doubled. He also considered Port McNeil limit as good stating that being near the water it only needed one logging railway, while limits in which he was interested had a double haul, increasing the cost of logging $1 to $2 per thousand. The crown had started cross examination when the trial was adjourned.

King Edward as Prince of Wales Won $500,000 Gambling in Berlin and Kaiser Made Bank Pay

BERLIN, Jan. 6.—How King Edward VII., when he was Prince of Wales, once won 2,000,000 marks ($500,000) from a son of Prince Radziwill, one of the leaders in Prussian demi-royalty and a crony of former Emperor William, has been revealed in connection with the current investigation into the banking policies pursued by the Prussian State Bank.

Dr. Karl von Furchard, the son of a former President of the official Prussian Bank, is authority for the statement that the Prince of Wales, during a visit to Berlin in the middle '90's, won $500,000 in the course of one night's gambling from young Radziwill. As the debt had to be paid within twenty-four hours, the elder Radziwill pledged his vast estates to the Prussian State Bank as collateral for the cash covering his son's gambling debt.

Emperor William, who was keen to have the Radziwill family escutcheon spared a blot, intervened and the bank condescended to advance the amount needed to cover the winnings of the Prince of Wales.

Shortly after this episode, Duke Ernst Gunther of Schleswig-Holstein, Emperor William's brother-in-law, appeared at the Prussian Bank for a personal loan, to be covered by his extensive agrarian estates. The bank's officials, however, believed the security inadequate, and despite the fact that Ernst Gunther was the husband of the Kaiser's sister, they refused him the accommodation.

Both episodes are recalled in connection with the bank's lax methods in advancing millions of marks to alien industrial and financial promoters on questionable security.

In this connection it is recalled that the Prussian State Bank, which was founded under the regime of Frederick the Great, once was victimized by adventurers from Pless, which is now part of Poland, who, in 1872, used the bank for "kiting" purposes. This incident has an interesting parallel in the present situation, which finds the venerable financial institution involved in alleged unsound transactions with the Barmat brothers, who also hail from Poland.

ENGAGEMENT OF PRINCES HEARD

England Discussing Rumor While King Sends One Son to the Orient.

WALES SOON, TOO.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—All England is discussing the rumored engagements of Prince Henry and Prince George, the two younger sons of King George and Queen Mary.

Prince Henry, twenty-four, third son of the King, and the military member of the Royal Family, was reported to be contemplating marriage to Lady Mary Scott, twenty, beautiful daughter of the Duke of Buccleuch, and a direct heir to the mantle of the House of Stuart.

Prince George, twenty-one, the King's youngest son and attached to the Royal Navy, is said to plan marriage to Miss Poppy Baring, twenty, daughter of Sir Godfrey Baring, Nubia House, Cowes.

Rift in One Romance.

All is not serene with the Royal romances, however.

While neither King George nor the Queen has voiced disapproval of either match, Prince George, it was reported, had been ordered by his father on a cruise to Chinese waters. This was taken as being a step to block a possible early marriage.

The King's object, it was said in Royal circles, was based upon the belief that the Prince of Wales would soon announce his engagement. It is not the desire of the Royal House to have either of the younger brothers marry before him.

The engagement of Prince George and Lady Mary has long been rumored.

Both Boys Popular.

Prince George, however, has always remained heart and fancy free as far as Royalty and British society knew.

Both princes are extremely popular with the British people. Both are accomplished horsemen and Prince Henry, according to London society, excels his brother, the Prince of Wales, as a dancer.

The old royalist line has long cherished the hope that Lady Mary and the King's son would wed, thus restoring the House of Stuart in the Royal line.

WILL RE-OPEN PROBE INTO FURNACE DEATH

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Jan. 6.—The Sheatsley furnace mystery, considered closed with a suicide verdict, returned more than a month ago by Coroner Joseph Murphy, leaped back into the light yesterday with the announcement of John R. King, county prosecutor, that the mysterious death of Mrs. Addie Sheatsley, Lutheran pastor's wife, will be investigated by the grand jury.

TEXT OF ALLIES NOTE TO BERLIN

Unofficial Translation of Statement Postponing Evacuation of Cologne.

AWAITING REPORT.

LONDON, Jan. 6. — (Canadian Press).—An unofficial translation of the Allied Ambassadors' note to Germany on the postponement of the Cologne evacuation is as follows:

"Article 249 of the treaty of Versailles of June 28, 1919, stipulates that German territory situated to the west of the Rhine with the bridgeheads shall be occupied by troops of the Allied and associated Powers during a period of 15 years, to run from the entry into force of the treaty, as a guarantee for the execution of said treaty by Germany.

"By the terms of Article 249 if the conditions imposed by said treaty have been faithfully carried out by Germany, the occupation foreseen in Article 428 shall successively be restricted at the expiration of the first five and then of the first ten years.

"The Allied Governments are already in a position to inform the German Government without awaiting January 10, 1925, that they have obtained proof showing that Germany has not yet fulfilled, and cannot possibly have fulfilled by that date, the conditions laid down in Article 249 so as to enable her to benefit by the clause relating to a partial evacuation.

"Thus, by merely referring to part five of the treaty, sufficient ground for the decision of the Allied Governments is to be found in information collected by the Inter-Allied Military Commission of Control in spite of some obstruction in regard to the extent to which the military clauses have been carried out.

Military Activities.

"For example, to mention only some essential points among facts already known the following facts have been ascertained:

"In violation of Article 160, the great general staff of the German army has been reconstituted in another form in violation of Article 174, short service volunteers have been recruited and trained; contrary to Article 168, the transformation of factories for the manufacture of war materials is far from being complete; contrary to Articles 164 to 169, a surplus of every kind has been found to exist beyond the amounts of military material allowed, and considerable illicit stocks of war materials have been discovered; contrary to Article 163 and to the decision taken by the Boulogne conference of June 6, 1920, the reorganization of the state police has not begun; contrary to Article 211, the German Government is far from having taken all the legislative and administrative measures demanded by the Allied Governments in the note of September 29, 1922. The Allied Governments, moreover, expect to receive a report of the Inter-Allied Commission of Control, giving the full results of the present general inspection. This report will enable them to determine what still remains to be done by Germany to carry out her obligations in military matters in the terms of Article 429.

"A further communication will be addressed to the German Government on this subject."

UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT RESTRICTS EXCESS DRAINAGE OF GREAT LAKES FOR CHICAGO SEWER

Present Flow of 600,000 Cubic Feet a Minute Must Be Reduced to 250,000 Cubic Feet Within Sixty Days — Federal Control of Navigable Waters Asserted.

TREATY OBLIGATION TO CANADA

Chicago Acts to Prevent Disease That Would Result from Less Flushing—Intimates That Alternative Sludge Method Would Require 20 Years to Provide.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—The supreme court yesterday affirmed the decision of the Federal district court at Chicago restraining the sanitary district from withdrawing from Lake Michigan water in excess of the 250,000 cubic feet a minute allowed by the Secretary of War.

In a sweeping decision the court recognized the full and complete authority of the Federal government and declared that those interested in maintaining the present volume of intake (600,000 cubic feet a minute must look to congress or the secretary of war for permission. To prevent any arbitrary action the court announced that its decision would not be given effect for sixty days, and that it was made without prejudice to any permit which the secretary of war might issue according to law.

Conference Called

Immediately after the announcement of the decision, the Illinois congressional delegation hastily summoned into conference, adopted two resolutions, one authorizing representative Madden to invite such persons into conference as he might deem advisable and the other pledging the delegation to stand united behind any proposals which might be considered to the best advantage of the state.

Referring to the "gravity and importance" of the question presented, to the large expenditures which has been made and which might be necessary in the future, as well as to its bearing upon "the welfare of millions of men,' 'the decision, prepared by Justice Holmes and read by Chief Justice Taft, in his absence, stated that such considerations, aside from adding to the solemnity of its duties did not increase the difficulty of a decision. The law on the subject was clear and the material facts presented were few, it stated.

Treaty Obligation

In the controversy, the court continued, the United States was asserting its sovereign power to regulate commerce and to control the navigable waters within its jurisdiction. In addition to its right to remove obstruction to inter-state and foreign commerce, the Federal government was also bound to carry out treaty obligations to a foreign power.

Chicago's Reaction

CHICAGO, Jan. 6. — Energetic measures will be taken at once to protect the Chicago area from a probable increase in disease which it is expected would result from the reduction of theflow of Lake Michigan water through the Chicago sewage system as ordered by the supreme court of the United States yesterday.

These steps will be outlined at an emergency meeting called for next Saturday, it was decided by the sanitary district trustees late Monday. Mayor William E. Dever, aldermen and all public officials of this city and of villages in the sanitary district a swell as commercial, industrial and civic leaders, will be present to consider the emergency.

On learning of the supreme court decision, which upheld an injunction granted the government by the United States court here, sanitary trustees and Major Rufus W. Putnam, regional army engineer, took into consideration the suggestion that the district apply to the secretary of war for a permit to continue the present flow until steps had been taken to dispose of Chicago's sewage in another manner than by the present means of diluting it with Lake Michigan water and sending it on its way down the Illinois and Mississippi Rivers.

Appeal to Congress

A move to ask congress to enact a law making the present flow of 10,000 cubic feet of water per second legal, was also started.

Engineers have been working for several years on plans to handle the sewage by a sludge method. By such a system the waste matter would be chemically treated before being emptied into the drainage canal. The system would cost upwards of $100,000,000 and could not be placed in operation before 1945, the engineers have said. The injunction upheld yesterday, required that the sanitary district cut its consumption of water to 250,000 cubic feet a minute within sixty days.

JOHN TRICK LOST SEAT IN OSHAWA

Defeated in Mayoralty Contest by H. P. Schell—School Board Issue.

OSHAWA, January 5th. — In the most stubbornly contested municipal Derby ever held run off in Oshawa, Herbert Peers Schell, to-day was returned winner over William John Trick for the Mayoralty by 256 majority.

The newly elected mayor is a comparatively new man in the municipal arena having been a resident of Oshawa only eight years, and having served one year as councillor, three months as deputy reeve when Oshawa was a town, and nine months as alderman since its incorporation as the baby city of Canada, while his opponent has already served two terms as mayor and one as councillor.

The election by wards was as follows:

Ward One: Schell 443; Trick 331.
Ward Two: Schell 611; Trick 531.
Ward Three: Schell 219, Trick 229.
Ward Four: Schell 494; Trick 623.
Ward Five: Schell 242, Trick 39.
Totals: Schell 2009; Trick 1753.
Majority for Schell 256.

For aldermen, contests were only held in Wards One and Four. In the former George Hart and R. D. Preston, the sitting members were returned while Sam Mackson replaces Jas. L. Abattam. In Ward Four where seven candidates started, E. L. Vickery and O. M. Alger were re-elected, while W. J. Holland, who ran third, will replace T. J. Sheridan.

The aldermen elected by acclamation and the wards they will represent are as follows:

Ward 2: O. R. Burns, E. R. Dixon, and R. A. Clarke; Ward 3: George T. Morris, David F. Johnson and Harry P. Bull. Ward 5: Edward Jackson, R. Clifford, Henry and Dan Riordan.

Members of the Board of Education elected by acclamation are Ward 1: Dr. C. E. Wilson; Ward 2, George R. Norris. Ward 3: Dr. D. R. Cameron; Ward 4: T. B. Mitchell; Ward 5: Thomas Stapleton.

Members of the Water Works Commission elected by aclamation: George W. MacLaughlin and W. H. Ross.

As a climax to the publicity part of the mayoralty campaign, in which the spending of money on construction of new schools by the local Board of Education took a prominent part, a printed affidavit sworn to by one John G. Russell, who was employed by the Gay Construction Company of Oshawa, in which he infers that A. E. Garbutt, principal of the Public Schools; W. B. Nott, member of the Board of Education, and the resident inspector of Hutton and Souter, architects, of Hamilton, and the Gay Construction Co., were implicated in the splitting of $1000 which was supposed to be charged as extras, but which are alleged never to have reached the scene of construction.

The Board of Education are to hold an investigation in which all the alegations wil be fully gone into.

The Gay Construction Co. have retained G. B. Conart, who will also represent Hutton and Souter, architects; while W. B. Nott and A. E. Garbutt have secured the services of D. A. J. Swanson.

THE HANDKERCHIEF'S HISTORY.

The pocket handkerchief was first known as "kerchief"—courve chef—a covering for the head then it became handkerchief, a covering for the head carried in the hand; and at last a pocket handkerchief, a covering for the head held in the hand and kept in the pocket.

THE GUMPS—SERVICE

JOHN M'CUBBIN IS RETURNED TO REEVE OF PERCY

W. H. Nelson Keeps His Seat As Deputy Reeve.

BYLAW DEFEATED

Statute Labor Has Many Supporters—Sykes, Poole and Laver Elected.

WARKWORTH, Jan. 6.—(Special).—John McCumbin, supported by a majority of 72 was re-elected last night to the reeveship of the township of Percy, defeating William E. Hermiston, a former reeve. Mr. McCubbin has served three years as reeve.

W. H. Nelson retains his seat as deputy reeve by polling 96 votes more than his opponent Peter Fairman. This is his third year.

James Sykes, George Poole and Oscar Laver were elected councillors.

By-Law Overwhelmed.

A by-law to commute statute labor proved unpopular, the answer being emphatically "no." Even in the village, where an affirmative vote was anticipated, the measure was voted down and in the country it was snowed under.

The bay-law had one good result, however, in bringing out the voters. While very quiet, the election brought out more voters than in some years.

The following is the vote by subdivisions, and the total votes:

SEYMOUR TOWNSHIP.

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 6.— Last year's Council in Seymour township was wiped out yesterday except Russel Peake, who defeated two other contestants for deputy-reeve.

W. S. Grills was elected reeve with 508 votes against P. D. Nelson's 351.

The fight for deputy resulted as follows: R. Peake 383, W. S. Milne 297, W. A. Wynn 241.

The councillors elect are W. T. Allan, R. Innes and Robt. Linn.

Snow has fallen to quite a depth and the roads are in good condition for sleighing.

The meeting of those interested in election of trustees and general annual business was held last week at the school house. Mr. Tom J. Brown, the retiring trustee, was re-elected.

A quiet wedding took place at Trinity Parsonage, Peterborough, on New Year's Day, when Mrs. Ethel Patterson became the bride of Mr. W. H. Tedford, both of Peterboro'. The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. J. Langford. The bride is the only daughter of Mrs. George Scott of this place.

Miss Leita Chaplain returned to her school, near Castleton, on Saturday, after spending the Christmas holidays at home.

Miss Annie Hutchinson has returned to Toronto after spending Christmas and New Year's at her home, Havelock Road.

By a majority of 140, Morley Smithson was yesterday returned to his seat as Reeve of Otonabee, defeating Alfred A. Eason, in six of the eight polling sub-divisions.

W. A. Anderson holds his position as Deputy Reeve in a contest with S. D. McIntyre, whom he defeated by 119 votes, with a plurality in five polls and a tie in two.

The inaugural meeting of the new township council will take place on Monday next.

Quiet Election.

Sobering down after the rather hectic nomination meeting the election was conducted very quietly. It was marked by a number of ties, as where the polls at Villiers and Grady's gave candidates for Deputy Reeve the same number of votes, 39 and 62 respectively, Grady's voters also gave Hope and Read equal votes, Stewart's voters were impartial toward Comrie, Hope and Read, with 13 votes each.

CANADIAN FARM PRODUCTS WIN RENOWN IN EUROPE AND AMERICA

Survey of Accomplishment During Past Year Shows Many Proud Prizes.

ALBERTA'S SUCCESS

Producing Butter of High Quality—Most Canadian Farmers Own Their Land.

The last issue of The Canadian Grocer publishes, under the caption, "Canada Made More Famous on Two Continents", a resume of Canadian achievements during the year. Items are:

A Canadian farmer won the grand prize for wheat at the Chicago International Fair.

Canadian oats captured 25 out of 30 awards at Chicago.

Regent 2 Canadian corn competing with some of the best corn grown in the United States won the grand sweepstakes at Chicago.

Canadian bacon and Canadian honey captured the grand prizes at the big London, England, dairy show. This was the second consecutive year our bacon won the sweepstakes and the third year in succession that honey won it.

Canadian apples from British Columbia were first prize winners again at the big fruit show in England.

Owners of Farms

The article goes on to say that ninety-two per cent. of Canadian farmers own their own farms, as against only sixty-two per cent. in the United States. This situation naturally creates greater community interest in Canada and is one of our strongest assets. The comment concludes with:

"The estimated increase in the 1924 value of Canada's field crops over last year is placed at $65,000 000. The total for this year is given at $964,663,400, as against $899,166,200 last year. The increase in the value in Ontario alone is placed at $33,000,000. Manitoba is the greater gainer for the year, with an improvement estimated at $70,000,000."

In this connection, it is interesting to note the success that has met the province of Alberta, in its efforts to bring its dairy products up to the highest possible standard. It is already making a name for itself with its butter because its cream is properly graded. In October 17th of this year, the first direct consignment of Canadian butter; 1,000 packages, was made to Hamburg, Germany and the Canadian Trade Commissioner L. D. Wilgress, reports on the excellent impression made on the German tradesmen by its quality, and the increasing interest being taken in Canadian butter. The fact that the high quality of the consignment received occasioned surprise is an indication that Canadian butter has not up to the present been held in very high favor by the German buyers. Germany is a big buyer of butter. During the first eight months of this year her imports amounted to 562,860 cwts., valued at $21,980,000. A trade report says that there seems to be increasing difficulty in securing supplies of first class quality of Danish butter at sufficiently low prices.

Danish Competition.

This last report, regarding Danish butter and its prices, must perforce be of decided interest to Canadian butter makers. At a very recent date, the Danes, as one paper put it, chased Canadian butter so hard "that it only occupies a small corner in the world market."

Forty-four years ago, the quantity of butter exported from Canada amounted to 18,535,362 pounds. The total in 192 was much less than half those figures, amounting to only 8,430,591 pounds. Denmark 44 years ago exported 27,057,762 pounds of butter, while two years ago the figure had grown to 199,584,863 pounds. In other words, while Canada's export trade was falling from 18 to 8 millions, the Danes advanced their exports from 27 to 199 milions.

Much credit is given the province of Alberta for its efforts in raising the standard of butter by strict grading of cream. That the province of Alberta is reaching out to the markets of the East is apparent from figures which show considerable growth in export of products to the Orient from Alberta. Figures for the past three years secured from the Harbor Commisioners at Vancouver show that the following shipments have been made: In 1922, 50 tons meat; in 1923, 500 tons, and in 1924, to Oct. 31, 150 tons. In 1922, 130 tons butter; in 1923, 750 tons; in 1924, to October 31, 535 tons. In 1922, 3,500,000 bushels of grain; in 1923, 5,750,000 bushels, and in 1924, to October 31, 12,500,000 bushels.

Alberta may soon be reaching out for the honey trade of the Dominion, if it follows up the same process in grading and attention to quality as it has done with butter. Production of honey is appearing for the first time in the annual table of Alberta's agricultural products. It is estimated that there are now 160 beekeepers in Alberta, and that the production the past season was 55,000 pounds, of about $13,000 in value.

Export of Cattle.

Canada's export cattle trade also has shown considerable increase this year. The total number of cattle exported from the port of Montreal alone during the season was 42,555 head, as compared with 20,766 head last year. The removal of the cattle embargo in Great Britain is partly responsible for this increase, according to authorities. Canadian cattle also, it is said, are constantly growing in favor with consumers in the British Isles, in many cases the product of the Dominion having taken the place formerly occupied by Ireland. It will likely be some time, however, before Canada can seriously affect the Irish export cattle trade with its huge volume of more than a million head per annum, built up during thirty years of close contact with the British market. Nevertheless, the footing obtained by the Dominion last year, and strengthened this season, is remarkable because it has been secured at the expense of keen Irish competition and notwithstanding aggressive competition on the part of American exporters.

One big improvement in conditions affecting the export cattle trade this year is the change in regulations to allow Canadian cattle being sent to British farmers for "finishing" or fattening purposes, instead of having to kill them within twenty-four hours of arrival. Thus Canadian exporters are able to take advantage of a favorble market.

Canadian Apples.

The superiority evidenced by Canadian apples at the recent fruit show in England recalls the fact that an intensive campaign to increase the eating of fruit in that country has recently been launched by the Fruit Trades Federation. By means of advertising, it is hoped to make Great Britain, which to-day consumes less fruit than Iceland, the greatest fruit-eating nation in the world.

The foodstuffs division of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce reports that France and Canada supplied the bulk of the codfish coming into Greece during the first ten months of 1923. Official figures show total importations into that country of 11,211,000 pounds during that period, as compared with 11,249,000 during the whole of 1922. The imports from the United States gradually dwindled from over 9,000,000 pounds in 1919 to 548,000 pounds in 1923. Canada, on the other hand, increased her exports of codfish to Greece from 179,000 pounds to over 2,600,000 pounds.

From Montreal comes the report of two full cargoes of Canadian flour, or 120,000 barrels, having left New York for one of the Far Eastern ports, en route to its destination in the Russian Soviet Republic. This flour is not for Central or Western Russia, but will be sent to the Far Eastern portions of the Republic, where, owing to severe drought this season, there is a considerable shortage in grain supply. It was expected by Soviet Government agricultural exnerts that there would be a 3,000,000 bushel surplus this year, but the drought reduced this to nil, with the result that orders were sent out not to export a bushel of grain this year, as everything would be needed for home consumption. Owing to its comparative non-productiveness as yet and its great distance from the grain-producing section of Russia, with the consequent expensive transportation rates, the Far East will for some time to come have to depend for flour supplies largely on Canada. "The Dominion's product," says the trade report, "is chosen because of its high quality and the cheapness of the transportation costs."

SPLENDID WORK.

At yesterday's meeting of the Peterborough Rotary Club Dr. A. W. McPherson reported in detail as to the disposition of the cases of fifteen crippled children for the treatment of whom the local Rotarians undertook the responsibility.

In the majority of cases he was able to announce that satisfactory progress was being made.

That modest statement hardly does credit to what is involved in it.

If one child apparently doomed to go through life a cripple has been saved by the efforts of the Rotary Club, the existence of that organization has been justified.

When a brighter outlook on life has been made possible for a dozen or more youngsters through the same organization, it becomes apparent that the community owes much to Rotary and to the ideal of service before self that is the foundation upon which the club is based.

There could be no finer community work than this, and citizens of Peterborough should not only extend their best wishes for the success of Rotary's efforts, but also be ready to lend their assistance if the organization should find it necessary to enlist the support of the public.

A NATIONAL WAR MEMORIAL.

Premier King has informed the Great War Veterans' Association that a national war memorial is to be erected at Ottawa.

The announcement, the Examiner is sure, will be received with pleasure and satisfaction by the Canadian people, who will desire that the memorial to be raised on Parliament Hill shall be in keeping with the national sense of gratitude to the men who fought for Canada in the World War.

It was fitting that this country should build war memorials in France and Belgium that visitors to the scene of the great battles of the terrible conflict should be reminded of the gallant army of Canadians who came so far to fight for the world's freedom; it is even more fitting that here at home in the national capital there should be a dignified and impressive and lasting tribute to the memory of those who fought and particularly of those who fell.

The Government need have no doubt of the support of the country in its decision to commemorate Canada's war heroes.

Even when there is a general demand for retrenchment there will be no voice raised to protest against a national recognition of the services of the men who comprised Canadian's wonderful army corps in France and the sacrifice of those who gave up their lives in the winning of imperishable fame for the Land the Maple.

The memorial should be in keeping with the merit of the service and the extent of the sacrifice.

CIVICS IN THE SCHOOLS.

In an address to the Toronto Rotary Club recently Rev. Canon Cody charged Canadians with becoming indifferent to their personal responsibilities of citizenship.

"The apathy of intelligent people toward the public affairs of the country is just as fatal as the anarchy of those who are opposed to all government," declared the former Minister of Education for Ontario, and it will be difficult for Canadians to refute the charge.

Only one-quarter of the Toronto people entitled to vote at the municipal election marked their ballots on New Year's Day.

The showing in Peterborough was not much better.

What is the end to be of this steadily increasing indifference?

Various means are suggested of urging or coaxing or compelling people to vote.

But, after all, what is to be gained by such tactics even if they could be successfully adopted?

If a citizen will not on his own responsibility and because of a sense of duty will not exercise his franchise would there be any improvement in the situation by compelling a civic slacker to mark his ballot?

The best solution may be found in the schools.

If the rising generation can be impressed with a sense of responsibility toward the government of the home city, the Province and the country generally there is some hope for a better showing in the future.

If a few minutes each week could be devoted to the study of civics in the schools it is possible that the graduating pupils would go out into life with a better idea of their duty as citizens than the present generation seems to have.

The apathy of today undoubtedly presents, as Canon Cody puts it, "a situation fraught with menace."

THE CIVIC PORTFOLIOS.

The annual battling for the chairmanship of the various committees of the City Council is no doubt under way, with the situation complicated by the fact that there are not enough committees to furnish all the old Aldermen with portfolios.

The suggestion has been made that the problem be solved by the addition of another committee to the list.

Apparently the average Alderman regards a chairmanship as a desirable plum, and if the entente cordiale can be maintained by increasing the number of committees there will be no serious objection from the citizens generally, who do not care how many subdivisions of the Council may be arranged so long as the final result is satisfactory and efficient administration.

Theoretically, of course, the chairmanships should go to the Aldermen most fitted for the respective departments, but under the system of civic government we have in this country it is perhaps too much to ask.

There is always a certain amount of compromise and wire-pulling about the disposition of the various portfolios, and while this does sometimes result in a shuffle that leaves committees headed by chairmen who would do much better service in some other department, there does not seem to be any way in which the condition can be avoided.

Peterborough with eight old Aldermen in harness and the two new members, men of much experience in the transaction of public business, should be able to produce a list of chairmen capable of good service no matter upon whose brow the laurels fall.

IRELAND'S FINANCES.

If the people of Maine—by a wild stretch of imagination—decided to be a nation and to set up a government of their own, their economic situation as regards the United States would be very much that of Ireland to Great Britain. Ireland and Maine are about the same size and about equally little self-contained.

Taxpayers in Maine would stand aghast at the prospect of supporting a whole government, an army, a customs frontier, consuls abroad, and a hundred other services which a central government rather than a small state would carry.

Then imagine another government in Bangor, heartily hating the rest of Maine, and further, divide the people of Maine into three camps all more or less at odds with one another, then you would have another Ireland.

Leaving England and going through Dublin to Belfast one passes through four customs controls: British to Holyhead, Free State at Kingston, again Free State at the frontier, and Ulster. All these give work to bureaucrats and cost money.

Until lately the Free State Irish have given all their thought and efforts to win political freedom. They abruptly find themselves with an intricate modern state to organize and to run.

Political ideas are not lacking in Ireland. There is a glut of conflicting ones. Here the genius of the race has a free field. The Irish had thought out a dozen different kinds of national independence years before they had the first idea of building up their business and banking apart from England.

Today they find themselves in a dilemma. They have a free state inside the Empire, with the possibility of pushing further for a republic in or outside the Empire. But this does not mean real autonomy. They have their own farms, but they must look to England to take their crops. They even send their cattle on the hoof to England for slaughter.

The Irish have their own banks, but much of their money is invested in England in Government bonds and railroads. Ireland has a glut of small stores, but the wholesalers who give them credit are in London and Liverpool. They have the beginnings of a protective tariff, but most of the infant industries they would protect are still on paper.

Instead of wonder that Ireland is not prosperous, the surprise of the visitor to Erin's shores should be that the people get along as well as they do despite retarded business development.

People in Ireland today want peace and work. The bar-room hero, who always talked of fighting and guns, when reminded of this by a friend today, replied: "I did want guns, but only as long as there were none of them in the country." The Irish see that fighting only gives loot to hoodlums and impoverishes the country. They are agreeing to disagree on many issues and, for the first time, are really tackling their bread and butter problems.

This is the first Free State fiscal year (April, 1924, to March 31, 1925). Last year's returns give some idea of a typical Free State budget, but those of 1922-23 not at all, because the customs frontiers had not been drawn between Great Britain and Ireland.

Last year's budget shows total revenue of £31,414,000 and expenditures of £45,750,817. The Minister of Finance pointed out that £10,000,000 of this were the exceptional expenditures of property losses compensation—the damages from fighting, and land purchase annuities.

Revenue of the Free State this year from April 1 to November 8 was £15,366,821, compared with £18,021,000 for the same period last year. Expenditures this year were £15,502,735, compared with £20,739,589 last. This shows that in an ordinary budget receipts and expenditures would about balance. It also shows that the budget for the normal year in revenue and expenditure would be around £25,000,000.

Ireland had practically no debts of its own. At the beginning of 1923-24 fiscal year the total debt was £2,531,000. The Free State then floated a 5 per cent. £10,000,000 loan which brought £9,500,000 into the Treasury. The total debt March 31, 1924, was £13,912,000.

In addition to this, is an unsettled obligation on the Free State to shoulder part of the British war debt. Although agreeing to carry a part of it, the Free State reserved the right to make counter-claims for damages. The Irish think the one will about offset the other. They are prepared to go back to 1817 if need be to prove that for a century Ireland was overtaxed. They also claim damages for destruction by the Black and Tans. It can be concluded that Ireland's share of the war debt will not make any considerable addition to the Free State debt.

About 75 per cent. of Ireland's imports and fully 96 per cent. of her exports come through England. The United States comes second in Irish foreign trade. Figures for the last nine months, show:

	Imports	Exports	Re-exports
Great Britain	34,456,447	29,669,314	660,947
Northern Ireland..	5,734,337	4,857,151	254,889
United States	2,433,658	141,474	660
Argentina	1,568,933	9,187	.....
Canada	930,564	19,256	69
Germany	538,469	18,008	4,360

Free State trade and shipping statistics for the nine months show an unfavorable balance of trade of £14,000,000. But exports of foodstuffs from Ireland were £29,889,163, compared with £21,758,351 imports. Coal represents three-fourths of raw materials imports in value.

The deficit came on manufactured goods of which imports were £23,334,047, compared with exports of manufactured goods of £1,963,307. About three-fourths of these imports were from Great Britain, and the remainder from North Ireland. Livestock was the largest Irish export for the nine months valued at £14,154,778.

Most Irish foreign trade is done through English intermediaries. Irish trade is still hand-to-mouth and on six months or more credit. They pay wholesalers and banks to carry their bills. This explains partly why retail prices for most commodities in Ireland are from 5 per cent. to 50 per cent. higher than in England.—Barron's.

UNCOVERING ANCIENT CITY OF SARDIS

American scientists have renewed the work of excavating the ancient city of Sardis in Asia Minor. This work was commenced several years ago and was interrupted by the war. An advance party is now at work and Howard C. Butler of Princeton, has just sailed to assume charge of the work. The temple of Artemis, which is claimed to be the third largest building of its kind built by the Greeks, has been uncovered. The city was at its zenith during the reign of King Croesus and was destroyed by an earthquake in 17 A.D.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK.

TORONTO, Jan. 5.—Today saw close to a $9 a cwt. market for choice export steers. There were less than 20 loads of export steers on the market, but Kennedy & Co., received 151 direct on Saturday, and Rogers & Maybee had 220 on through billing today. Kennedy & Co. paid $8.50 a cwt. on Saturday. This morning's top was for a load of extra well finished steers averaging near 1,500 lbs. each.

Prices in butchers' were as near steady as possible, but the trend of the market if anything was towards a little lower level. One load of good medium butchers' moved early at $6.25 a cwt., and another load of 19, averaging 960 lbs. and about in the good class, sold at $6.50 a cwt. Heavy leggy steers not good enough for exports sold at $6 a cwt. Common butchers' sold around $5 a cwt.

The early business was slow owing to the higher asked prices, these being 50 to 75 cents a cwt. on medium to good butchers' cows. Export cows sold at $5 to $5.25, and and good butchers' at $4.50. Medium quality cows were $3.75 and $4. Bulls were firm, and all the good ones were taken for export up to $5 and $5.25 a cwt. One load of heavy steers was taken by a packer at $8.25 a cwt. At 11 o'clock trading was more active, and a fair clean-up of the day's offerings was looked for at noon.

The Buffalo buyer was not operating in the calf market today to the same extent as last week, and prices were not as keen. Early tops did not realize over 13c a lb., and medium calves were easy by perhaps 50c a cwt. Good medium calves sold from 10c to 11c and common calves were 7c to 8c.

Lambs are holding reasonably steady, and choice ewes and wethers are 15c a lb. One bunch of 20-50 lb. lambs brought 15½c. Medium quality and heavy lambs were 13c to 14c. Choice sheep brought firm prices at 7½ to 8c.

Packers are bidding $9.75c a cwt. f.o.b. on hogs, but sales are reported as being made at $10 f.o.b. and $11 off cars.

GAVE PAGEANT AT MILLBROOK

"One Hundred Years of Victory," Presented By School Pupils.

MILLBROOK, January 5. — The pageant, "One Hundred Years of Victory," was presented with great success by about 70 members of the Methodist Sunday school on New Year's night, the auditorium of the church being well filled for the occasion. This pageant was written especially for the Centenary of Missions celebrated recently in Toronto, was twice given in Massey Hall, and has since been presented in the leading cities of the West. Beginning this month, it will be given in the chief towns and cities east of Toronto as far as and including the Maritime provinces.

The responsibility of training and planning the details of stage settings, costumes, etc., rested largely with Miss Estelle Hetherington, who saw the pageant when presented in Massey Hall, and who gave a brief outline of its main features before the entertainment began on Thursday evening.

About 30 children of the primary department gave an opening motion song, "When the Winds of Winter Blow," with spoken parts by Mary Burnham, Bryar Edmunds, Reg. Edmunds, Bernice Smith, Marie Douglas, Gertie Richards, Myrtle Nattrass, Madeline McDowell, Elwood Fallis, Ethel Rowland, Lois Dawson, Arthur Howard, Helen Mitchell and Bonna Clarke.

The first scene showed the dawn of Christianity, at the time of the birth of Christ, with angels and shepherds grouped on the platform, while the "Angel of the Message," (Mrs. P. Stinson, the "Spirit of Christianity," (Miss M. E. Hetherington), and the "Spirit of Methodism," (Miss Jean Burnham), were the chief speakers. "O Little Town of Bethlehem," was sung in the wings during the scene, and a chorus, "O, Come all ye Faithful," as the curtain was drawn. Miss Marie Kenyon was the speaker for the angel group, the others being Misses Eleanor Fallis, Edith Sheppard, Alvira Davis and Mrs. Harry Dawson. The shepherds were Messrs W. Byam, Brue Freelove and Kenneth Skitch.

A very effective part of this scene was when the Spirit of Christianity lighted her candle from the one held by the leading angel, and following her, the heralds of the cross, including the religious leaders of the centuries, came, announced in turn, by the Angel of the Message, and lighted his candle from the brightly burning one carried by the Spirit of Christianity, each then taking his place in the background until the half circle of the platform was completed. The characters were: Peter (Arnold Fallis), James (C. Detine), John (Lawrence Rowland), Philip (Geo. Clarke), Nathaniel (Nelles Rowland), Thomas (James Mason), Matthew (Oliver Brock), James the Less (Kenneth Fallis), Thaddeus (Walter Sayles), Simon, the Cananite (Gerald Todd), Apostle Paul (W. G. Rowland), St. Patrick (Hilliard Lang), St. Augustine (L. W. Smith), John Wycliffe (Martin Brock), Martin Luther (A. J. Brown), John Knox (J. H. George), John Milton (Aubrey Todd), John Wesley (P. Stinson.)

A cornet duet, "Speed Away," by Messrs. G. E. and Ernest Burnham, and a chorus, "O, for a Thousand Tongues to sing," were the musical numbers, while the evangels received the gospel light to carry to the uttermost parts of the earth. Misses Ella Elson and Ethel Richardson were accompanists of the evening, and played piano duets as the scenery was changed between the acts.

Scene two was staged in Barbara Heck's home in New York city, with three men, Bruce Dawson, George Elson and Melville Ball, playing a game of cards, when Barbara (Mrs. J. McKnight) enters and severely reproves them for such wordly amusement. Throwing the "gaudy bits of pasteboard" on the fire, she urges Philip Embury (F. N. Alcorn) who enters just then, to preach, "lest we all go to hell together."

And so the first prayer meeting was held, others gathering for the service being Rev. F. H. and Mrs. Howard, Mrs. T. H. Aiken, and Mrs. G. W. Sayles.

The entrance of Capt. Webb (C. Garside) in scarlet uniform, was the signal for an uneasy disturbance lest some ill was about to befall, Thomas Taylor (Rev. J. Wilks) quieting all fears by explaining that Captain Webb was a devoted follower of John Wesley. At this meeting it was decided to petition Mr. Wesley to send a missionary for labor on this side of the Atlantic, the necessary funds to be raised at any sacrifice by the little band of believers who took this forward step. While they knelt in silent prayer, the Spirit of Christianity and the Spirit of Methodism entered and outstretched their hands in benediction on the lowly group, John Wesley being seen at the right of the platform.

Groups of Indians, on either side of the platform, with James Evans (F. McMahon) in the centre diligently working at the primitive type with which he first printed the Cree characters he invented, greeted the eye as the curtain was drawn for the third act. A press was secured on appeal to the Hudson Bay Factor (O. Williamson), who enters with words of greeting to Mr. Evans, the scene being laid outside a Hudson Bay post in the far north. The adult group of Indians included: Archie Johnston, Maurice Williamson and Hugh Kennedy. The younger group, who sang "Into a tent where a gypsy boy lay," were George Sayles, Jack Stinson, Henry Raper, Raymond Rowland Mrs. G. W. Sayles took the Indian woman's part.

A group of Indians from the frozen lands far to the north, appealing for a missionary to be sent with the gospel to their tribe, caused Mr. Evans to redouble his efforts to print, for these, and others, the Scriptures in their own tongue. Reg. Willis was the leader of the visiting delagration, the others being: Gerald Raper, Harold Hawken and Lloyd Peel.

A Chinese setting, with a wayside idol in the centre background, was arranged for the fourth scene, the work of the gospel on the foreign field being depicted. The famous Chinese philanthropist, Mr. Liu Dze Ru (G. W. Sayles), as a boy of sixteen, is questioning his father (T. H. Aiken), to the latter's anger, about the origin of the universe, and the why of sin and suffering. A missionary (F. Fallis) satisfies the youth's desire for knowledge by giving him portions of the Bible, through the study of which he becomes converted and his life work of caring for hundreds of orphan children begins. The Bible woman's part was taken by Mrs. I. M. Nattrass, Marshal Fallis and Lois Dawson being the two orphans accompanying her. Appeal was made to the Governor of the city, General Yang Sen (Irwin Hatherly), to have the street idols removed, and his promise secured.

The group of "Happy Orphans," who sang for Liu Dze Ru, "Jesus Loves Me," included Jean Stinson, Marguerite Fallis, Margaret Hawkins, Rena Guthrie, Myrtle Nattrass, Mary Burnham and Martha Earle.

"The New Century" was typified in the concluding scene, with the "Spirit of Service" (Miss Olive Elson, "Spirit of the Future" (Miss Florence Fallis), and the "Centenary Spirit" (Mrs. O. Williamson) as leading speakers. The past one hundred years having been reviewed, what might be looked tor in the century now being entered upon and the consecration involved was pictured at this act progressed.

For the Settlers' Group, Martin Pethick was spokesman, other members being Marian Earle, Mr. and Mrs. John Rowland, Anna and Johnston Rowland. Elsie Spence made the plea for the World Group, Mrs. W. Turner, Mrs. H. Murney, Miss Reta Luxton and Miss Gertrdue Spence accompanying her.

The Canadian Immigrants (Ukranians) included Hazel McMahon, Mrs. A. Mitchell, Helen Mitchell, Mary Howard, Pearl Childs and William Skitch. Clarence Ball made the appeal for the Chinese Group, those who had been on the platform in the Chinese Scene making up his party. Mrs. F. Smith spoke for Japan, her little daughter, Bernice, Marie Douglas, Reg. Edmunds, Mrs. W. West and Mrs. A. Weatherup completing this delegation.

"Miss Canada" was taken by Miss Phyllis Richards, and with her came the provinces: Ontario, Marjorie Sayles; Quebec, Mrs. W. W. Kennedy; Manitoba, Mrs. Arthur Fallis; Saskatchewan, Pearl Davis; Alberta, W. W. Kennedy; British Columbia, Etta Peel; Nova Scotia, Margaret Howard; Prince Edward Island, Russell Fallis; New Brunswick, Stella Pethick.

As the necessity for consecration was urged, Marjorie Skitch as "Substance," knelt at the altar with her gift; Wilma Fallis "Knowledge," came next; Dorothy Crossley "Prayer," followed; and Flossie McMahon, "Self" completed the group.

The final massing of all the characters on the platform, while "All Hail the Power of Jesus Name" was sung, formed an effective climax, the Benediction being pronounced by Rev. F. Howard.

The varying colors of the costumes, some of which were secured from Toronto and all of which were appropriatetly and cleverly designed, and the excellent stage settings did much to add to the attractiveness and success of he Pageant. The financial receipts were $110.00.

VARIETY IN DIAMONDS

Each of the five mines owned and worked by the great De Beers Company in the Kimberly district produces diamonds with well-marked characteristics. The Kimberley mine fields a good percentage of white and many yellow stones. Dutoispan Mine is famed for its large diamonds. At Bultfontein small white and spotted stones are common. From the Wesselton Mine come many beautiful deep, orange-colored diamonds, while the De Beers Mine shows a good percentage of tinted yellow and brown stones. The Premier Mine (Transvaal) yields a large number of "off-colored" stones. The Cullinan diamond was of exceptional purity. From the Jagersfontein Mine, in the Orange Free State, the famous bluish-white stones are derived. The diamonds found in German Southwest Africa are small and yellowish in color.

ACCESSORY AFTER THE FACT

A Complete Story Full of Romance About Two Toronto Gentlemen Who Were Rewarded by an Indian.

FULL OF THRILLS.

By M. A. H.

"I don't see your ducks, McCarthy," observed Dr. Drummond.

He looked, with a twinkle in his eyes, at a man who entered the hotel bar, and who, being plentifully bemired and carrying a shot-gun, had presumably been shooting.

McCarthy deposited the gun in a corner, and held up two fingers to the bar-tender as an indication of the amount of refreshment required. "I haven't seen them either," he said agreeably. "There was a durned Indian with a squaw and a tepi at the south end of the lake, and I guess he's shot half of them and skeered the other half."

"Likely. Queer place to camp," said the doctor meditatively. "It's not on the straight trail anywhere."

The doctor went home, pondering over the migratory red men, who interested him more than ducks.

Three nights later he was smoking a last pipe before going to bed, when he heard the soft thudding of a shoeless horse's feet. He opened the door as the rider mounted the verandah steps.

In the light which streamed out the doctor saw the figure of a tall Indian, and met the gaze of a pair of sombre dark eyes. The man's dress bore no tribal mark, but after one glance, Drummond confidently put a question in the soft Cree tongue, and was promptly answered. The Indian was camping at the Lake of the Black Water, and his squaw was sick, and he had heard that the medicine-man was wise and of good heart. Therefore he came to ask help.

The doctor asked one or two questions, which were answered intelligently, and in ten minutes he was riding out into the dark with the Cree at his horse's flank.

The lake lay ten miles south-westward. The land round it was waste, and even in summer it had an aspect of desolation. Drummond had never known it by night, but he had imagined it.

The long ride drew to an end, and they came within sound of the sobbing water and the wrenching of the wind-torn trees. The Indian drew ahead, and broke the silence, glancing over his shoulder at the doctor

"I guide—the trail breaks here. The tepi is to the south," he said.

The wash of the water sounded close, then the dimly luminous outline of the tepi showed through the darkness, and Drummond drew up and dismounted. The Indian lifted the tent-flap and let the doctor pass in.

The interior was like all Indian dwelling-places, except that it was unusually clean and orderly. The sick woman was lying on a pile of skins against the canvas wall, one thin arm flung across her eyes. Before the doctor could do more than glance at her, the Indian passed him and dropped on his knee beside his wife, drawing back the sheltering arm to look into the hidden face. Drummond knelt forward also, and presently touched the man's shoulder.

"Go out and wait, my friend," he said. "I call if need comes."

The wind was rising to a gale, and tore round the little tent in fierce gusts. In the short pauses between the gusts Drummond could hear the pacing of the mocassined feet on the shingle before the tent. When he lifted the flap half an hour later the Indian was beside him in a moment.

"I think your wife will live; the child is dead," he said slowly, and he spoke in English.

The man did not answer, but passed quickly inside. When the doctor followed he was kneeling beside the bed, and his head was bent low as he kissed the little brown hands. They moved under his touch, and the girl's eyes opened.

"It's all right, Rupert—don't worry," she whispered.

The man was to his feet and faced the doctor. His eyes were keen and defiant, but there was almost a humorous twist in the firm mouth.

"I had much feared that you would see through the stain," he said composedly. "A Cree would hardly see anything wrong with me, but she"—he looked down at the slender figure on the skins, at the thin little face with its fine lines, at the soft, tumbled hair so unlike the straight locks of a squaw—"nothing could make her anything but a white girl." He paused for a moment, and his mouth hardened into fighting lines. "My name is Maxwell, of Toronto, and if you have read the papers lately, you will probably have seen it. I suppose you can't be expected to see things in the same light as we do——"

The doctor made a movement of interruption.

"As it happens, I've hardly opened the papers for some days. I know your name—you are a Toronto lawyer but I don't know what you have been doing the last week or two. I don't want to know. I guess every man's conscience is his own affair, and as to that child," he looked down at the worn young face at his feet, "if she's sinned she's paying, with interest, I'll come out again to-morrow, and as far as I am concerned there are only a couple of Indians at the lake."

The stoniness of the dark face broke as Maxwell held out his hand.

"You can take it there's nothing worse than brown stain on it," he said. "I thought you were a good man. What am I to do until you come back?"

Drummond gave careful directions and some final attention to the girl. When the doctor lifted her hand to feel the faint pulse, she tore it from him with the strength of delirium.

"You drive me mad if you touch me! Oh, God! Don't let him touch me!" she gasped, cringing.

Maxwell's arm slipped beneath the hard pillow, and his other hand pressed the anguished face against his shoulder.

"He shan't touch you, beloved; you are safe from him," he said, with an undercurrent of fierce anger in his low tones.

The doctor lifted the swinging tent-flap and faced the darkness. The terror in the girl's voice told him much. The memory of some hated touch was full of horror for her, horror that haunted her unconsciousness, and case-hardened as Drummond was by the hard schooling of the West, he felt nothing but pity as he rode home.

As often happens in such cases, he found half the tongues of the town ready to elucidate the matter wherein Rupert Maxwell, of Toronto, was involved. He went home and read the fullest account he could find. The columns rioted in detail and conjecture, denunciation and wonderment. Drummond let the embellishment go and made a summary for his own use.

It seemed that Reginald Burnaby, a man prominent in Toronto social life, had a week before been found in his own dining-room shot through the heart, and that his young wife had disappeared in company with Rupert Maxwell, the well-known lawyer. The servants had seen them leave the house together a few minutes after the shot was fired. Beyond these facts the only clear conclusion to be formed from the mass of incoherence was that Reginald Burnaby was not in any sense a great loss to the world. And the murderess was a gentle girl of eighteen, married from her convent at Quebec less than a year before.

Drummond thought it all over as he rode to the lake next evening. He realised that whatever the end might be Maxwell would make a good fight; and Drummond loved a good fighter.

The tent was opened to him as he reached it. The girl had gained strength, and had rallied wonderfully, and though she said nothing beyond a whispered "Thank you," when Drummond was leaving, she was fully conscious and comprehending. Her eyes were of great beauty and depth, and they were always his chief memory of her.

When he left the tent Maxwell followed, and the two stood for a minute in silence.

"You are making for the coast?" Drummond suggested presently.

Maxwell nodded and glanced over his shoulder into the tent.

"I must get her out of this before winter sets in," he said. "I know the country, and the Indians will help me. I've done a lot of Government work in the Reserves, and I have friends in most of the tribes."

"It'll be two weeks at least before you can move," the doctor said, and suddenly Maxwell broke out with unusual passion.

"It's a refinement of cruelty that we must be stopped by this—the birth of HIS child."

Drummond shrugged his shoulders. He had seen a great deal of the irony of circumstance.

"Well," he said, as he moved to his horse, "I'll bring word if I hear anything you'd like to know."

For three weeks he went regularly to the lake, generally late in the evening. The Indian summer blazed over the dead prairie and died away.

Audrey Burnaby collected her strength with a rapidity which gave a hint of the buoyant youth that had been wrecked. She never spoke of her crime, and rarely of other matters, but once on a quiet night of clear starlight, when she stood with Maxwell and the doctor by the water's edge, she broke her barrier of silence and showed a glimpse of the hungry youth that survived the shock of disillusioned womanhood.

The day after, violent winds lashed the dry plains, and by four o'clock a dark night of storm had begun.

The doctor looked in at the hotel at about seven o'clock, but there were few men there, and he was leaving when a hand dropped on his shoulder, and he turned to meet a face he had known many years before. It was that of a Winnipeg police-sergeant, known as Levett, though it was generally understood that he had borne another name before he joined the force. He was a clever man, and an artist in his work, and he had never been known to let sentiment in any form interfere with his relentless performance of it.

Drummond looked at him with only natural surprise in his steady eyes.

"What brings you so far out of the track of crime?" he inquired.

The man laughed.

"I can tell you, I'm on the Toronto murder case—Burnaby and Maxwell. I took it over from the Toronto men when they'd carried it as far as my limit. I guess I've about finished it."

"That so? I haven't seen any criminals knocking around," commented Drummond.

"A man can't get a woman off, nine cases out of ten," said the sergeant. "Maxwell could have lost himself; he's shot and fished with the red most summers for the last fifteen years, and when he dresses as a Cree, he is one. But Mrs. Burnaby's trail was as cleanly marked out as a high road. They're camping at the Blackwater Lake, I've heard."

"Oh, that couple! McCarthy told me a 'nitche' had a tepi and a squaw somewhere round there," said Drummond. He paused and drank pretty deeply from the glass beside him. "When do you take them?"

Levett glanced at the clock.

"I am waiting for two of my men, and we'll be off soon after midnight. I calculate to take them east by the morning express. Will you come along and see the thing through?"

Drummond rose and glanced also at the clock.

"I'll hardly be back in time. I've got to ride out in another direction, but I'll join you if I can manage it. Good luck, anyway."

He left the sergeant sitting by the stove, and went out into the wind. He walked rapidly down the street and along the bit of trail that led to his house, and spent a quarter of an hour there mixing some medicine, and talking to his housekeeper, a soft-eyed half-breed woman, who had been married to an Indian. It took her most of the fifteen minutes to trace some hieroglyphics upon a piece of paper whichwDr. Drummond pocketed carefully erhen he went out.

There was a lull in the storm as he turned his horse on to the trail, and the thick darkness closed upon him.

"What a night for a ride from the law! and, good Lord, that delicate child!" muttered Drummond. "And they've only a chance in a thousand!"

It was a quick ride, but it seemed a weary length of time before the sound which was his usual signal, and Maxwell was outside in an instant.

"Anything up?" he asked sharply.

Drummond followed him into the tent, and gave an anxious glance at the girls. She looked frail and colourless, but seh, met his eyes bravely.

"Yes, you must get on," Drummond said shortly. He looked away from the pitiful girl's figure, and explained rapidly to the man, who met the blow with an Ennmoved face.

"You've risked a lot for us. I won't try and thank you," he said as the doctor finished. "We'll get on, Audrey." He moved nearer to her, and laid his strong brown hand on her shoulder with a protecting assurance that meant more than a caress.

"It'll be all right, little girl. Help her get ready, will you, while I see to the horses."

He went out, and Drummond helped in the packing of the small bundles, which were all two wandering Indians might carry; saw that the girl was warmly wrapped, and gave her a strong stimulant he had prepared in the time he spent at home. They left the tent standing, and carried the two bundles out to where Maxwell waited with the ponies.

The storm whirled round them, and the darkness lay like a tremendous curtain across their path. The bitter desolation of it struck on Drummond's heart, and he struggled to express something of a man's sympathy for the hunted girl standing silently and patiently beside him. He could say nothing, but as he lifted her on her pony perhaps something in the kind touch of his strong arms spoke for him, and she looked down with a sudden smile, which beautified her face. Drummond never forgot the lovely eyes, radiant and young, which looked down at him from their most delicate background.

"Don't trouble about us," she said, "whatever happens."

"Nothing's going to happen to you," he answered. "But don't ride west! You hear, Maxwell! Go back on your tracks, due east, and make for Lake Superior. With luck you'll get there before winter. There's a tribe of Crees camping there, and my housekeeper was the wife of one of their head men. He's dead, but Indians don't forget, and they'll remember her. Give them this letter, and they'll give up their own children before they'll let you be taken." He put the paper into the girl's hand, which he still held. "Don't be afraid of the risks. Trust me, and look back in an hour, and you'll see I've hidden your trail!"

He let go the little hand, and stepped back. A frantic gust of wind swooped down on them, and the wiry buckskin bronchos plunged away into the crashing dark. Drummond stood still for the moment; then went back into the tent. He glanced round, with his hand on the lamp, and noticed a basket of Audrey's faulty manufacture lying half-finished on the floor. He took it up, put out the light, and left the little battered tepi to its stormly solitude.

He rode slowly along the homeward trail, looking often through the darkness towards the south. The little-used track by which the fugitives had fled ran parallel with his, but several miles nearer to the southern boundary of the bush. In about half an hour he had ridden a couple of miles, and after a moment's pause to satisfy himself that the wind had not veered, he dismounted, and with his bridle over his arm, walked off the trail for a few yards among the deeper grass of the prairie. He found a dried tussock under the les of a small thicket or saskatoon and choke cherry, and in a momentary drop of the wind stooped and carefully struck a couple of matches, shielding them very anxiously with hands and coat. They flickered for a moment; then the tindery grass caught, blew to sparks, caught again and flared. When the tussock was well alight, and the dry twigs of the saskatoon bushes were catching, he left the wind to finish the work, and walked on to start another small fire fifty yards from the first in a straight line. For half an hour he worked, until a line of fire ran brokenly from north to south along some hundred yards of prairie.

"Fifty dollars for starting a prairie fire, old man," he remarked grimly to his nervous horse, as he led him back to the trail. "And considerably more than a fifty-dollar fine for aiding and abetting criminals to escape. We ought to have learnt a bit more sense."

He patted the tired horse's neck, mounted and rode rapidly away from the growing line of fire, looking back many times to notice how the thin flicker grew and rose until a wind-driven flame leaped far towards west and south. He shook the reins, bent his head to the wind, and wearied horse and man forced their way towards home.

He met the sergeant and his man at the corner of the main street. They were watching the red glare in the west.

"That'll have spoilt your game, Levett," observed Drummond, reining up. "I've been watching it. They must be well on their way west by this. You won't catch them; but the chances are that the fire will."

"Yes; I've come to a baulk. They'll be riding ahead of that, and it's small use riding behind it," agreed Levett.

* * * *

Drummond hung the untidy little basket among an odd collection of relics in his rooms. Nearly a year later a passing Indian left on the doctor's doorstep a fine pair of Moose horns and a splendid skin of rare black fox, from "A. and R., in gratitude and remembrance." And the world that knew them never heard again of Andrey Burnaby and Rupert Maxwell.

BIG FEES FOR SURGEONS.

Medical men of the fourteenth century exacted large sums from patients, according to a lecture on "The Evolution of Surgery," recently given in London by Sir D'Arcy Power. John Arden in 1349 made a large fortune, said the lecturer. He charged $500 in money of the time for an operation and exacted in addition $200 a year for as long as the patient lived, and two changes of raiment.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS COUNCIL IN SESSION

This is the council of the League of Nations in session at the Palazzo Doria in Rome. It is the tribunal's thirty-second meeting since its formation.

MENU FOR FAMILY

Breakfast — Oranges, cereal, thin cream, creamed dried beef on toast, hashed brown potatoes, bread crumb pancakes, syrup, whole wheat toast, milk, coffee.

Luncheon — Rice and nut roll, brown bread, grape jelly, hearts of celery, hamburg sponge, sponge drops, milk, tea.

Dinner—Roast lamb, baked potatoes, creamed carrots, date salad, canned apricots, chocolate cake, bran rolls, milk, coffee.

A soft cooked egg on toast should be served to four-year-olds for luncheon in place of the rice and nut roll. Since meat is planned for the junior's dinner, none is needed for their luncheon. However, if it's at all possible, serve the hearty meal at noon-time and the lighter meal in the evening. In many families the man of the house and the older children are not at home at noon and the "real" meal must be served at six.

Rice and Nut Roll

One-half cup rice, 1 cup milk, 2 tablespoons butter, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 1 cup nut meats, fine dried bread crumbs.

Wash rice well through several waters. Cook in boiling salted water until tender and as dry as possible. Part of the goodness of the rice is thrown away in the water in which it was cooked. Let cool and add butter, milk, salt, pepper and nuts. Mix well and shape in a roll. Roll in bread crumbs, pour over 1 tablespoon melted butter and bake in a moderate oven for twenty-five minutes. Serve with or without tomato sauce.

Hamburg Sponge.

Two cups milk, 2 eggs, 4 tablespoons sugar, 1 tablespoon granulated gelatin, 4 tablespoons cold water, 1 orange, 1 cup whipping cream, 2 tablespoons powdered sugar, few grains salt.

Beat eggs well with milk and sugar and cook in double boiler until thick. Remove from the fire and stir in gelatin softened in cold water and dissolve over hot water. Add juice and grated rind of orange and let stand until cool. When mixture begins to stiffen beat with a dover beater until foamy. Fold in cream whipped until stiff with powdered sugar and a few grains of salt. Chill and serve with the sponge cake cut from the dinner dessert the night before.

Date Salad.

Large dates, chopped nuts, cream cheese, cream, salt and pepper, lettuce mayonnaise, whipped cream.

Wash dates and dip in very thin syrup. Two tablespoons sugar to a cup of boiling water makes the syrup Put dates on a pan and put in a cool oven until they are nicely "plumped." Remove stones and fill with nuts and cheese worked with cream until moist and smooth. Season the filling with salt and pepper to taste while mixing. Serve the dates on a bed of lettuce with mayonnaise topped with a spoonful of whipped cream made slightly pink with paprika.

Breakfast — Halves of grapefruit, hominy grits with figs, thin cream, crisp toast, soft boiled eggs, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—Oysters and macaroni, shredded cabbage with lemon juice, ginger snaps, milk, tea.

Dinner—Roast pork, baked sweet potatoes, apple sauce, turnips in lemon sauce, spinach salad, whole wheat bread, orange ice, sponge cake, milk, coffee.

The eggs are suggested in the breakfast menu for the children who go to school.

Cabbage lightly seasoned with salt and sugar and served with lemon juice is rich in vitamins and mineral salts necessary for growing bodies. It's one of the "foods that keep us well" and should be served often.

Hominy Grits With Figs.

One cup hominy grits, 4 cups boiling water, 1 teaspoon salt, ½ cup chopped figs.

Add salt to boiling water and slowly sift in hominy. Cook directly over the fire for ten minutes and then in a double-boiler for two or three hours. Wash figs well before chopping. Add he last hour of cooking. In the morning reheat and serve.

Oysters and Macaroni.

One cup macaroni broken in inch pieces, 1 pint oysters, 3 tablespoons butter, ½ cup buttered crumbs, few drops lemon juice, few gratings nutmeg.

Cook macaroni in boiling salted water until tender. Drain and rinse under cold water. Put one-half the macaroni into a buttered baking dish, add half the oysters and sprinkle with salt and pepper, lemon juice and nutmeg. Dot with half the butter. Cover with remaining macaroni, add the rest of the oysters, seasoning and butter. Cover with buttered crumbs and bake 25 or 30 minutes in a hot oven.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER.

TEAPOT DOME

By PAUL R. MALLON.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—The Teapot Dome investigation which rocked the nation with its sensational disclosures will never be reopened, Senator Thomas J. Walsh, its moving force, declared last week.

This, with the score of other probes undertaken by the Senate during the epidemic of investigations at the last session of Congress, are being definitely and quietly closed forever, a canvas of the situation by the United Press shows.

The Daugherty inquiry, like the Teapot Dome scandal, now is tied up in the courts and the instigators of both believe they have accomplished the chief purposes and see no reason to look for a resumption of hearings.

Other more or less sensational investigations undertaken which have come to an unnoticed death include:

The diploma mill inquiry instituted by Senator Royal S. Copeland, of New York, to ascertain how widespread was the practice of issuing fake certificates to physicians.

The investigation of Senator Thomas J. Heflin into the alleged frauds in sales of Texas lands.

The investigation of Russian propaganda circulated in the United States, conducted by Senator Borah.

The campaign expenditures inquiry authorized upon demand of Senator Robert M. Lafollette.

The probe of all alleged propaganda thrust upon Congress, especially concerning the Box Peace prize, which was sponsored by Senator Reed, Missouri Democrat.

All of them have either accomplished their purpose or definitely failed to do so, and for one reason or another are slipping from the public eye.

It is the opinion of Walsh that the final report on Teapot Dome will not be prepared for months and perhaps years. The inquiry stopped when Harry F. Sinclair, who admitted the lending of money to Albert B. Fall, former Secretary of Interior, pleaded that the committee had no right to interrogate him. The matter is now pending in the courts and will be fought through to the United States Supreme Court where it may take years to settle.

"Even if the courts uphold us, as I expect them to do, Sinclair will undoubtedly rest upon his constitutional right to refuse testimony on the ground that it might incriminate or degrade him and influence the action taken against him in the courts," Walsh says. "We cannot compel him to testify. I am confident that we did not get to the bottom of Teapot Dome. The whole transaction reeked with fraud. I am afraid the whole truth will never be known. It was too carefully covered up."

The Daugherty Case.

The Daugherty inquiry was halted when Mal Daugherty, brother of the former Attorney-General, took his case to the courts to protest against the investigating committee surveying his provate records of his bank in Washington Courthouse, Ohio. His case is now pending in the Supreme Court But Attorney-General Harry Daugherty resigned—the chief purpose sought by Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, in instituting the proceedings, and Wheeler is willing to let it go at that.

"There may be some ground for criminal action against some of the figures in our inquiry," Wheeler says, "but our main purpose has been accomplished and I see no evidence which would warrant our reopening the inquiry now."

The only investigation held over from the last session of Congress and which is still running is the Internal Revenue Bureau investigation started by Senator James R. Couzens, of Michigan. But Couzens is conducting his inquiry on an unprecedented basis. The committee meets behind closed doors regularly and no effort is made to obtain publicity in the newspapers. Individual tax cases are inspected and the bureau, which is being investigated, is co-operating with the committee to reopen old tax cases which may have been improperly handled. It is more like a meeting of the board of directors of a business corporation than the meeting of a Senate investigating committee, and Couzens claims it is saving millions to the government by forcing collection of old taxes.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

LOSE WEIGHT.

Four tablespoons stewed rhubarb, 1 poached egg, 1 cup tomato bouillon, 1 cup combination vegetable salad, 4 ounces roast leg of lamb, 1 tablespoon mint sauce, 2 small new boiled potatoes with minced parsley, 10 stalks fresh asparagus, 1-2 head lettuce with lemon juice and mineral oil dressing, 4 tablespoons shredded fresh pineapple, 2 small pieces crisp gluten toast, 1 gluten roll, 1 slice whole wheat bread, 1 pint skimmed milk.

Total calories, 1204. Protein, 342; fat, 351; carbohydrate, 511. Iron, .0186 gram.

The mineral oil mentioned for the head lettuce can be found at any drug store. It is an excellent lubricant, has little or no food value and is very palatable combined with lemon juice or vinegar or in a mayaonnaise dressing.

Remember that these reducing diets are planned for the normal, healthy, merely too fat person. If you must diet because of any organic trouble consult your physician and follow his diet list.

And don't expect to see your surplus weight melt like a block of ice in the July sun. The first two or three weeks may not make any perceptible difference. Flabby fat may become firm from exercise and you may begin to feel more alert.

These diets are low in fats but provide enough to maintain perfect health.

Concentrated sweets are taboo but natural sugar and starch is furnished by fruits and vegetables.

Protein is supplied by vegetables and grains as well as meats, so there is little danger of an excess of acidity being caused.

GAIN WEIGHT.

Four tablespoons stewed rhubarb 2 codfish balls, 1 cup cooked cereal with 12 seeded raisins, 1 poached egg, 1 cup tomato bouillon, 1 cup combination vegetable salad with 2 tablespoons mayonnaise, 4 ounces roast leg of lamb with 2 tablespoons mint sauce, 4 tablespoons brown gravy, 3 new potatoes in 3 tablespoons cream sauce, 10 stalks asparagus with 2 tablespoons melted butter, 1-2 head lettuce with 4 tablespoons Russian dressing, 4 tablespoons shredded fresh pineapple, 1 large slice sponge cake, 4 tablespoons chocolate bread pudding with 2 tablespoons hard sauce, 2 corn meal muffins, slices whole wheat bread, 2 dinner rolls, 4 tablespoons butter, 1-4 cup cream, 1 tablespoon sugar, 2 tablespoons jelly or jam, 1 pint whole milk.

Total calories, 4051. Protein, 472; fat, 1726;. carbohydrate, 1853. Iron, .0192 gram.

When dieting to gain be careful that you are not upsetting your digestion and remember that a moderate amount of outdoor exercise and plenty of sleep are as necessary as lots of calories.

If you "simply can't" drink milk in its simple state then drink it in cocoa or egg-nogs or cream soups, but be sure to take it some way or other. And if the sweetness and richness of the cocoa is too cloying drink a cup of hot water after drinking the cocoa.

You will probably be very uncomfortable after your meals for the first week. That will be because your stomach is actually tsretching to accommodate the unusual amount of food you are eating.

Try to use the foods that will mean the most as fat producers instead of those you like best. Drink cocoa for afternoon tea in place of tea with lemon and choose iced chocolate instead of iced tea or lemonade for luncheon. These all add calories and eventually fat.

A GOOD ONE ON BROWN.

Brown was hurrying home from business, when he met his friend, Smithers, also homeward bound, carrying a large bouquet.

"Anything special on?" asked Brown, eyeing the flowers.

"No," was the reply, "only taking the wife home a few flowers; she likes a little surprise some times — doesn't yours?"

"Can't say I've tried her,"

"Well," advised Smithers, "take my tip, and you'll find that she'll be ever so pleased."

On arriving home the next evening Brown presented his wife with a large bunch of the choicest blooms procurable. Instead of being pleased, the lady promptly burst into tears, exclaiming between her sobs:

"Oh, dear! Oh, dear! This has been an unlucky day. Cook's given notice, the cistern's burst, I've cut my finger badly, and now—now you have come home drunk!"

BAKED POTATOES.

As soon as baked potatoes are removed from the oven the skin should be broken to allow the steam to escape.

LATE IDEAS IN SPORT TOGS

Paris Supplies Charming and Appropriate Costumes for the Country.

The very latest phase in fashion, a reflection of the social activities of the day, is the dress for winter sports. It is picturesque, unique and often amusing. In many ways the trend of the day is countryward, which creates a need for distinction in dress of various kinds. In the days when city people found their pleasure wholly within walls, the calling of a creator of fashions must have been comparatively simple. However elaborate the gowns of a great lady, it went without saying that she would at all times dress in a manner consistently feminine.

Artists put much skill and industry, and their patrons fabulous sums, sometimes, into splendid ball gowns, charming afternoon frocks and formal tea gowns, and a tailor who knew his trade had the most difficult task of all in building a plain tailored suit for the street.

"Fit," which meant enclosing the lady in something almost as snug as her own skin, was the most important consideration some decades ago, as the pictures in fashion books show, and the modiste employed much crinoline, whalebone and steel. A great deal of thought was given to millinery and footwear, and the whole scheme of things involved much detail, the finest workmanship and a great deal of money, as money was counted in grandmother's young ladyhood.

When she went sleighing, she was wrapped in furs over the most modish frock and bonnet. When she skated, it was in a costume whose architecture displayed a figure as tightly molded in stays as it appeared in her most elaborate evening gown. In those days any tailor was entrusted with the making of a skating suit, and, for that matter, many of them were obviously home-made affairs.

In the span of two generations dress has been revolutionized, and femininity is expressed in terms of a boyish silhouette, in a figure guiltless of stays, in trousers, boots and cardigans. The debutante is an athlete, the young daughter a tomboy, and the successful couturier must make this type the keynote of his endeavor.

The finer fabrics—flannels, broadcloth, camel's hair and cashmere—are not for woman's activities. Her tailor works to-day in English materials, in Scotch tweeds and homespuns, in Highland tartans, in buckskin and suede. Innumerable homely stuffs and accessories, once looked upon as bourgeois, are receiving respectful attention, and one by one appear as something choice and rare. Such lowly garments as knitted jackets, mufflers and woollen skirts that were associated with the farm are now thought chic and represent the type of thing designated as sports dress. It is the fad of the day to feature the peasant's garment, and the more crude it is the more decorative and smart One's modiste presents the crochetted "shawl," the sleeveless jacket (originally called cardigan) and the knitted socks of yarn as the last word in smartness for a sportswoman's outfit.

These very things are not confined to sports clothes, for their comfortable appeal has found its way to the luxury-loving person who seldom stirs beyond walls. Whether the argument is for ease or for the pleasant consciousness of being in style appears not to signify, for they are unmistakable modish.

Anticipating a bit the actual season of winter sports, the department stores and smaller shops have had on display from time to time, suits, single garments and ensembles in the smartest sports costumes. They are more important, having more of style, service and individual appeal than any clothes of this type yet shown. They are far ahead of last year's styles, which were then considered to be outre, and have developed some extremes of fashion that are most interesting.

A few of the lovely things just brought from Paris indicate the trend for outdoor winter clothes, without regard to fitness for specific occasions. Among these is a particularly attractive example of the knitted dress. It consists of a three-quarter length coat of black and white zephyr wool crochetted in a fine close stitch, one stripe being all white, the other black, each two and one-half inches wide. The collar is wide and voluminous, to stand high and fold over, and the coat fastens with wool frogs down the front. The turnback cuffs are wide, and a fringe edges the bottom of the coat.

This is one of the most engaging examples of black and white in striking combination that has been shown this season. It is a garment to be worn over any dress, for a stroll, a drive or short outing in the country. There is a knitted skirt of black and white stripes to match the coat, if a two-piece suit is desired, and a scarf that will combine with the suit or serve separately.

In this black and white scheme are many stunning suits—two-piece, three-piece and separate garments. A charming little winter dress is made of white Kasha cloth in one piece. The stitched seam that joins skirt to bodice in an ornamental line and cuffs and collar are outlined with a row of small, dul black buttons close together. This frock, which has no other trimming, is original and chic and is intended, in its slim simplicity, to be worn under an overwrap of cloth or fur.

In the same collection is a frock of white broadcloth cut in a straight silhouette, with a pattern in yellow cloth introduced in points and slender panels in the bodice and at the line of the hips.

Another model in done in gray Kasha duvetyn, over which is worn a coat of gray Rodier material with deep skirt band, collar and cuffs of kit fox and lining of silver gray brocaded crepe. In gayer mood is a three-piece suit of brown tweed, strictly tailored. The overblouse is a combination of vivid scarlet, orange, black and brown, and the three-quarter coat is made of the plain tweed, with scarf of the same lined with bright orange silk.

Since colored stockings have become the rage, many pretty patterns as shown. The sheer chiffons are in flesh, beach, apricot, amber and beige, usually plain and thin as gossamer. Black and white is smart, but black is seldom seen except in the lacy open work and embroidered stockings. In the woollen stockings that are now smart for the street and sports wear are many engaging styles, checks, diagonals, stripes and the plain woollens embroidered with fancy clocks.

FRANCE HAS HOPES

An important step in the direction of European economic reconstruction was marked by the opening of negotiations between France and Germany for a new commercial treaty. Similar negotiations were started with other countries.

On the eve of the election in Great Britain that brought about the fall of MacDonald, Premier Herriot extended de jure recognition to Soviet Russia, thus fulfilling one of his election promises. An agreement on the specific questions at issue between the two countries still is to be reached, however.

An internal loan to obtain 4,000,000,000 francs was floated by the Herriot government shortly before a new loan was concluded with the house of Morgan, one of the principal purposes of which is to consolidate the $100,000,000 credit that already had been renewed once.

With the United States taking official part, an inter-Allied financial conference assembled in Paris toward the end of the year to repartition the profits and costs of the Rhur occupation and divide the payments by Germany under the first years of the Dawes plan.

Around this time France was torn with religious dissension over the determination of the Herriot ministry to suppress France's diplomatic representation at the Vatican.

As the year ended the restoration of the devastation wrought in France by the war is nearing completion, which is expected this year. It is estimated that so far France has spent between 70 and 80 billions of francs on this work.

BRITAIN'S NEW AIRSHIP

By CLAIR PRICE.

Work has begun in England on two airships, the specifications of which call for gas capacities of 5,000,000,000 cubic feet, a figure which is far ahead of the capacity of any airship now in existence. It is exactly twice the capacity of the ZR-3 and more than twice the Shenandoah's capacity. The larger of the two British giants is to carry seven engines, developing a total of 4,200 horse-power, more than twice the horse-power developed by the five engines of the ZR-3.

Both the British vessels are being planned for a mail and passenger service to India. One is being built at Howden by the Airship Guarantee Company, in which the British Government, the Vickers firm and the Shell Oil group are interested. It has received the official type number of R-100 and is to be delivered, ready for the India service, in September, 1927. The other, R-101, is being built by the Government in the Royal Airship Works at Cardington and the assembly of its parts is to begin late next summer. It is to be ready for its home trials by the end of 1926 and is to go into the India service early in 1927.

The R-101 is to be a little the larger of the two. Its approximate over-all length is to be 720 feet and the length of the R-100 is to be 695 feet. The Shenandoah's length is 680 feet and the length of the ZR-3 is 660. The maximum diameter of the R-101 is to be 130 feet, two feet less than that of the R-100. The maximum height of each is to be 140 feet. The total lift of the R-101 is to be 155 tons, three tons more than that of the R-100. Of this load, 75 tons are to be available for fuel, food, mails and passengers, as compared to the corresponding figure of 50 tons for the ZR-3. Twenty tons, it is estimated, will be available for mails and passengers on the 2,500-mile run to India. Plans are being made for accommodation for 100 passengers, sleeping in two-berth cabins, with dining, recreation and smoking quarters on a separate deck. Officers' and crew's accommodations are to house four officers and fifty men. In time of war, when the R-101 is to go into reconnoissance duty with the British Navy, it is to be able to remain at sea for a maximum time of three weeks.

Both the R-100 and the R-101 are selected as the first steel airships, duralumin steel to be used for their girders instead of the duralumin which airships have previously used. The seven propellers, which are expected to give each of them a speed of 70 miles an hour (approximately the same as the speed of the ZR-3), are also to be of steel to meet the tropical heat to which they are to be subjected. Both are to burn kerosene instead of the gasoline which all engined aircraft have used.

It is the British view that the principal fire danger in an airship does not arise primarily from the hydrogen which fills its gas bags, but from the gasoline system which feeds its gasoline engines. Once a fire is started in the gasoline system, the proximity of a great amount of hydrogen is held to be perilous, but in time of peace hydrogen is not held to be a danger in itself. Accordingly, efforts have been made toward eliminating the use of gasoline rather than the use of hydrogen. Both the Air Ministry's and other research workers have devoted much time to the development of a type of engine which would burn kerosene of a high flash-point instead of the volatile and inflammable gasoline, which is said to have been the source of practically all peace-time airship fires.

Some months ago it was announced that Dr. Ricardo, whose engine research was of great value during the war, had worked out in conjunction with Dr. Hewley, the Shell Company's expert, an aero-engine which burned kerosene combined with hydrogen, a mixture with a flash-point of 220 degrees instead of the forty degrees which is the normal flash-point of gasoline. The hydrogen was to be drawn from the gas bags of the ship. When an airship begins a voyage, its bags leak a certain amount of gas and some of this, which is normally wasted into the air, was to be utilized. Even toward the end of a long voyage, when the quantity of gas becomes so small that it only just carries the ship, it was believed that sufficient hydrogen for the engines could still be drawn off.

It is not certain that this type of engine is yet ready for manufacture. It takes two or three years to produce a new type of engine and, even when it is completed, the work of fitting it into the ship involves a wide variety of changes, from changes in construction and design to changes in insurance rates. Nor is it yet certain that this type of engine, if ready for manufacture, is to be used in the R-100 and the R-101. It is certain, however, that both are to burn kerosene instead of gasoline. Thus far, no indication has come from the Air Ministry that the use of hydrogen is to be discontinued, either in peace or war, although bags may be surrounded by bags containing "a non-explosive gas." American airship authorities, as is well known, prefer helium, which lacks less than 10 per cent. of the lifting power of hydrogen, and which is not explosive. It is now extracted cheaply from Texas natural gas and the United States has thus far had a monopoly of it.

Many Experiments Under Way.

While the R-100 is to be built under the semi-private auspices of the Airship Guarantee Company, the R-101 is to be a purely Government-built ship, and, the first official act of Sir Samual Hoare-Air Minister in the new Baldwin Government, was to visit the Royal Airship Works at Cardington, where the assembling of the R-101 is to begin next summer. Both the new giants are to be the result of slow and cautious experiment on five old airships. Both are to embody the carefully sifted-out theory of the last few years, they are to be given the benefit of a vast amount of data formulated in laboratories and tested on the old airships both in England and in the tropics. A great amount of metallurgical research, of investigation into the subjects of airship girders, airship shape and design, a long series of experiments with devices for improving stability and trim on approaching and when resting at mooring masts—all this is to be tried out on the old ships in order that the two new ships may be as safe and as comfortable as it is possible to make them.

For the Government's own ship, the R-101, the old ships R-33 and R-36 are to serve as experiment ships. Both are now being reconditioned, the R-33 at Cardington and the R-36 at Pilham. Both are expected to be ready for their home trials in the spring and are thereafter to devote the summer to aero-dynamic tests, one of them going to Egypt to carry out tests of metal stresses under tropical conditions. As soon as the R-33 is reconditioned and out of the shed at Cardington, the length of the shed is to be increased from 700 to 812 feet and its height from 110 to 157 feet. It will then, some time next summer, be ready for the assemblage of the R-101. While the R-101 is building, a 180-foot mooring mast is to be erected in the airship grounds at Cardington, a lattice steel tower with elevators for loading passengers and cargo, winding gear for hauling the ship to its anchorage at the masthead, and pipe lines for refueling and watering it. The Air Ministry has already decided that Cardington is to become the country's airship port and is to be fitted with all the accessories of an airship port by the time the two giants are ready to go into operation.

The R-100 and the R-101 are expected to cut the time between London and India from the fifteen days or more which steamers now take, to five or six days. With a halt in Egypt, the distance is believed to be an ideal one for an airship service. It is held to be too long for an airplane service unless a number of short services were started, and this would require a more elaborate organization than a through airship service requires. Plans are to be discussed at the January conference in Delhi for a number of short airplane services in India as feeders to the main airship service, and it is possible that airplane feeder services will also be instituted in Europe.

There is talk of ultimately extending the main airship routes from Egypt to Cape Town and from India to Australia, and of assuming the command of the air by building up an air mercantile service in the same way as the command of the sea was finally taken by building up a world-wide marine merchant service. At present, however, attention is naturally concentrated on the London-India service which seems to be in prospect, and particularly on the very fast mail which that service promises. Under present conditions, the India mail travels overland from London to Marseilles and by steamer from Marseilles to Bombay, a daily average of about eight tons of mail passing through Marseilles to and from India. Over this route the present contract between the British Postmaster-General and the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company stipulates a transit time of twelve and a half days between London and Bombay, and the proposed airship service now promises a transit time of five or six days.

Indian Mails Slow.

At present India is in a curious position with respect to its London mail. The present transit time of twelve and a half days was set up before the war by the P. & O. liner Caledonia. Instead of clipping its mail times, as mail times have been clipped on the North Atlantic, India is no better off than it was before the war, for the very natural reason that the P. & O. has not yet had time to recover from the severe ravages which submarines made into its fleet. Add to the damage which the P. & O. sustained during the war the peculiar conditions of the Indian service—the absence of effective competition, the high cost of coaling, the loss in condenser efficiency which arises from driving ships at the same speed through the cold waters of the Atlantic and the hot waters of the Red and Arabian Seas and the twenty-hour delay in coaling at Port Said and passing through the Suez Canal—and you have the reasons for the essential difference between the fast North Atlantic service and the more leisurely India service.

Meanwhile Bagdad has been given a startling improvement in its mail service to London. Military airplanes have been operating a regular service between Cairo and Bagdad, and although the ordinary sea and overland transport still remains between Cairo and London the through Bagdad-London time has been cut from twenty-five or thirty days (via the Persian Gulf, Bombay and Aden) to eight or nine days via Cairo. No doubt the remarkable success of the Bagdad-Cairo air mail lies at the heart of England's present hope of a five or six-day air mail to India. At present the P. & O. is paid a total of about $305,000 a year for carrying the India mails, a sum which is shared by the British and Indian Post Offices. It would, of course, be some time, regarding an airship mail even in the most optimistic light, before the whole of these sums would be released in England and in India for the support of the airship service. For some time to come, it is thought that there would be both a fast airship mail and an ordinary steamer mail to and from India, extra postage being required on letters intended for the air mail in view of its high speed.

THE GREAT BEEF ECONOMY

"CORRIGAN

by EDMUND SNELL

A hunted look crept into her eyes.

"If he comes back," she whispered, as if to herself.

"Of course he'll come back. If Mr. Vereker's the man I imagine him to be—he's perfectly capable of looking after himself. Solicitude's a deuce of a rotten thing, y'know, and it's apt to get on the nerves. Try and muster up some real interest in something—and take a tonic. We all have to come to that sooner or later. Good-bye."

There was a certain amount of conviction in Fellowes' parting shot, but he sat for a long time with his head in his hands when the slim form of Pamela Vereker had disappeared among the trees. He didn't like the look of things on the other side of the wire. He remembered one other case of a similar nature that had come within the range of his long experience—and on that occasion the climax had been distinctly tragic. He rather wondered, moreover, whether Corrigan would look upon Pamela as a second Diana.

As time wore on the first assistant of the Orang-Puteh estate saw a great deal of Pamela. He assumed that she had followed his advice and taken a tonic, for a subtle change seemed to have come over her and there was less worry in her eyes. Jack Vereker returned from Kudat and they spent his first evening at Fellowes' bungalow. He was a man after Fellowes' heart—broad, keen and gray eyed—who kept his troubles to himself and plunged whole-heartedly into any amusement that offered. It was not until their fourth meeting at his own house that he unburdened himself. Pamela was in her room and the two men strolled the veranda, smoking

"I shall be off again in a few days," he said suddenly. "Arundill's interested in some wildcat scheme at Labuan—and wants me to look into it."

Fellowes glanced up.

"Oh! Not likely to be a long job, I imagine?"

"A matter of a week or ten days at the most, but it's an infernal nuisance." He came to a halt in the centre of the floor. "Pamela's told you something of our affairs, I believe. I was an awful ass to bring her out here at all; but at the time it seemed a reasonable sort of economy to make, and she had always wanted to travel. Neither of us had the ghost of an idea things would turn out like this."

"Of course not. Why don't you take her with you?"

"I can't, very well. I'm trekking across country for a bit. I wanted to send her off to Jesselton. There are one or two married fellers there who'd be glad to have her, but Pamela's not keen. I'm wondering if you'd mind keeping an eye on her."

Fellowes' heart leaped within him and it was only with an effort that he succeeded in remaining outwardly calm.

"I see. You'd like her to trot round with me whenever she feels inclined." He flushed suddenly beneath the tan. "Did your sister suggest this?"

Vereker surveyed the back of his hand.

"I don't remember. We were talking things over last night and I believe the idea was my own."

"She offered no objection?"

"On the contrary. Look here, Fellowes, I don't think I quite follow you. What, in the name of goodness, are you driving at?"

Corrigan's second in command held his head obliquely.

"I'm not very well up in these matters; it had never occurred to me that a woman like Miss Vereker would want to hang around with a fellow for a week or ten days on end. As far as I'm concerned, there's nothing I'd like better in the world."

Vereker thrust his hands into his pockets.

"I wish you meant that," he said.

The taller man gasped.

"Eh?"

"You said there was nothing you'd like better."

"There isn't."

"I wish from the bottom of my heart I could believe you. It'd ease my mind tremendously. D'you think I don't know," he continued fiercely, "what Arundill's game is with regard to us both? D'you think I don't realize what an ass I was to show my hand? Every time he's sent me on these fool's errands I've suffered agonies of mind for her sake. Arundill wants Pamela—and he'd like to know I was at the bottom of the sea. I've been fired at twice lately. If anything should happen to me——"

The other caught his hand.

"You can count on me—absolutely—and unconditionally. You understand me, don't you?"

Vereker returned his grip warmly.

"Thanks," he muttered hoarsely. "You're a brick, Fellowes. Er—what are you drinking?"

Out of the corner of his eye Fellowes caught the slim form of Pamela standing in the doorway.

"Fellowes was just saying that a whisky at sundown——"

"How disgustingly unromantic! You won't have to wait very long, for I saw the boy polishing the glasses a couple of minutes ago."

It was when Pamela was officiating with the soda that Fellowes' head came very close to hers.

"You look thoughtful, Mr. Fellowes."

"I was wondering," he replied, "whether you'll ever get tired of fraternizing with the enemy!"

"Fellowes has been good enough to suggest you should ride round with him while I'm in Labuan," interposed her brother.

She laughed a little uneasily.

"I'm afraid the enemy will be frightfully bored."

"Not this enemy," said Fellowes earnestly.

* * * *

And then, close upon the heels of being blissfully pitch-forked into the company of the lady of his dreams, came the inevitable encounter with Arundill.

He was strolling back from Vereker's just after nightfall and was making for the boundary wire when a voice hailed him from the darkness.

"Who's that?"

"Fellowes—of Orang-Puteh. Who're you?"

A figure stepped jauntily on to the path and deposited a hurricane lamp on the ground at Fellowes' feet. He faced the first assistant, his hands resting lightly on his hips, his head and shoulders thrust forward.

"I expect you know me well enough by now," he said thickly. "I'm Arundill, and I'd be interested to learn why you find it necessary to trespass on my territory."

A cold gleam came into Fellowes' eye.

"I'm afraid that's my affair."

"Oh, I'm not suggestin' you look in so frequently to see me!"

"I don't," said Fellowes with almost unnecessary emphasis.

The other changed his tactics.

"I suppose Vereker knows you visit his sister at any odd hour?"

"Yes."

"And that she rides with you, lunches at your place—and all that sort of thing?"

"He does."

"And full approves of it all?"

"Certainly."

"Well, I don't! I happen to be rather particular what goes on on my estate—and who comes into it. D'you understand?"

"Something in the nature of a change!" suggested Fellowes, raising his brows.

"What d'you mean?"

"Exactly what I say. I go where I choose, Mr. Arundill, without asking any man's permission. Apart from that, I'm in a far better position to know the courtesies extended among white people in these parts than you are."

Arundill came a step forward, his fists clenched.

"Do you realize who I am?"

"I don't need telling what you are."

He swung suddenly sideways, catching the other's wrist in mid-air and sending its owner toppling backward into a thorn bush.

"Keep both your hands in front of you, Mr. Arundill," he added meaningly, loosening something in his hip pocket.

"I'll remember this, you swine!"

Fellowes stood right over him, holding the lamp so that its rays fully illuminated them both.

"Listen to me, Arundill," he said. "If you harm a hair of that girl's head I'll break every bone in your damned body."

He strode away presently into the blackness, leaving the discomfited manager nursing his injured feelings and the extinguished hurricane lamp. As he surveyed himself in the mirror of his dressing-table before turning in, his features twisted themselves into a broad grin. If he had obeyed his first impulse he would have sent his fist crashing into Arundill's evil face. He was beginning to be infinitely grateful for that second thought. He had treated his enemy as something beneath contempt, something against which it would be foolish to exert any serious effort, and the memory of Arundill's beady eyes blinking impotently up at him did his soul good! There was another aspect of the case that pleased him mightily: Corrigan never hesitated to back his assistants through thick and thin, but a little violence on his part in strange territory might have given Arundill just cause for complaint. He could have displayed damaged features to the owner of the house with the blue sun blinds with "This is what one of your men did. What are you going to do about it?" He would hardly be so anxious to admit that Fellowes had pushed him into a thorn bush—and that he had taken the insult lying down!

In these hectic times, Fellowes was a superlatively busy man. There were native contractors' claims for payment to be checked, areas of hewn land to be measured, coolie labor to be handled and directed to the best advantage, and a thousand and one other matters that permitted him scant time in which to reflect on the rapidity with which his affaire de coeur was progressing, on the wisdom of his choice or on the best methods for her protection until her brother's return. Pamela rode with him four days out of five, sometimes stopping to lunch, at others electing to take the mid-day meal at Vereker's house. A Fellowes—who knew best how to tackle most things—had to confess himself at sea when confronted with her changing moods. There were times when he could have sworn she read his thoughts and caught the question he intended to ask even while it hovered on his lips, for she would spur her mount suddenly forward, her cheeks strangely flushed or, if they were at table, deftly turn the conversation into a fresh channel.

Two days before Vereker was due to return, she appeared on his veranda almost with the dawn. Her boots were dripping with the moisture the sun had not had time to dispel, dark circles hung around her eyes and the customary smile with which she greeted him was a pallid, sickly thing. She tottered forward as if her limbs had lost the strength to carry her, and sank on to a hard chair.

Fellowes was genuinely concerned.

"Miss Vereker—what on earth's the matter? Are you ill?"

"I don't know. I don't think so. I haven't slept an hour all night. He's been prowling round the house—trying to frighten me. I locked my door—and he pushed a note under it. He kept on coming back and trying the handle. When the woman brought me a cup of tea, he tried to slip in. I slammed the door in his face. I haven't the least idea when he went back to his own house."

Fellowes bit his lip.

"I wonder what his game is?" he said presently.

She stared at him in blank amazement.

"Game?"

"There's a lot more in this than meets the eye. Arundill's desperate, but I fancy he knows how to wait his opportunity. Doesn't it occur to you this campaign of persistent annoyance might be arranged to precipitate a quarrel between your brother and himself?"

"Mr. Fellowes, do you really think this?"

"I consider it quite possible."

She dropped her helmet to the floor at her side and passed a weary hand through her curls.

"I've been thinking. I've been wondering whether we wouldn't be justified in running away altogether—now, as soon as ever Jack comes back. There's the beastly old contract, I know, but the firm has treated him shamefully—and they surely would not expect a man to go about with his life in his hands and——"

Fellowes heart sank. He didn't want to think of Pamela going away, but the wisdom of the move appealed to him.

"I understand," he broke in. "We'll both tackle him. I'm with you—all the way. It's not worth it. If they want men to keep their contracts they shouldn't send out fellers like Arundill to lord it over 'em."

She stared into his eyes for fully a minute, then rose to her feet and crossed to the rail. There was a suggestion of pureness and freshness about this early morning tropic landscape that brought a lump to her throat.

"I don't know where we shall go," she murmured huskily, "but I shall never forget all you have done. You have been wonderful!"

He came to her side.

"I haven't had a chance of doing half I would have liked to. Why didn't you give the signal last night?"

"I—I didn't want to trouble you. You see, nothing very desperate happened after all. I was just frightened. If I were to send for you every time I was frightened—you'd never sleep at all."

He caught both her shoulders and made her face him.

"Look here," he said sternly, "I'm not going to have you taking risks. If anything happens to-night—or any other night, you're to fire those two shots. Do you understand?"

She nodded and moved away from him as a turbaned watchman approached with some papers.

* * * *

It so happened that Corrigan spent that evening with Fellowes and, for once in a while, the first assistant prevailed upon him to stop the night. It was toward midnight that the planter called from the rail to Fellowes, who was winding the gramophone while it was still playing.

"Say, Fellowes, things are getting a bit lively across the way, aren't they?"

"What's that?" He stopped the instrument.

"Someone's firin' up there."

Fellowes made a wild grab at his hat.

"Firing? I didn't hear anything. What was it?—a single shot?"

"No, a couple—one after the other. I wouldn't swear to it, but I fancy the second was louder."

"D'you mind waiting here—till I come back?"

"I do! I'm coming with you. What's in the wind?"

On their way up the opposite slope girl on the bed tugged at his heart strings.

"Can't you find her some brandy or something?" he demanded. "Tidy up the place a bit, get this poor chap into another room, and send her a woman."

Arundill went out, muttering to himself. Fellowes came to his feet and closed the door deliberately. He passed Corrigan as he made for the bed. "Look at Vereker," he whispered, "and tell me what you think." He drew the girl's hands tenderly from her face. "Pamela, you didn't do this. Try and calm yourself and listen to me."

She looked up at him through her tears.

"I did," she sobbed. "Somebody had taken away the key. Arundill looked in once—then went away. I was desperate. I felt certain he would come back. I heard footsteps along the corridor. The door opened—and I fired——"

"And broke a water bottle on the dressing-table," said Corrigan suddenly.

Both turned toward the piece of furniture at which the planter's broad finger was pointing.

"But," protested the girl, "he fell! My brother fell as the door swung wide. I didn't see any more. It was horrible, horrible." She covered her eyes.

Fellowes, seeking to comfort her, found Corrigan at his side.

"Why does he want to hush this up?"

"He doesn't want any scandal. He wants to marry Miss Vereker."

Corrigan shook his head.

"Not good enough, old son. I heard two shots, d'you follow me? The second was louder than the first."

He turned as Arundill appeared, a bottle in one hand and a glass in the other.

"Well?" he inquired, his features queerly composed, "what have you decided?" He closed the door after him with his foot.

Corrigan's mouth opened slowly but, before he could speak, Fellowes had slipped in front of him.

"We've decided, Mr. Arundill, that Jack Vereker was a man of peculiar habits. It appears that he walked into his sister's room backwards!"

The bottle slipped from Arundill's hand. His face had gone a shade whiter.

"I don't see——"

"Put up both your hands, Mr. Arundill," advised Corrigan. "Put 'em right up—and keep them there! The game's up. Do you understand?"

But Arundill was in no mood for complying. A wild gleam had come into his eyes and the corners of his mouth twitched horribly. He glanced rapidly from the barrel of Corrigan's automatic to Pamela and from Pamela to the tall man who bent over her. A second later he had wrenched open the door and staggered through, the planter after him.

"Pamela!" said Fellowes softly; "I promised him I'd look after you. . . . I want to look after you . . always . . ."

"Oh, my dear," she whispered brokenly, "I shall want you more than ever now."

Her head dropped on his shoulder.

A single revolver shot broke upon the outer darkness.

Dinner—Broiled porterhouse steak, mashed potatoes, creamed cauliflower, grapefruit and papper salad, bran rolls, cocoanut graham pudding, milk, coffee.

With the exception of the dinner salad the menus suggested can be served to an entire family from the four-year-olds to the grandfather.

Peach and Rice Pudding.

One-fourth cup rice, 1 cup boiling water, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 cup canned peached, ¼ cup sugar, 1 tablespoon lemon juice.

Cook rice in boiling water until water is absorbed. Rub peaches through a colander. To measure the peaches, put fruit loosely into measuring cup and fill with juice. Add peach pulp and juice, sugar, salt and lemon juice to rice and continue cooking, stirring to prevent sticking. Cook over boiling water for the last twenty minutes. Chill and serve with whipped cream.

Grape Fruit and Pepper Salad.

Two grapefruit, ½ cup shredded green pepper, 2 tablespoons minced pimento, ½ cup whipping cream, 2 tablespoons powdered sugar, mayonnaise, lettuce hearts.

Cut grapefruit in halves and scoop out the sections with a strong teaspoon, keeping the pulp as whole as possible. Pour boiling water over pepper and let stand five minutes. Rub off thin covering. Remove seeds and pith and cut in shreds. Combine grapefruit, pepper and pimento and sprinkle with sugar. Keep very cold. Whip cream until stiff, add a few grains of salt and fold in fruit mixture. Serve at once on hearts of lettuce with a spoonful of mayonnaise topping each serving.

Cocoanut Graham Pudding.

Three cups milk, ¾ cup fresh grated cocoanut, 2½ cups graham bread crumbs, 1-3 cup sugar, 2 eggs, 1 tablespoon butter, ¾ teaspoon salt.

Beat eggs, add sugar, salt and milk and beat a few minutes longer. Add cocoanut. Put half the bread in a buttered baking dish, dot with bits of butter and pour over half the cocoanut mixture. Add remaining crumbs dot with remaining butter and pour over the rest of the cocoanut mixture. Bake in a slow oven until firm to the touch, about fifty minutes. Serve warm with lemon sauce.

GOLD

India, for centuries the sink-hole for the world's gold, continues so. Most of the South African output is flowing to India.

And there it disappears. Rajahs hoard it in big lots. Natives bury it in small amounts. No one knows how much gold India has. The amount is fabulously large. Yet India is in the grip of abject poverty and misery. Her gold does her about as much good as money does one of our own multi-millionnires beyond a certain point. Pleasure, after all, is more in what we spend than what we have.

CANADIAN PARLIAMENT OPENS WITH A PAGEANT

Quaint Ceremonies, Archaic Phrases, Gold Lace and Knee Breeches Will Mark Beginning of the Legislative Session at Ottawa This Month.

A score of lancers gallop through a driving snowstorm with penons snapping in the icy wind. They are escorting a man in a plumed hat and grey greatcoat, who sits erect in an open sleigh. Hoofs thud on the hard packed snow. Saddles creak and sabres rattle. The party swings up a long curving drive to the stone portico of a palatial building, blurred in the falling snow. As the soldiery figure steps from the sleigh, a regiment of snowy infantry present arms and band music blares out. The man with the plumes stands smartly at the salute for a minute amid a group of heavy-coated officers while the snow drifts down.

It is not an incident from the history of Czarist Russia. It is Canada's imperial gesture—the opening of the Dominion Parliament.

In Ottawa this month the "Right Trusty and Well Beloved George Julian Hedworth, Baron Byng of Vimy, Governor General of Canada, Commander-in-Chief," will open his Parliament as the vicar of George V. in the Dominion of Canada. There will be scarlet and gold, booming of guns, knee breeches and silk stockings, quaint ceremonies and archaic phrases that ring of an ancient monarchy, and curious fragments of pageantry symbolic of an empire. For a few hours Ottawa will revel in the ceremonial colors and atmosphere of an ancient European dynasty.

Then the ranchers, the doctors, the lawyers and the manufacturers from the prairies and the Provinces by the sea will settle down in the House of Commons for a few months of argument on freight rates and taxation. Most of them pretend to hold the opening ceremonies in mild contempt and with humorous toleration, but there is sufficient romance in the majority to bring them to the capital a few hours early in order to do their bit as Commoners in "the opening."

His Excellency Arrives.

His Excellency arrives. The troops salute and the band plays "God Save the King." Unofficial history has it that once the band was late and had to come up on the double at the official entrance in time to meet the vice regal party. After a 200-yard sprint the bandsmen were able to wheeze out only a few notes of the national anthem before the music faded into the frosty air.

His Excellency proceeds to the Senate Chamber between two lines of officers of the army and navy. Gold lace, medals, scarlet, boots and spurs. Annually Ottawa is amazed that so much "swank" has been kept in moth balls during the twelve months. The Senate Chamber, as the Upper House, is red, corresponding to the red of the Upper House at Westminster, the Lords. On a throne, beneath a crimson canopy, the Governor General sits and summons his Parliament. The Senate is crowded not with Senators, but with officialdom and their wives and daughters. It is in the afternoon, but they are all in evening clothes and their evening make-up looks strange in the daylight. A seat in the Senate is the most sought after place in Canada among those who have social interests.

At the foot of the throne sits all the majesty British justice can summon—members of the Supreme Court of Canada wearing crimson robes trimmed with ermine. On each side of the throne stand the officers of the staff. The Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod is dispatched to summon the Commoners as soon as the Senate is opened.

The Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod is the Sergeant-at-Arms of the Senate. He wears knee breeches, a sword and carries a black rod as symbol of more strenuous days when Parliamentary discipline had to be maintained by brawn. He backs accurately from the vice regal presence and neatly through the door—not an easy trick—then starts off to the other end of the building at the head of a small escort of page boys in eton suits, and uniformed constables, to summon the Commons.

The Gentleman Usher Knocks.

Meanwhile the Members of the House of Commons have been sprawling in their chairs or gathered into groups about the House greeting each other on their return to the capital. Three loud thumps come at the main door, and leisurely the Sergeant-at-Arms of the House goes in apparent innocence to ask what it's all about.

The leisurely part of the game is significant, for if the Commons should be at any business they have the right to keep the messenger from the throne waiting. The Speaker asks the House whether or not they will let him in and House assents (with grins). The Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod is admitted and advances to the Speaker's Throne, making three elaborate bows en route. This little job is usually greeted with applause from the highly amused Commoners. Black Rod announces the royal summons and withdraws.

The Speaker of the Commons leads the procession of Members of Parliament. In three-cornered hat, sweeping black gown, breeches, stockings, buckles, he walks, followed by page boys, the Sergeant-at-Arms in a cocked hat and bearing the mace, the clerk and assistant clerk also in robes and tricornes. The Gentlemen Commoners, led by the head of the Government, fall in behind in groups, looking mildly self-conscious in an effort not to appear impressed.

Technically, the elected representatives of the people are not allowed on the floor of the Senate Chamber. At a brass bar a few feet inside the main door of the Senate the Speaker of the Commons stops and his followers crowd into the lobbies behind him. It is one of the privileges of the press to enter into the Senate lobbies with the Commoners in order to report the Speech from the Throne, although actually the seal on copies of the speech are being broken and the contents put on the wires elsewhere in the building. With the members assembled and the Prime Minister standing beside the throne in a Windsor uniform, the stage is set.

That Windsor uniform has been a point of delicate controversy in Canadian officialdom. It is a tight-fitting black jacket covered with many oak leaves embroidered in gold. Knee breeches and stockings or "slacks" seem to be optional, according to the sensitiveness of each Prime Minister respecting the contours of his calves. There is also a cocked hat.

Recently some one in Canada made the horrible declaration that there was actually no such thing as a Windsor uniform, and that the costume into which a succession of Prime Ministers of Canada had laboriously fitted themselves with groans at the expense was nothing more than a British civil servant's uniform of the second class.

It was a disconcerting discovery. Every one tried not to be annoyed about it, but the idea was disturbing and the matter was dropped largely out of fear that the declaration was true and that Prime Ministers had been wearing the garb of British minor officialdom. The story remains buried.

Rather like a schoolboy having his prize essay read before the class, the Prime Minister stands beside the throne while his Excellency, seated and wearing his hat, reads the historic document which outlines in general terms what his Government proposes to do with the future of Canada. It is, of course, a declaration of the Government's policy for the session, and is one of the best news stories of the year—one to be carried in full by Canadian papers. It is read in French and in English to comply with the remarkable bilingual order under which Canada is governed, as set forth in the Dominion's Constitution—the British North America Act.

As his Excellency reads, the Commoners in the Senate lobby are chatting and exchanging greetings in genial disregard of the oration from the seat of the sovereign. So congenial are they that sometimes the Sergeant-at-Arms has to push through and plead for less noise so that his Excellency can be heard. But the Speaker of the Lower House stands solemnly at the bar and each time reference is made in the speech to the House of Commons he gravely lifts his hat. Soon it is over.

The Commoners go back to their Chamber, the crowd stands as the Governor General departs with his staff; then they scatter to the apartments of the two Speakers for the receptions and teas.

In the Commons, by way of exercising an ancient gesture, a dummy bill known as Bill No. 1 is given a first reading. This is indicative of the supreme indifference of the Lower House to the announcement from the throne. It is one of those things for which English blood was spilled. The bill is never proceeded with, merely being read and dropped from the order paper.

COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR

Darkens Beautifully and Restores Its Natural Color and Lustre at Once.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients a large bottle, at little cost, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger.

PETHERICK'S CORNERS

Natives All Het Up at Sight of Black Bear.

PETHERICK'S CORNERS, Jan. 6.—A great deal of excitement has been aroused in this community by the presence of a huge black bear which made his appearance on Wednesday last.

While Mr. Charles Patts was chopping in his woods at Bradley Bay he heard a slight noise some distance away, but paid little or no attention to it until the noise became louder and upon hearing a loud crashing noise in the brush near by his curiosity was aroused and he attempted to discover from whence the noise was coming and to his surprise a large black bear raised up on his hind feet to greet him.

As Mr. Patts had only an axe with him he did not attempt to interfere but made haste to get to shelter.

From Bradley Bay he followed the wooded areas north along the river until he arrived at Campbellford, when he turned slightly east and following the woods where possibly he continued his journey north arriving at Petherick's Corners early Wednesday afternoon when he entered Mr. Herb Petherick's field just below the house where little Lloyd was sleigh riding. Lloyd became alarmed at the looks of the animal and he at once informed his father, who was a little late in getting a shot at him.

Mr. Bruin travelled on through Mr. Albert Petherick's woods into Mr. Jack Davey's field, across the road into Mr. James Davidson's swamp and north to the vast wooded areas about Allan's Mills.

He was seen by several all along his journey but he was travelling at such a speed that those who took up the chase were soon left behind. Those who saw the bear declare that it was of an exceptionally large size, his track measuring 10 inches by 7 inches.

He has been seen several times since but he is still at large in the forests about Allan's Mills.

Christmas Wedding.

Married—At the Manse, Burnbrae, on Christmas Day, by Rev. D. A. Mackenzie, Thomas Fry and Mrs. Rhoda Kerr, both of Petherick's Corners.

The annual school meeting was held in the school on Wednesday, December 31st, with a fairly good attendance.

Mr. John Dewey was elected third trustee and Mr. J. A. M. Thomson was elected as secretary for the coming year.

The annual Christmas entertainment was held as usual in the Sentinel Hall at Petherick's Corners.

The hall was very artistically decorated for the occasion and was crowded to its seating capacity.

Instrumental music—Orchestra.

Chorus—'Be Glad for Everything', by school.

Play—"Christmas at McCarthy's", by a number of the young pupils.

Song—"Jolly Old Santa Claus," by Primer Class.

Old Santa Claus arrived just in time to distribute the numerous presents which were stored away on the Christmas tree.

A hearty vote of thanks was then extended to the members of L.O.L. No. 2322, for the use of the hall, both for the evening and also for practising. The proceeds of the evening were about $40.00.

Mr. J. D. Thomson of Toronto Normal School is holidaying with his parents at Petherick's Corners.

Miss Hazel Brown spent the holidays with friends in Marmora and Delora.

Mr. Ernie Petherick has purchased the farm formerly owned by Mr. Harold Skillicorn and will take immediate possession.

Mr. Roy Barnum is spending the holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Barnum.

Miss Agnes and Mr. J. D. Thomson spent Friday evening in Seymour West.

STARCH FACTORIES REOPEN.

Maine's Surplus Potatoes Are Being Sold to Them at 45 Cents a Barrel.

BOSTON, Jan. 6.— Maine's surplus potatoes are going to factories, many of which, idle for some time, have been re-opened this winter. Fourteen of these factories are running in Aroostook County to-day. They take care of the ungraded potatoes mostly, the little chaps or those which are otherwiwse unmarketable.

The starch factories are paying forty-five cents a barrel for potatoes. The average price paid the grower for commercial potatoes is about ninety cents a barrel.

VETERAN SKATER WAS PARTY HOST

A. Laidley, of Omemee, Sets Example in Outdoor Sport.

OMEMEE, Jan. 6.—If citizens in general who have reached the half century mark would follow the example of our highly esteemed veteran skater, Mr. A. Laidley, there would be no old people in Omemee, and they would enjoy the advancing years in company with youth and laughter. Mr. Laidley has reached the age of 71, but one is just as old as he feels, and the young people of 21 were not more gay than the veteran host of a New Year's Eve skating party, who skated the old year old and the new one in, on the rink on Wednesday night. At 12.30 host Laidley went to his home nearby and returned with a well-laden basket containing sandwiches, Christmas cake and chocolates, which were thoroughly enjoyed by those fortunate enough to be present.

Should Mr. Laidley decide to carry out a similar scheme at the end of the present year, we venture to say the attendance will be larger. Following is a list of the skaters: Mr. Laidley and daughters, Miss Maude of Toronto; Miss Grace Laidley of Toronto; Mr. G. Langdon, of Lindsay; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Brown, Miss Helen Johnson and Mr. Harley Overholt, Miss Mabel Rowan and Mr. Roy Faulkner, Miss Elda Overholt and Mr. Jim Dickson, of Toronto.

Superintendent of Hospital.

Omemee friends of Miss Irene Fee, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Henry Fee, of Omemee, and sister of Mr. Wilbert Fee, will be pleased to learn of her appointment to the position of Superintendent of Quincey Illinois, Hospital.

Miss Fee is a graduate nurse of Lakeside Hospital, Chicago, and for the past two years has been assistant superintendent of Quincey Hospital and her appointment to the position is a well-deserved honor, which she has labored to attain.

IN MILLBROOK AND DISTRICT

Charles Needler Had Interesting Career—Personal Mention.

MILLBROOK, January 6. — The late Charles Needler, whose death occurred suddenly on Wednesday, December 31, 1924, following an attack of penumonia, was the fourth son of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Needler, and was born in Cavan township 60 years ago.

Deceased was one of a family of eight children, six sons and two daughters, only three of whom still survive. The parents of the late Mr. Needler spent the early years of their married life at "Cedar Valley," Cavan township, where his father followed his life calling by operating what is usually known as the "Lower Mill." This mill was the property of Mr. Needler, Senior, who with his wife and family had come to this country from England, and were among the most highly respected pioneer settlers of Cavan township.

When the deceased was but three weeks old his parents moved to Millbrook to reside, purchasing the home stead on Anne street, with the pond and mill property adjoining.

The late Mr. George Needler owned and operated these mills and for many years, assisted by his sons as they grew old enough to assume a part of the responsibility, carried on an extensive business, not only for supplying the local needs, but shipping flour to many outside points, in Ontario and in Quebec province as well. The destruction of these mills by fire, 15 or 16 years ago, was a heavy loss not only to the owners, Mr. Charles Needler having at that time succeeded his father as head of the business, but the commercial life of the community suffered as well. They have not since been replaced, except by a chopping mill and a lumber mill, now owned and operated by the firm of Attwool & Sheppard.

Over thirty years ago the deceased was united in marriage to Miss Jessie Roddick, member of one of the pioneer families of the Cobourg district, and to this union six children, four daughters, Misses Janet, Helen, Alice and Margaret, and two sons, George and William, were born, all of whom survive their father.

After the mills here were burned, the late Mr. Needler was offered and accepted a responsible position with the Maple Leaf Miling Company, of Toronto, and has since resided in that city, moving his family there about two years ago.

A severe attack of pneumonia, which developed shortly before Christmas, but from which he was apparently recovering satisfactorily, ended fatally on New Year's Eve, with startling suddenness.

The news of Mr. Needler's death not only came as a sad shock to his family, but cast a gloom over the entire community. A large circle of relatives and friends reside in the vicinity, in nearby towns and cities, and in Otonabee township, the families of the Stewart settlement, to which pioneer stock his mother, the late Ellen Stewart, belonged, being closely connected.

Besides the bereaved widow, and members of his family, the other immediate surviving relatives are one sister, Miss Etta, at home, and two brothers, Dr. G. H. Needler, of Toronto University, and Mr. Alfred Allen Needler of Millbrook. Previously deceased were three brothers, Walker, Edwin and Lewis, and one sister, Miss Mary.

The late Charles Needler was a life-long and faithful member of the Anglican communion, attending St. John's church, Toronto, the rector, Rev. Mr. MacNamara, having charge of the service held at his late residence on the evening of January 1st, the body being brought to Millbrook the following day at noon for interment. The funeral took place from St. Thomas' church, a representative body of citizens gathering to pay a last tribute of respect to one whose family, and who personally, always stood for what was in the best interests of church and community service.

The Rector, Rev. Canon Allen, conducted the service at church and the graveside, the pall-bearers being Messrs. George, Ormond and James Stewart, cousins of the deceased, W. T. A. Deyell W. T. Wood and H. B. Allen. Many beautiful floral tributes were laid upon the casket. Interment took place in the family burial plot at St. Paul's cemetery Fourth Line, Cavan.

Among those from outside points who attended the funeral were: Dr. G. H. and Mrs. Needler, and son, Mr. Alfred Needler, George and William Needler, of Toronto, Mr. J. McLennan, Lindsay, Mr. James Stewart, Peterborough, Messrs. George and Ormond Stewart, Frank and Bruce Savigny, Otonabee, Mr. R. H. Kells, Toronto.

Messrs. Jas. Fair and W. Cathcart, of Peterborough, were in town on Monday.

Mr. Austin Sutton, of Fallis' Line, was the guest of his parents, Colonel and Mrs. D. Sutton, at Cobourg, over the holiday.

Mrs. E. Anderson, of Peterborough, who spent the holiday season with her daughter, Mrs. J. H. George, Fallis Line, has returned home.

The many friends of Mrs. Archibald Wood will regret to learn that she has been ill during the past week.

Mrs. McKee Bingham, of Peterborough, who sang morning and evening at the anniversary services in St. Thomas' church on Sunday, was the guest of Mrs. C. M. Westmacott over the week end.

Mrs. J. Leitch of Toronto, was the guest of her sister, Mrs. W. E. Ball over the New Year's holiday.

Mr. and Mrs. E. McConnell and two children, Margaret and Bobby, spent the New Year's holiday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. Nattrass.

Miss Marjorie Sayles was in Toronto over the week end attending a re-union of the girls who were at the C.G.I.T. camp last July, at Lake Couchiching. Elsie Spence, Gladys Tucker and Marjorie Sayles represented the "Wide Awakes" group from the Methodist church here at the camp.

Rev. Provost Seager, of Trinity College, Toronto, who preached anniversary sermons in St. Thomas' church, Millbrook, morning and evening, and at Christ church, Ballieguest of Rev. Canon and Mrs. Allen Loro, in the afternoon. was the at the Rectory during his stay in the village.

The final results in the voting whether or not to enter the United Church of Canada from St. Enoch's church, Garden Hill, showed 27 for, and 8 against. A total of over sixty votes was possible at this appointment, but the sentiment in favor of union was so general that only a comparative few took the trouble to record their votes. The vote was counted on Monday.

Mrs. E. Howard of Toronto, and her daughter, Mrs. R. Doherty, of Chicago, were guests of Rev. F. W. and Mrs. Howard at the parsonage over the New Year's holiday.

Mr. J. Miltz has been in Toronto spending the holiday season with his wife and daughter.

Lang and Madill shipped two carloads of stock from Millbrook, and one from Frazerville on Monday. The cars of hogs went to Peterborough, and the cattle to Toronto. Mr. Lang went to the city on Tuesday morning in connection with disposing of his shipment.

Miss Gladys Tucker, of Orono, who has been spending the holidays with her friend, Miss JeanBurnham, returned home on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. B. Dawson and baby girl, were guests of Mrs. J. Perrin, Peterborough, during the holidays at Christmas time.

GAVE A CONCERT.

Old Folks Enjoyed Evening Provided by Bible Class.

The thirty-two old men and ladies residing in the Old People's Home, who, in many cases after a youth of energetic work, find themselves in the autumn of their life dependent upon the kindness and charity of the city, were not entirely forgotten during the festivities of the New Year. A New Year which holds promise for them.

A ladies' and men's Bible class of George Street Church combined one evening to give the old people a little of the cheer that was going on in the world outside their lives. A programme of happy entertainment was put on and the old people were also treated to some of the eatables that air in the Christmas cheer.

Mr. Stuart acted as chairman and spoke some cheery words to his audience. The programme was made up of music and readings. The old people took part in the programme themselves, when they sang in chorus some of the old favorites of bygone days.

Gold embroidery is seen not only on satins and chiffons but on wool frocks, and even on lingeries gowns.

OUR MINISTER TO WASHINGTON

Will Relieve British Embassy of mass of work Relative to Canadian Interests. Belief that Appointment will be Announced very soon.

From ocean to ocean, and from the most southerly point of the Dominion to the outermost of its Arctic possessions, there are Canadians who have unbounded confidence in their fitness for any position of responsibility. Especially is this the case in respect to posts in the gift of the government. Every member of Parliament knows that the country will never want for men who are not only willing to admit, but positively anxious to advertise their qualifications for office with emolument at the public expense. The mere whisper of the possibility of a vacancy in the "Service," is enough to add hundreds to the hordes that are trying to get in all the time. But there has been a position awaiting an occupant for the last two or three years, and for which comparatively few applications have been made. It might have been advertised in this fashion:—

WANTED—Intelligent, tactful man; born and educated in Canada, to act as Minister Plenipotentiary for the Dominion at Washington, U.S.A. Must be thoroughly acquainted with the history and politics of both countries and of Great Britain, familiar with all matters on which Britain and Canada have been in disagreement with the United States, or which have formed the subject of treaties, pacts, conventions or mutual undertakings between them. Should be possessed of ample private means to implement pay and allowances from the government. Applications treated confidentially. Write The Government, Parliament Hill, Ottawa, Ont.

There would be several files in the ointment for thousands of office hunters in an announcement like that. The necessity of having money enough of their own to keep in the procession in a capital where wealth is everywhere in evidence would deter the majority. After ... had read this in the dictionary ... would drop out:—

"Plenipotentiary. A person fully empowered, especially a diplomatic representative invested with full powers by a government; specifically a diplomatic representative of the second class ranking next below an ambassador."

There always have been men vain enough to resent the mere suggestion that they should take second place to any one on earth.

Of course the government will not publicly request applications for such an appointment, nor will the man selected have to qualify by passing a Civil Service examination. He will be hand-picked.

Almost every week since May 10, 1920, when the first announcement of such a step by Canada was made by Sir George Foster, in the House of Commons, press despatches and reports have intimated the imminence of a selection. The suspense may have killed a few eager aspirants; if so the cause of their passing has been given as some one or another of the many ills that mankind cannot forever dodge. The intimations that an appointment will not be long delayed have been renewed with vigor of late from both Ottawa and Washington. In the latter place there is as much interest as anywhere in this country, but the prospective appointee is generally referred to in the press as the Canadian Ambassador, a name which will undoubtedly be generally adopted by the public in this country. Thus when summer rolls around we may expect to read items bearing a Washington date line, to this effect:—

"Among the callers on the President today was the Canadian Ambassador, who remained with Mr. Coolidge for the best part of an hour. It is understood that matters relative to international waterways, smuggling of silks into the northern country, and of potent liquids from each to the other, were informally discussed. In the afternoon the Canadian representative, who is an ardent fan, was the President's guest at the ball game. Both were delighted with the result."

John Bull (proudly): "Well Sam, Johnny is going to relieve me of a lot of work here."
Uncle Sam (to himself): "Shades of Lincoln, but Canada's growing fast."

Among those who read there may be some with imagination enough to figure that on more than one occasion the actual conversation would run along on this line:—

"Honestly, Mr. President, do you think that Babe Ruth is a more valuable asset to the Yanks than Walter Johnson is to the Senators?"

"Now you're asking me a very hard one, Canada. But what about the game this afternoon; would you go with me?"

"With pleasure. Who's pitching?"

For after all Ambassadors and Presidents are human, and when they find that they have a mutual interest they are more likely to lend a sympathetic ear to serious matters propounded by one another.

For baseball imported from the United States, Canada is exporting to that country hockey, the fastest game in the world, and the thriller of winter sports. Baseball and hockey may not find mention in documents of state or tomes of history, but they are an asset in good will between two peoples who understand each other pretty well.

Arranged with Britain

When the Canadian government made the original announcement referred to, care was taken to impress the fact that it followed an arrangement with the British government. The Minister Plenipotentiary it was explained, would be in closest touch with the British Ambassador, but would have complete charge of this Dominion's affairs, and would at all times be the ordinary channel of communication with Ottawa on matters of purely Canadian concern, getting his instructions from and reporting direct to the Canadian government. In the absence of the British Ambassador the Canadian Minister would take charge of the whole Embassy and of the representation of Imperial as well as Canadian interests. He would be accredited by His Majesty the King to the President. It was emphasized that the new arrangement did not mean any departure from the principle of the diplomatic unity of the British Empire.

The proposal, generally speaking, had the approval of the Canadian Parliament. Some opposition was voiced to the plan in its entirety, and there was some criticism as to details. In particular a few enquirers advanced hypothetical cases, in which our Ambassador, acting for Britain, presented points of view to the United States government, which London could not accept. No one could give a definite answer to such queries, naturally. Obviously Canada's Minister Plenipotentiary would have to be credited with the possession of a reasonable amount of common sense.

In view of the plea of urgency advanced in May of 1920 for authority to make the appointment, the fact that it has been so long in abeyance, has furnished food for much interesting speculation. There has been a change of government in the interim and several changes of government in Britain. The present Canadian government, is however, committed to the proposition, and its public reasons for nonfulfilment are similar to those previously advanced, namely the difficulty of getting the right man. Several names are now repeatedly mentioned in connection with it. The owner of one of these may wake up some morning, very soon, a full-fledged Minister Plenipotentiary, with all kinds of formalities to be encountered and much dignity to maintain before he gets to the point where he can chattily discuss baseball, hockey, or his golf handicap with the United States President, as friend to friend. But the first thing he will be thinking about probably will be the fit of his ambassadorial uniform and the occasions on which it should be worn.

Lord Bryce, during his Ambassadorship in the United States, declared that three-quarters of the work of the British Embassy at Washington related to the interests of Canada, and favored the Canadian proposal, which in those days had not advanced beyond the stage of tentative discussion.

The British Ambassador today has Canadian advice whenever he needs it. The Canadian Department of External Affairs has a representative in the United States capital, who keeps Ottawa informed on matters affecting the various departments, and also keeps in touch with the British Embassy. That plan is better than the system of the old days, which left Canadian interests almost solely in charge of the British Ambassador, who quite frequently had no first hand knowledge of this country. Even where Canada was consulted at every step of the way, two old timers, Circumlocation and Red Tape, were dogged attendants. The roundabout routes via the British Embassy, the Colonial Office, and Ottawa were clogged alike by their genius for delay and formality, and the results were usually disappointing to this country.

Time and Circumstance

Time has brought its changes. There are few left of the critics who used to argue that every step taken by Canada toward the management of its own affairs, was a step away from Britain and the Empire. The World War and Canada's part in it was the final answer to that view.

Political history reminds us that in 1870 Sir Alexander Galt moved in the Commons, a resolution to the effect that it was expedient to obtain from the Imperial government authority empowering the Dominion government to enter into direct communication with British possessions and foreign states in regard to commercial treaties. Sir John A. Macdonald opposed the proposition as tending to weakening the ties between Canada and the Empire. But in 1878 Galt was entrusted to negotiate with Spain and France for better trade arrangements. Lord Salisbury, then the great power in British government, was careful to make it plain that "the negotiations must be conducted by the British Minister in each instance." In other words Galt was to keep in the background while the British Ambassador occupied the limelight as the real representative of both Britain and the Dominion. Sir John A. Macdonald himself had a trying time during the negotiations which resulted in the treaty of Washington in 1871, when on behalf of Canada, whose interests were great, he accepted the role of a British Commissioner. That treaty and its aftermath of bitter controversy had their part in the moulding of Canadian national character and pride.

Since that period there has been a gradual widening of the powers for negotiating commercial treaties. In 1884 Sir Charles Tupper, then Canada's High Commissioner in London, acting in conjunction with the British Ambassador, negotiated a commercial treaty with Spain. Hon. Messrs. Fielding and Brodeur negotiated the commercial convention between Canada and France in 1907. The negotiations for the proposed reciprocity treaty of 1911 between Canada and the United States were carried on directly between the two governments. Commissioners of these countries made an inquiry into fisheries and signed a treaty in 1918, with respect to the preservation of the Pacific fisheries. Prior to that Britain and the United States had agreed that where Empire interests affected were largely those of one of the Dominions, the British representative on the International Commission of Arbitration, might be from that Dominion.

Britain Had the Burden

In looking over some of these events of the past, it should be remembered that Britain was the sole defender of the Empire. The Dominions were practically untried, though Canada in 1812 had given a taste of the power they were to be in time of stress and trouble. With possessions the world over, many of them absolutely incapable of self-defence, Britain had to take the long view on most international questions. The great and loyal Empire of the present, is her justification.

ROBERT HICKS AGAIN CHOSEN FOR CHAIRMAN

W. H. Bradburn Welcomed Back to Utilities After Re-election.

BETTER SERVICE.

E. F. Mason Suggests Advisory Functions for Member of Staff.

Robert Hicks was re-elected chairman of the Utilities Commission at its meeting yesterday, when W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P., presented his credentials and took his seat on re-election.

Mr. Mason remarked that the Commission should be very pleased in Mr. Bradburn's re-election because of his grasp of the work. A man of his calibre, able to go into figures and see things from a business standpoint, is worth everything to the Commission and the citizens. This year there are many important things to look into—possibly meaning the lowering of rates. This can only be done by very close management and figuring.

... son extended his congratulations and was endorsed by Mr. ... speaking from his experience of twelve years as a Utilities Commissioner.

Mr. Bradburn said during the past three years he had endeavored to give the Commission his best efforts, and would do so during the next three years.

Ask a Lease.

There was a discussion of the renting of the Utilities offices from the City Trust, who asked a lease of 5 years. The building is an investment of the sinking fund and the lease must be signed to protect the bondholders, it was said.

Mr. Hicks said the Commission has paid for the improvements that were made for it, and Mr. Bradburn asked that a clause be incorporated providing for termination of the lease on 6 months' notice.

The Chairman remarked that the building may be too small shortly, and the improvements having been paid for by the Commission, the City Trust should be satisfied to accept a yearly tenancy or a six months' clause, and should, in addition, reduce the rent.

Judicial Inquiry.

Notice was received from the City Solicitor that the date for the judicial inquiry into the power accounts of the Campbell Milling Co. and asking copies of power accounts. The accountant was instructed to give all information desired, including reports from 1917 to the close of 1924, except the part obtained by W. R. Morris, C.R.A., last year, which it is unnecessary to repeat.

Seek Better Service.

The Chairman said in connection with some complaints that the staff must co-operate in making public ownership a success by rendering service.

Mr. Bradburn remarked that every effort must be made to straighten out complaints, and if the manager has not time to visit the citizens who feel their accounts are wrong, then they should be invited to call for a conference.

Mr. Mason expressed the opinion that enough help should be secured to permit one man to go around investigating complaints and giving advice as to saving power.

Knowing how the Campbell Flour Mills can start its machinery without creating a peak, the Commission should be able to tell consumers how to save power, he thought.

Mr. Fisk — "I wouldn't like to guarantee anything like that. You are shouldering a lot of responsibility and they may come back at you later. Most of these men in the large factories understand load factor as well as we do, but they won't practice it."

The Chairman said a number of cases will come up this year, due to re-inspection, and the Commission must be ready to explain.

Mr. Fisk said people are questioning the meter, which is the only thing that the Utilities can go by.

Mr. Hicks proposed a conference at which the possibility of better service to the public might be discussed, and plans laid along progressive lines. The Commission must continue to progress, he said, to fulfil its duty to the citizens.

Dim Daytime Lights.

It was proposed by Mr. Hicks that Victoria Park lights might be connected with the Hunter Street Bridge time clock, cutting out the lights now burning all day. This was left over for further consideration.

OPEN VOTE ON CHURCH UNION IN KNOX CHURCH

Special Congregational Meeting Held Last Night—213 Votes Cast.

HEAVY POLLING.

Fifteen Days Allowed for the Congregation to Vote on the Measure.

A special congregational meeting of Knox Presbyterian Church, was called, by ruling of the Church Union Act, with required previous Sabbath announcements, last evening, in the church.

The enthusiasm of the members in this crisis was shown by the large attendance, almost 300 members being present. Rev. M. C. Mackinnon, pastor, presided, and Mr. J. W. Buyers, by vote, was appointed secretary.

After the devotional opening, the chairman read from the Blue Book and the Act of Union excerpts showing regularity of action and rules as to who should have the vote—with full membership for two years prior to the assent to the Act, on 19th of July, 1924, being required.

Mr. M. N. Clark was called upon to place before the people the dates of voting as follows:

Commencing last evening at the close of the meeting, and continuing each evening throughout this week, until Friday, from 7.30 to 9 o'clock; on Saturday from 3 to 5 o'clock; on Sabbath, for one-half hour, at the close of morning and evening services; the same hours next week, from Monday to Friday evenings, Saturday afternoon, and on Sabbath morning and evening; and the final day for voting to be Monday, 19th January, from 7.30 to 8.30, when the ballot closes.

The chairman then called on the following officers to prepare the lists and ballots for commencing voting:

Returning Officer: E. Benson.

Deputy Returning Officer: R. Mulligan.

Scrutineers: Mesdames Martin and Pollock; Messrs Yale, Gillies, A. McLeish, Jr., and J. Anderson.

Doorkeepers: Messrs. Clark and Buyers.

Preparation having been speedily accomplished, the church members filed in, and with a smoothness of procedure, received their ballots, deposited them, and passed out with a look of satisfaction.

There was keen interest taken, judging by the fact that 213 ballots were deposited, and also from the protests made by several people whose names were not on the membership roll, through a ruling that unless a member has attended at least one communion during the two years prior to 19th July, 1924, his or her name is taken from the church roll.

The ballot box was closed at 10.10 last evening, when the members present had polled, to open again this evening from 7.30 to 9 o'clock.

The hope was expressed that all who could find it possible to vote would do so; and arrangements would be made to have the older members taken to the church to cast their ballots.

GERMANY DOESN'T LIKE OCCUPATION

Says It Is a Monstrous Attempt to Lominate Millions.

BERLIN, Jan. 6 (Canadian Press) —Berlin newspapers today devote their leading articles to discussions of the allied note, handed to the German government yesterday, which is described as weak in argument and as failing to justify a prolongation of the occupation of Cologne bridgehead.

Germania, the Catholic organ, which frequently voices the views of Chancellor Marx, says the note is one of the weakest documents Germany ever received, and also one of the most regretttable, for the reason that it seriously threatens to destroy the mutual confidence of nations which was recently evidenced.

Krruz Zeitung, a Monarcy paper, declares the real reason for the failure to evacuate the Cologne zone is that Great Britain needs the support of France for her policy outside of Europe and, therefore, is giving France a free hand on the Rhine.

The Tageblatt thinks the German people will unanimously reject "this monstrous attempt to place a population of over two milliion people under foreign domination for an indefinite period on flimsy pretext."

CHICAGO THE WICKEDEST CITY IN WORLD

Notorious Apaches of Paris Are Gentle Compared With Gunmen of Chicago—Immorality in the Suburbs—Crime Wave Followed Leopold-Loeb Decision.

By ROY J. GIBBONS.

CHICAGO, Jan. 6.—Chicago is the wickedest city in the world.

Even Paris is better. Apaches are gentle compared to the gunmen of Chicago's underworld. With unfailing regularity, gangsters here are chalking up a murder a day. Assassins' bullets are mowing down men.

Somewhere in Chicago a man or woman will be slain to-night. To-morrow night another will meet the same fate. Women, elderly as well as young, fear to venture out at night. Bands of morons are attacking them.

Cops Get No Days Off.

In one section, a hairy, demented man, described by several victims as a "human ape," is spreading terrorism throughout the neighborhood.

An unprecedented epidemic of hold-ups, burglaries and second-storey visitations is sweeping the city from end to end.

All of which may seem but the prattle of reformers or the groundless fears of over-wrought citizens. But it isn't.

Every bit of it is borne out in police and court records and the daily crime accounts in the newspapers.

Police, seemingly powerless to cope with the situation, have been put on an "emergency" basis. This calls for nine hours' patrol duty each day, with no days off.

Judges, too, awakened to the enormity of the job before them, have been handing out stiff sentences to the comparatively few culprits convicted by juries.

Criminal dockets, however, are crowded to almost impossible capacity.

Judges There, Too.

From all sides come rumors of "fixing" in the courts. A multitude of drives are being made against law-enforcement officials suspected of "winking" at the cases of powerful underworld leaders.

Chief of Police Martin Collins was quoted as blaming it on certain "rubber stamp judges" whom be accused of issuing writs of habeas corpus without cause to known bad men his men picked up. Later he denied it.

But the report aroused the ire of the courts. They retaliated with the comeback that the police department is inefficient. They said Collins was "passing the buck" to "cover up" for his department.

Suburbs Also Rotten.

But Chicago is not alone in all its rottenness. Many of its suburbs are havens of refuge for men the law is hounding. Chief of these are the towns of Cicero and Burnham. The former, authorities say, is the principal rendezvous for beer runners and "hijackers."

There the gunmen elite gather in evening dress and silk toppers to run run wild in the many gambling joints. They frequently shoot up these places and themselves, too.

Burnham is more sordid. It fattens on the moral issue. It is flagrantly a wide-open place. Beer sells there like water.

Beer Easy to Get.

But for that matter, it can be bought in 1,000 or more saloons in Chicago, reformers charge.

Perhaps one of the most significant features of the present crime wave is the increase in major felonies since the Loeb-Leopold decision. Because of their youth, Loeb and Leopold got life instead of death for killing little Bobbie Franks.

During the next month, Chicago had the biggest murder orgy in its history. Thirty-six were slain, police blotters reveal. With one man being killed a day, or 365 a year, but one man has been given the extreme penalty in a year.

A judge sentenced Russel Scott, of Cleveland and Detroit, to death for murder committed during a cigar store hold-up a year ago.

But contrasted with Scott's case was the acquittal of Anthony Valanis, Anna Valanis, Lucille Marshall and William D. Lydon, youthful sheiks and shebas, charged with killing Mrs. Bessie Gaenselen.

The jury said they were too young to hang. It let them go because of the precedent Judge Caverly established in the Loeb-Leopold decision.

And so the lawlessness goes on.

PERSONALITY IS ESSENTIAL TO FEMININE CHARM, SAYS WEYBURN

Arbiter of Chorus Beauties Finds a Shortage of Capable, Pretty Girls for the Stage—Discusses Points That Indicates Woman's Age.

MARGARET SHEA

Said By Ned Wayburn to be the Most Beautiful Show Girl of 1924.

By GEORGE BRITT.

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—I believe there are no ladies present, Ahem! So if you men will gather in a little nearer. That's the way. Thank you.

All right, Mr. Wayburn!

If you will just let us in—a crowd of gullible, childlike, sentiment-blinded mere men—on the confidential formula to understand the wiles and mystery of woman, we'll listen without a cough or a fidget.

(Ned Wayburn, you know, has staged about 20 editions of the Follies. He has picked and trained more chorus girls than any man in America. And he knows a thing or two about the thing called feminine beauty.)

"Age shows on the back of their hands," says Wayburn. "A girl wanting to enter the chorus may say she is 19, but she will be verified or refuted by the lines and coloring of her hands.

"If there is an artificial glint to her teeth, it is a fatal revelation. And you can usually tell how long she has been around Broadway by the color of her hair. It is all one color if she has just arrived, but on some of the veterans you can find five or six different shades.

"A girl's eyebrows should conform to the shape of her face. Her eyes should be large and well set, with depth and radiance. They should be the length of one eye apart.

"Her nose should be one-third the length of her face. It should be straight and slightly indented where it meets the forehead.

"Her mouth should be as wide as her eye and half again as long as her eye. The lips should be clean cut, neither too thick nor too thin.

"When a girl comes seeking a job as a dancer, she is unnatural and self-conscious. I begin by talking as pleasantly as possible about something quite off the subject of her work, so that she may forget her pose and reveal her real self. In most cases, too, the girl has been primping carefully and has had enough sleep to look her best. If she is wise, she has been sparing of make-up.

"It is necessary to figure her stability and character as well as her appearance. She will not remain pretty if she doesn't lead a reasonably simple and restful life. Fatigue shows first in the eyes, which lose their clear depth and become shadowed."

Size doesn't make any difference to a girl seeking stage honors, according to Wayburn. She can find a place, whether she is four feet tall or six and a-half. There is a shortage of capable pretty girls.

NED WAYBURN.

Fortunately, lack of symmetry is not a hopeless fault. Wayburn took Miss Ann Constance, 16-year-old New York girl, as a pupil a year and a-half ago. She was five feet five inches tall and weighed 176 pounds. He placed her on a rigorous programme of diet and exercise. In less than a year she weighed 119 pounds and was a beautiful dancer.

Personality more than any other quality is essential for feminine charm, according to Wayburn. A dancer may have beauty and skill but be on demned forever to mediocrity for the lack of "the personality to punch her act across the footlights."

The outstanding young beauty of the 1924 theatrical season, according to Wayburn, is Margaret Shea, a New York girl appearing in his "Demi-Tasse Revue."

"Are these rules guaranteed sure fire?" a man asks Wayburn.

"Well, pretty sure," he answers. "Of course, a woman is always a woman."

BARE SCANDAL IN WASHINGTON LIFE

Family Skeletons Rattle in Congressman Scott's Divorce Suit.

ALPENA, Mich., Jan. 6.—Reckless gambling, shipping liquor into this country in barrel lots and the loss of her possessions to pay gambling bills of Congressman Frank D. Scott, of Alpena, were charged in a cross bill filed by Mrs. Scott in their divorce suit here.

Miss Jane Kennedy, for years secretary of the Congressman, was named for "consistently poisoning the mind of the plaintiff against his wife by means of malicious and false talebearing." The cross bill also stated that Miss Kennedy obtained a trunkful of Mrs. Scott's possessions from a Washington storage company.

Scott, along with other representatives, frequented the "Boar's Nest" on K street in Washington, and spent huge sums of money gambling, the bill charged. To pay these gambling losses of her husband, all of Mrs. Scott's possessions were shipped to Congressman Royal C. Johnson, of South Dakota.

"The plaintiff's gambling losses were enormous," Mrs. Scott's petition stated.

Hearing in the divorce suit of Scott against his wife was resumed with testimony by Scott.

Alleged indiscretions of his wife with army officers, parties at the Scott apartment that lasted until the morning hours, and the entertainment of army officers in "an intoxicated condition" were related by the Congressman.

A cross bill filed by attorneys for Mrs. Scott charged her husband with extreme cruelty and desertion; while Scott's divorce petition charged cruelty and extravagant living.

The names of Major Harvey Burwell, Captain Wilbur B. Sumner, Lieutenant Don Sautelle and Harry Wyckoff, cashier at the Wardman Park Hotel in Washington, were brought into the records in Scott's testimony.

To support his charges that Sumner was entertained by Mrs. Scott when he was intoxicated, Scott said he forced his wife to confess after confronting her with a dress that was burned when Sumner carelessly dropped a cigarette on it.

CUTIE CONFESSES

(By Cynthia Grey)

All they can talk about is their looks, their clothes, the way they dance, and the men who are in love with them. It gets to be deadly dull.

Whereas men are really interesting.

How I love to listen to them when they tell me all about my looks, my clothes, the wonderful way I dance, and the way they are in love with me!

STIRLING AND THE DISTRICT

Frank Sarles Secures Return of Car Stolen Over a Year Ago.

STIRLING, Jan. 6.— Mr. Frank Sarles, who had his car stolen from in front of the Methodist church on the 17th of October, 1923, by "Red" Ryan, has been successful in recovering it.

For some reason or other the police seemed to have lost track of the identity of the car and instead of it being returned to its rightful owner it was sold by auction. Mr. Sarles did a little detective work on his own accounts. He sent a full description of his car to the Department of Highways and asked the officials to claim it should a license for it be applied for. On Saturday, Dec. 20th, a little more than 15 months after the car was taken, Mr. Sarles was notified by the Department that his car was waiting for him in Toronto. He has it back in Stirling little the worse for its thrilling experience. The officials of the Department of Highways are receiving much praise for their good work in the matter.

Bowling Club.

The Bowling Club held a very enjoyable dance in the opera house last week and a good sum was realized for the benefit of the club.

Citizens were reminded of the passing of another year when at midnight, December 31st, the church bells began to ring, and truly, they "rang out the old and rung in the new."

The Annual New Year's Entertainment given by St. Andrew's Sunday School was a most enjoyable affair. All the parts of the different numbers being well rendered. Mr. Lindsay Meiklejohn was chairman. The proceeds amounted to over $100.00.

Mr. William West, who has purchased a half interest in the Stirling Creamery has also bought Mr. Geo. Whitty's residence on Gore street and Mr. Whitty has moved to the house on west Front street, formerly occupied by Mr. Samuel Hatton.

Mr .and Mrs. C. McGuire attended the wedding of the latter's neice at Thomasburg on New Year's day.

The Ladies' Union of the Methodist Church are holding a ten cent tea at Mrs. Lena Mosher's on Tuesday.

Mrs. Royal Hennon of the 8th Concession of Sidney passed to her rest on Friday last after an illness of some months.

Miss Annie Mosher, who has been employed as stenographer in the office of Mr. Atkins, District Representative of Agriculture here, has resigned and with her mother, Mrs. L. Mosher, will leave for Oshawa in a few days.

The Rev. D. C. Ramsay, pastor of the John Street Presbyterian church, Belleville, occupied the pulpit of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, on Sunday afternoon, his subject being based on the parable of the marriage of the king's son, Matthew chap. 22.

The annual meeting of the Ladies' Aid of St. Andrew's church will be held at the home of Mrs. Clifford Baker, the president, on Wednesday afternoon.

HEART WAS WEAK NERVES ALL GONE

Mrs. J. H. Hallenbeck, 117½ Welland Avenue, St. Catharines, Ont., writes:—"I was in a gas explosion; it left me with a weak heart, and my nerves were all gone. I suffered everything; couldn't sleep, or endure any excitement, and when left alone I felt as if I could scream. I took dizzy spells, often falling and bruising myself. My mother read about your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and bought me a box, but having taken so many different kinds of medicine it just seemed that I did not have any confidence in any of them. I took one box of H. & N. Pills, and felt so much better I continued with them until I had used five boxes, and after I had taken them I did not need any more. I cannot praise, or recommend, Milburns Heart and Nerve Pills too highly after all they have done for me."

KIDNAPPING THE FALLS OF NIAGARA

The Great West is stealing the Great Lakes and kidnapping the Falls of Niagara and an agitation is impending to prevent further depredations. Water in rapidly increasing amount is being diverted from Lake Michigan and directed into the Mississippi River and finally finding its way into the Gulf of Mexico, instead of the Atlantic Ocean, through the St. Lawrence River. The Canadian Government has already lodged a protest at Washington and it is likely that something will be done about the matter. All he country along the Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence River should be interested in this project directly and the country at large indirectly, for it means the partial extinction of the Niagara Falls. An effort has been made recently to interest the State of New York on account of the threatened drying up of Niagara and this may appeal to the State government sufficiently to join in some movement to stop the diversion of water. An unfortunate feature of the pilfering of the water is that it is practically wasted. The elevation is so slight in the contour of the country that the water which is stolen is enable to perform a very small service as compared with its possibilities if allowed to follow the natural course.

MYSTERY SHROUDS YULETIDE TRAGEDY

Husband and Wife Found Dead in Gift-Strewn Room.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 6.—Dead in the bedroom of their Hollywood bungalow, the bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Holly, of New York, were found by the police, who have on their hands to-day a mystery apparently as engrossing as any in recent history of the famous film colony.

The couple had been dead since Christmas; yet a search of the bungalow failed to reveal the manner in which they died.

Holly, who is reported to be wealthy, was 65, and his wife 55.

No evidence of the couple's having been poisoned was found in the preliminary investigation.

Mrs. Holly was found in bed, fully clothed and with the covers pulled closely around her. Blood-stains were about her nose and mouth, indicating a hemorrhage. Holly was lying on the floor, also dressed.

The room was in order. Christmas packages were banked around a small tree.

Theodore Covell, of Burbank, a nephew, said the Holly's spent Christmas at his home and were apparently in good spirits. He scouted the suicide theory.

The report of autopsy surgeons is awaited, when it will be determined whether stomachs of the two contain poison.

Christmas cards and gifts found in the house are being examined. One religious book from Holly to his wife bore the notation, "Merry Christmas to Toots from Hubby."

Another religious book was found at Mrs. Holly's side. It was opened at a page which had this paragraph underlined:

"Life is deathless. There is more after that which is called death. There is more in seeing and hearing spiritually than materially."

NEW FURNITURE LATEST CRAZE

Mysterious Cabalastic Signs of the Merchant on the Tag.

CAN THEY AFFORD IT.

Furniture shop windows must have acquired a renewed interest for everyone of us with the rumour now current that prices are to be cut. This is one of those items of news that break through the mere everyday aspect of plain business facts into an atmosphere of romance.

A cut in the rates for butter or bicycle tyres may interest a vast number of people, but without stirring happy associations of a sentimental kind. Prospects of cheaper furniture, on the other hand, arouse the most delightful sympathies for the most popular people in the world—young lovers.

It is surely one of the really attractive sights in the city, the unobtrusive halting of young couples beside the show at the front of a big furnishing shop, the comparison of mutual tastes, the distinction between youthful ambition and youthful exchequers. These young people are as fascinating as the show behind the glass. So many ardent aspirations are plainly apparent in their attitude.

"There's a lovely suite," you almost hear her saying. "Now, if we could put that in our house it would be lovely, if we could get a house——"

He thinks it looks pretty expensive. "Mahogany is an awful price."

They peer sideways to catch a glimpse of the label tied on to the leg of one of the chairs, and endeavor to distinguish between a mysterious cabalistic sign like "x b 13 y" that only the merchant understands, and some more coherent price.

He is obviously running over in his mind the possibilities of that hard-won handful in the bank. She is dreaming of the social rapture that suite would convey, the distinction of moving amongst these objects of grandiose dignity.

He has his vision of reclining in that deep armchair at the close of a day's work, smoking more contentedly than he ever can in "digs," talking things over with her as she perches on the arm of it. His satisfaction, you suspect, is personal.

Her's is in the thought of the effect that suite would have on the family, on her aunts, on the neighbors, on the girls who have already married and acquired suites just a little less to her liking. She sees herself sitting in that chair and pouring out afternoon tea into cups that are upon that table, and walking across that carpet to offer an impressed relation a seat in that capacious Chesterfield——

Can they afford it? Maybe now that the prices are on the move downwards there is additional hope!

These windows retain their fascination long after the happy couple are married and settled down to the steady process of wearing out the furniture they have decided upon. They have the attraction of the Might-Have-Been and they have the charm of the Some-Day-To-Be.

Perhaps they lose some of their appeal to unadventurous husbands satisfied to sink down into the same old chair (in spite of disjointed springs) and drop their cigarette ash upon the same old carpet.

But not for a woman. The great adventure of her first house plenishing never fully contents her soul. Her ambition reaches out from a plush suite to something florid in tapestry, from tapestry to lordly leather, from leather to the almost authentic antique. If she is house proud in the least, and every woman is, she would scrap all sentimental associations for real artistic worth, and replenish every room in the home.

So she may be seen brooding over these furniture displays—their fresh daintiness appeals to all her housewifely desires. She longs for the right to dust them.

But of all appreciators of fine furniture there is none to equal one who has been doomed for years to knock about in lodgings. To have lived among chipped gilt frames and faded engravings, and torn sofas, and antimacassars, and tables with weak legs, and armchairs with diseased spines and black marble time-pieces—that is to know the charm of furniture of your own—new, tasteful and comfortable.

DOES EVERY MEAL CAUSE YOU DISTRESS?

If It Does You Should Take Burdock Blood Bitters

Mr. M. P. Eldrige, Beaver Harbor, N.B., writes:—"I was troubled with my stomach for some time, and everything I ate seemed to distress me I tried many different medicines, but without any results. Finally I was advised to try B.B.B., and after having taken several bottles I was completely relieved of my trouble. I can now eat anything I wish, thanks to B.B.B."

Burdock Blood Bitters puts the stomach into perfect shape by promoting proper digestion; and during the past 46 years it has been on the market has made a reputation, second to none, for relieving all stomach troubles.

T.P., M.P., LAYS A WREATH ON TOMB OF CANADA'S SON

Veteran Journalist-Parliamentarian Pays Sincere and Heartfelt Tribute to Late F. C. Wade

WHEN F. C. WADE, K.C., agent-general for British Columbia in Great Britain, died in London last month, the Dominion of Canada lost an outstanding son. He was an expert publicist and for recreation wrote letters to the London Times. His early training as an editorial writer on the Toronto Globe, the Winnipeg Free Press and the Vancouver Sun made writing almost second nature to him and many an English magazine and newspaper carried short articles on Canadian subjects from his pen.

Late F. C. Wade

And now that he is gone, Englishmen with whom he came in almost daily contact miss him keenly. T. P. O'Connor, M.P., father of the British House and dean of journalists, has publicly paid his tribute to the late agent-general in the London Times, a tribute which is one of the most unique compliments ever paid to the work of a Canadian official.

"Fred Wade dead," writes T. P.—"that delightful figure with the round, jolly, quizzical and, above all, good-natured face—active every moment, ubiquitous, bringing with delight all his friends together, working out everything that might lead to the benefit of British Columbia, and then in his few hours of leisure tramping through all the haunts of literary London; he could tell you something of the haunts of Charles Dickens, but equally well of the haunts of Ben Jonson or William Shakespeare. Above all cults of great Englishmen was that of Gen. Wolfe; he tracked down every trace there was of the general who won Canada for us; he was always insisting on doing honor to the gallant soldier who died so nobly at the end of the world-resounding victory.

"Fred Wade was a brilliant, all-round man, and he had that variety of profession which belongs to the Transatlantics, for he was a journalist, a lawyer, a politician, an official. Wherever there was a difficult job Fred Wade was sent to deal with it; such, for instance, as in the region of Yukon at the moment when the Klondyke discoveries of gold brought all the adventurous and rough elements of the world which a mining camp always invites. He had tact as well as courage; above all, he was one of those men who are loved by everybody at first sight. He devoted himself to his duties as agent-general for British Columbia with a zeal that perhaps helped to shorten his life. He actually lived in a small and modest flat at the top of the offices of British Columbia in Regent street. There lived with him his small family of wife and one daughter—he had a son in Canada—two devoted women and as lovable as he was himself."

Hundreds of Manufacturers Led by One Canadian Child

Miss Edith Ashcroft, of Kingston, Ontario, is Just About the Champion in Slogans

THE amalgamated ice cream manufacturers of this our great dominion and of the republic to the south have been girding up their apron strings and preparing for industrial battle. They, like every other collection of business men, are fighting for trade, and their white-coated, white-aproned ranks are being led by a little child.

This little child is Miss Edith Ashcroft of Kingston, Ontario, at the top of her class at the collegiate and as bright as a new dollar. The county records show her to be fourteen years old.

The battling these days is being done through the advertising columns. As any advertiser can explain, one of the most helpful aids in this kind of a campaign is a slogan. A good slogan may win the day and a bad one may lose it. So the heads of the ice cream businesses of nine provinces and some forty odd states went out into the highways and byways and offered one thousand dollars for one.

They received 110,000 contributions, and from this avalanche of brain waves they picked the suggestion of the 14-year-old Canadian girl. She was vaguely described as "somebody away up north in Canada," but few of the association's members realized that they were indebted for the idea to a veritable youngster.

This is not the first time that Edith Ashcroft has substantially fattened her bank account by means o these slogan contests. She can be considered a candidate for the championship. On two previous occasions, commercial concerns conducting continent-wide searches of this nature have awarded her the laurels.

Miss Ashcroft has a thorough-going system of working out a trade symbol. She jots down mentally all the famous slogans she can think of. Next she considers the varying features of the product which she desires to glorify at the moment and boils down her synopsis of its outstanding characteristics to a phrase of five or six words. That is her whole secret.

As her photo shows, she is not the younger flapper type. Even bobbed hair seems to have no charm for her. She is wrapped up in her studies.

She is the daughter of Dr. Robert Garside Ashcroft and Dr. Edna Earle Ashcroft, of Kingston, Ontario, and when she successfully concludes her course in the collegiate institute of that city, she will go on and seek further honors at Queen's University, meanwhile, if possible, garnering in a few slogan contest prizes by the way.

One of the ice cream producers presented her photograph to a group of his brother pure food experts. "Study it," he said, "but don't let it fall into the hands of any of the college professors, Philadelphia lawyers, learned psychologists, cross-word puzzle experts, Martian scientists, students of revolution, doctors of law, or mah jongg experts, for very one of them would feel like walking out behind a barn and kicking himself in the slats, biting himself in the arm and barking like a dog."

And that—whatever it may mean—represents the attitude of the ice cream industry of the American continent to Miss Edith Ashcroft of away up north in Canada.

SWEET, COOLING SEWER

AMONGST a number of good golf stories told by the famous professional, James Braid, is one concerning a crusty old gentleman, gouty as well as golfy, who happened to be playing over a course through which, in front of a green on the outward and inward halves, there ran a fine, clear crystal brook.

On the way out the old gentleman had a beautiful shot as he approached the brook, and had the great pleasure to see the ball sail across and land on the green opposite.

"Beautiful course," he remarked. "How glorious it is to have such a sweet, cooling, crystal stream running through a golf course."

On the way back, the old fellow had the misfortune to put his ball into, instead of over, the stream, whereupon he lashed out with this volley of vocables:

"Who the deuce could play on a course with a sewer in the middle of it?"

Sponsors the Latest of Canadian Liners

HON. MARGUERITE SHAUGHNESSY, charming daughter of the late Lord Shaughnessy, who a few days ago acted as sponsor at the launching of the new Canadian liner, "Princess Marguerite", which will be an important addition to the vessels plying on the Pacific coast.

HAD LOTS OF EXPERIENCE IF THAT MEANT ANYTHING

AMONGST many good stories told by Miss Norma Talmadge, film star, is one concerning a somewhat down-at-heels individual who applied for a job as a "super" at a studio where she was rehearsing.

As it happened, the producer did want a super just then, but he was somewhat dubious as to the applicant's capabilities.

Looking him up and down he asked: "Are you an actor?"

"I am," was the reply.

"Ever had any experience of acting without audiences?"

"Acting without audiences," answered the seedy one sadly, "is responsible for the unhappy position in which I find myself to-day."

HE SHOULD SURELY HOLD SOME KIND OF A RECORD

CAPTAIN STATE is the well-known Canadian lecturer who during the war had the unique distinction of recruiting a whole battalion himself. He was lecturing in London on one occasion when a man, looking as if he had never heard of prohibition, staggered down the aisle and, seating himself in the front seat, asked: "Would you tell me how long you have been lecturing?"

"About seventeen years," was the reply.

"Well, I think I'll wait, because you should soon be through," the illuminated one remarked.

Young Canadian Cadet Solved Prince's Problem

Question of "When Do We Eat?" Seemed to Have No Solution

IN 1918 at a large aerodrome in the British Midlands, it was found that it took too long for the several hundred officers and flight-cadets to be served at lunch, and therefore a cafeteria was put into operation. The Duke of York was a member of the mess and sometimes invited his younger brother Prince Henry to spend the week-end with him.

Shortly after the new rule had been introduced, Prince Henry, who at the time was a cadet at Sandhurst, came up to Cranwell to stay with his brother for a day or two. They came in together for lunch and went over to the long tables running across the centre of the mess to help themselves to whatever happened to be on the bill of fare that day. A naval commander, who happened to be visiting Cranwell, arrived at the table simultaneously with the two brothers, and all three halted about a foot away.

Duke of York

The brothers waited for the naval commander to help himself first, because he was senior in rank, whereupon the naval commander smiled, looked embarrassed, but did not do so, and for some seconds all three stood there looking most uncomfortable. To their obvious relief a Canadian cadet, who, strictly speaking, should not have been on that side of the table at all, finding that for some mysterious reason the three people in front of him had suddenly become incapable of movement, squeezed in front of them, picked up a plate, and marched off with it.

Royalty and ranking officer exchanged tolerant grins of relief, and, grabbing a plate apiece, proceeded to the business of luncheon.

LAMP POST NECESSARY DURING AN INTERVIEW

DON MARQUIS, playwright, humorist, author, poet, is an adept at avoiding interviews.

The only place where he grants them is on a New York street corner where he can lean against the lamp post in perfect comfort. To a charming young lady journalist who waylaid him at home surrounded by his daughter Barbara, a pet dog, and golf sticks, he explained why he doesn't like interviews. Marquis has never forgotten the embarrassment of his first one.

He was a cub reporter assigned to interview Booth Tarkington, a practically unknown young man from the west whose first play was being produced on Broadway. It was also Mr. Tarkington's first experience. "Well, there we sat," remembers Don, "neither of us knowing what to say. Finally I gave up in despair and made my exit with more speed than grace. Oh, I wrote the interview all right, but ever since I've been a firm advocate of a list of questions made out beforehand."

WRONG MR. CHURCHILL

REMARKING that it was never wise to jump at conclusions, Mr. Winston Churchill told a good story the other day in order to illustrate his point.

It concerned a lecturer who was holding forth on the subject of "Fear."

"Only those who have been aroused from sleep on board ship by the terrible cry, 'Man overboard!'" said the lecturer, "can fully realise its terrible meaning."

"That's not right," interjected a little man in the audience. "I heard it once when I was not aboard a ship, and I realised it more than anybody."

"You couldn't," objected the lecturer. "You might think you could, but you couldn't."

"Oh yes, I could," persisted the little man; "I was the man who was overboard."

SHELVING A SAINT

FOR over three centuries a certain Brazilian regiment has been under the patronage of Saint Anthony, who has appointed its honorary colonel to commemorate an action in which the regiment distinguished itself. The salary attached to the rank was paid to the Little Sisters of the Poor.

The present minister of war, however, does not consider that Saint Anthony is worth his salary, and has come to the conclusion that it is time that the appointment and the salary should cease. But the economy had to be effected decently and in order, so the following communique was issued and has been causing much amusement in Brazil:

"Colonel Saint Anthony, of Padua, of the —— Regiment, having completed three centuries of service, is now gazetted General and placed on the retired list."

Betrayed by Trust

HE was a burglar. After effecting an entrance into the bank he found his way, easily enough, to the strong room. When the light of the lantern fell on the door he saw this sign written in red letters:

"Save your dynamite. This safe is not locked. Turn the knob and it will open."

For a moment he ruminated.

"Anyhow," he reflected, there's no harm in trying it if it really is unlocked."

He grasped the knob and turned it.

Instantly the office was flooded with light, an alarm bell rang loudly, an electric shock rendered him helpless, while a panel in the wall opened and out rushed a bulldog which seized him firmly.

An hour later, when the cell door closed on him, he sighed:

"I know what's wrong with me. I'm too trusting. I have too much faith in human nature."—Answers.

NOTED CANADIAN AUTHOR YET HE'S ALMOST UNKNOWN

Adjutor Rivard, Signally Honored by the French Academy and by Rome, Now Becoming Famous Here

WHEN a Canadian is internationally famous, it would seem useless to add that he must be well-known from Victoria to Halifax. But this does not happen to be the exact truth in one case at least. One of the most widely and justly noted of Canadian authors and jurists is Adjutor Rivard. Yet to several million Canadians, even his name is unknown.

In French literary circles, his reputation is as outstanding as that of almost any living Canadian or American writer. He is the author of seven volumes. He has been signally honored by the French Academy, a rare thing for a Canadian. His book, "Chez Nous," was "Couronne" by that body of intellectual immortals and awarded a notable prize. His writings, all in French, have been read from one end of that country to the other. They have had an amazingly large circulation in the province of Quebec, but up until a few weeks ago they were practically unheard of in other parts of Canada.

He has made an intensive study of the French language as it is spoken in Quebec, and a number of his works deal with this. They include "L'Art de Dire," "Le Manuel de la Parole," "Bibliographie du Parler Francais au Canada," "Etudes sur les Parlers de France au Canada." As well as "Chez Nous," he has written "Chez Nos Gens" and "La Liberte de la Presse."

His efforts in the line of fiction are written in a simple and direct style. In "Chez Nous," for instance, they are short vignettes of the ordinary life of the very ordinary people, little slices of life reproduced with a vividness that no camera could ever equal.

But Adjutor Rivard's reputation is not solely literary. He is an outstanding leader in the law in a province which is famed for its lawyers. In 1921 he was made a judge of the court of the King's Bench in Quebec. He is in addition an educationist, the professor of French elocution in the faculty of arts at Laval University, and professor of international law in the faculty of law. For his services Rome made him a chevalier of the Order of St. Gregoire. Adjutor Rivard, then, is a Canadian who has been selected by two foreign countries as a man deserving the highest awards while still practically unrecognized by eight of the nine provinces in his own country.

Born in 1868 in the village of Rochelle, he was educated at the Quebec seminary and at Laval University. He holds the degrees of master of arts, "docteur en lettres" and "docteur en droit." He is the founder of the "Societe du Parler Francais" and director of "Le Parler Francais."

At Last, in English

CANADIANS who read only English now have an opportunity for the first time of familiarizing themselves with his work. The late W. H. Blake, whose translation of "Maria Chapdelaine" stands out as a milestone in Canadian literary history, completed an English version of "Chez Nous" just before his death. Critics already hail it as a work of most unusual merit.

Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, formerly lieutenant-governor of Quebec, played a large part in bringing the work of JudgeRivard to the attention of the other Canadian provinces. On one occasion when W. H. Blake came to lunch with him and discuss a possible change of title, they became so wrapped up in their subject that the luncheon appointment drifted on into an all-afternoon session, continued as a dinner, and then stretched on through the greater part of the evening.

When the publication date of the book was approaching, W. H. Blake dropped into the offices of the house in Toronto which was bringing out the book. He sat in the office of one of the heads of the firm with a group of its chief executives around him. He held the manuscript in his hand, but he knew its every word so well that he did not need to look at it while reading. In a firm, clear voice, he gave the last story in the book, a few hundred words on the death of a simple old habitant of a passing generation, pere Anselme. A number of his listeners were frankly weeping as he finished. Blake stood up, shook hands, and left to make a short trip to the Pacific coast. He never returned. Two weeks later a wire came bringing news of his sudden death.

"I'VE just had my watch mended an' it'sh shtill wrong."

"Why, wha'sh matter with it?"

"It's pointin' to noon, an' it'sh midnight."

He's a Likeable, Slangy, Wild Man —the Life of the Legislative Party

Dick Burde, M.P.P., B.C.'s Roaring Political Humorist, Calls Attorney-General "Alex" and Shouts "Attaboy, Tom," as His Friend Addresses the House— Represents "the Lumbermen, the Miners and the Bootleggers," He Says

HE prefers to be called Dick Burde, but he is sometimes referred to in the newspapers as "Major Richard J. Burde, M.C., Soldier-Independent member for Alberni in the B. C. Legislature."

Therefore unless he becomes altogether too obstreperous, even Mr. Speaker leaves him alone—and with good reason for he is liable at any time to challenge the speaker's ruling, thus holding up the business before the house.

This year owing to the infinitesimal majority with which the government is trying to carry on, Major Burde's sallies are being received with great apparent enjoyment by the occupants of the government benches. "Watch him dance to the tune of the member for Alberni," said the Hon. R. H. Pooley, new leader of the opposition, in an attack on Premier John Oliver, the other day; "The member for Alberni will play a tune that sounds something like beer, and he'll dance."

Dick Burde is absolutely no respecter of persons. During the session of 1923 he wished to delay the settlement of some measure before the House which Attorney-General Manson wished to have passed without delay. Burde rose and launched out with long rambling speech about everything and nothing and when the attorney general suggested he was out of order he answered, "Well, I'm going to speak, order or no order, and I'm going to keep right on talking till six o'clock."

Seeing there was no help for it, the attorney general moved the adjournment and Burde said jubilantly, "All right, Alex, I second that motion," and sat down amid the smiles of the opposition members.

Dick Burde is the sort of individual for whom war was invented, a natural born adventurer, a swash-buckler of the twentieth century. Joining the 67th regiment in 1915, he was later transferred to the 102nd with which he went to France, and he was almost continually in the area of hostilities until he was sent to England in 1918 suffering from the effects of mustard gas, and a burst ear-drum. He received the Military Cross for gallantry in action.

Returning home in 1918, he resumed the position of editor and proprietor of the Port Albern. News; and at a by-election on January 11th, 1919, was elected by acclamation to represent Alberni in the provincial legislature. He was returned in 1920 and again in June of this year.

If Dick Burde were half as much of a fool as he sometimes tries to appear, it is certain that Alberni would have found some other representative ere this; but in spite of his eccentricities, and they are legion, he does get things done. No one likes to be held up to ridicule and that is an art of which he is a past master.

His Husky Grandmother

SPEAKING in 1923 on the lumbering situation, Major Burde protested vigorously against the exporting of logs in the rough across the American border, thus taking work from the Canadian working man. "I'm not afraid of American retaliation," said Major Burde. "I'm a United Empire Loyalist. My old grandmother beat a bear to death with her fists. Some of these young immigrants from the old country, such as the second member for Vancouver may learn something from a 120 per cent. Canadian. I'm over-proof."

"Overproof" seems a fitting term to use in describing the legislative wit. He has been heard to declare in the house that, "I am here to protect the interests of my friends the lumbermen, the miners and the bootleggers."

There can be no doubt that the member for Alberni was responsible for the passing of the eight hour day law. He had been hammering away at the government for several years, till in 1923 he wore down their opposition, and a law was passed, though it has not yet been put in force.

Speaking against a grant for the University of B. C., Burde declared the higher branches of education were of no use to anyone. "Did Dick Burde have a university education?" was his clinching argument.

He is a tall rather good looking man, perhaps verging on his middle fifties—as he declared in the House the other day that he sold papers on the streets of Winnipeg forty-four years ago. There are people who declare that he is a species of genius, and that if he had elected to go after it, he might attain any position in the country's gift. But he is probably happier buccaneering for beer by the glass—his special crusade this year—with his equally ribald, but less imposing friend, Tom Uphill, miner member for Fernie, whose rough and ready speeches he encourages by calling out "Attaboy, Tom," to the speaker's great distress.

Meanwhile, she is not living in idleness. She possesses nine horses, thirty-two dogs and twenty-eight birds, and these take some looking after. They influence her life so greatly, in fact, that she never wears lace dresses lest her thirty-two dogs should tear them to ribbons, while she never wears the fur of domestic animals lest her own domestic animals should feel hurt.

He's a Magnet for Cartoonists

HIS HONOR, the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, Col. Henry Cockshutt, has long been a noted Canadian for a variety of reasons. He has been mayor of Brantford, president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association and commander of an overseas battalion. During his period of office, Government House has made many new and important contributions in the cause of international and interprovincial good-will. But it remained for a small group of artists and illustrators to grant him a unique distinction. These men were discussing the faces of prominent Canadians in an effort to decide which one lent himself most readily to cartooning. They began with Premier King and others of the Dominion cabinet, W. F. MacLean, M.P., Stephen Leacock, Sir James Wood, Sir Thomas White, Hon. Arthur Meighen and a host of others. The discussion was highly technical so that it is hard to say how the selection was made. It is sufficient to know, however, that Ontario's Lieutenant-Governor won by a close margin, and the layman can come to his own conclusions after examining the sketch reproduced here.

Game called at 8.30 p.m.
Rink open at 8 o'clock.

The Hamilton Rowing Club team arrived at noon today with the players all in good shape and confident of making the S.P.A. winners extend themselves to limit in tonight's senior O.H.A. fixture at Brock St. Rink. With the same line up as held Parkdale to a 3-2 score and came decidedly close to taking a fall out of the Toronto paddlers the scullers hope to edge into the win column tonight at the expense of the Petes and the home crew will be making a mistake if they regard the visitors as not decidedly dangerous. However, there is not much chance of the blue and white players falling into that delusion for the showing of the Hamilton team against Parkdale was a warning that could not be disregarded and the Petes are all set for a tight struggle tonight.

The new plan of not opening the rink to the public until 8 o'clock is expected to make the ice conditions good and everything points to a game full of excitement and interest.

Mike Rodden, one of the best referees on the O.H.A. staff has been delegated to handle the bell and the teams will have to play hockey all the way with the well known "M.J." in charge.

The crowd promises to bulge out the sides of the Brock street igloo.

CHURCH HOCKEY TO TRAIN YOUNGSTERS

Three Leagues Commence a Schedule Soon.

DOUG. LOOMIS PRES.

There will be three divisions of a City Church Hockey League which will give the youngsters a chance to chase the puck in organized games this year and develop in the future stars of the game. These divisions will be Midget, under fourteen years of age Juvenile, under seventeen years; and Junior, under nineteen.

Doug. Loomis, physical director of the Y.M.C.A. is president of the league and a number of enthusiasts have lined up with him to push the movement across.

All the churches have been notified and most of them have availed themselves of the opportunity by entering teams. All players must be bona fide members of the Sunday School for which they are playing and this most be certified to by the superintendent and the pastor of the church. This is about the only distinctive rule of the league.

Already the teams are getting out to practices and the schedule will likely start next week. The Collegiate rink will be the home ice for the northern parts, while Mark Street will be the native campus for the East City teams, and the Cognawaga' rink will be the scene of the South-enders home games.

The schedule will be announced in a few days.

Bruins Can't Get Into the Winning Column—Game Was Fast.

BOSTON, Jan. 6. — (Canadian Press).—St. Patrick's won a fast game from the luckless Boston Bruins last night by the narrow score of 3 goals to 2. On their last visit to Boston the Irishmen routed the locals 10 to 1, and the difference fairly represents the improvement in Art Ross's proteges.

The Bruins were in vastly better form than they showed in the early season, and worked hard. The game was less rough than previous engagements here, with St. Pat's drawing the bulk of the penalties.

KELLY SIGNED ON O'CONNELL'S TEAM

Giants' First Baseman Involved in Miniature Tempest Through Basketball.

New York, Jan. 5.—George Kelly, first baseman of the New York Giants, was the centre of a miniature baseball tempest today as a result of revelations that he had signed to play with a San Francisco basketball team whose roster also included Jimmy O'Connell, former Giant outfielder, banished from baseball for attempted bribery.

The outstanding development was a sharp declaration from President Heydler of the National League that he would favor Kelly's suspension from baseball if facts reported from San Francisco were borne out. This statement prompted immediate dismissal of O'Connell from the team by the president of the basketball league, who asserted a desire to avoid any embarrassment for Kelly.

Kelly, it was brought out, had not yet played with O'Connell, nor had the club, in fact, planned to use the two in the same games, but the removal of the latter was not construed by President Heydler as clearing Kelly's connection with the situation. The National League executive, while reticent to discuss the matter, indicated his belief that the damage already had been done by the Giant first sacker in originally agreeing to play on the team which included O'Connell. Whether or not he actually associated with the banished player, he held was merely a technicality.

OSHAWA, Ont., Jan. 6.—(Special—Diddy Rowdens, juniors including his sixteeen year old son from Port Hope, came up to Oshawa last night to do battle with Coach Blanchard's church league entry in the local O.H.A. group and the hopes made a real argument of it for the first two periods, the score at the end of the first twenty minutes being Oshawa 3, Port Hope 2. While in the second period they added two to Oshawa's one making the score a tie. Four all was the count, when the bell rang for a rest. The Port Hope youngsters faded in the final and were backed up on their own goal, Oshawa scoring three to their one, making the score at full time Oshawa 7, Port Hope 5.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER.

TWEED INTERMEDIATES GO LIMIT TO HOLD YOUNG PETES IN PLACE

Seventy Minute Game Ends in Two All Score—Blue and White Make Good Start.

PLAYED IN TWEED.

Tweed Centre Man Uncorked Speed and Wicked Shooting—Was Always Dangerous.

Peterboro's Junior O.H.A. team forced the Tweed Intermediates into an overtime game on the Tweed Open Air Rink last night, when they battled the chunky Easterners for seventy minutes, the final count being 2 all.

Neither team scored in the first two periods, and it was a flukey one that the Young Petes were credited with in the third period. Milloy batted the rubber from a face-off twenty feet in front of the blue line into the Tweed net before the goalie saw it. The puck dribbled through the goalie's legs so slow that if there had been a hair in the road it would have stopped it. It was a lucky counter for the blue and white and was the causes of the fast clip set by both teams in the last stanza and overtime period.

Houston, who is a regular skating demon, was going like a house afire night, and completed a beautiful rush when he recovered the rebound on a fast shot and slipped the equalizer past the Peterboro' net guardian.

McDougal Good.

McDougal made a beautiful lone effort a few minutes later when he skated the Tweed forwards off their feet, dashed in on the defence, fooling them and then, with nobody but the goalie to beat he lifted the puck high over the net. The Petes were forcing the play at this stage of the game and with both teams giving all they had and the puck being carried from one end of the rink to the other, it looked as if either one of the teams would drive one past the goalie and pocket the game before the gong sounded.

Forwards Fast.

Houston and McGowan, on the Tweed forward line, had not slackened up any, and were going faster than ever, working in some nice combination plays that would have been profitable had it not been for the steadiness of the Peterboro' goalie, Le Barr, who was clearing everything that came near him, and although the lighting of the rink was bad he picked them off just the same. This is one of his first games in the Junior O.H.A., and after the showing he made last night, he certainly is the kind of a man for the Young Petes, who have a championship team this year by all prospects.

"Slim" Le Barr and Lambert Collins on the defence teamed up well in the first two periods, but when Collins was hurt in the second period he was replaced by Johnston who ably filled his position, using his weight to good advantage. Up on the forward line, Cheu, McDougal and Ridpath showed lots of pep, and although bounced around considerably by the homesters they put up a dogged battle showing some of their ablity to back check. Milloy and Maudsley were subbed with the forwards and showed lots of class. On the attack, Milloy, McDougal and Ridpath were the dangerous ones, while Maudsley and Cheu were always effective and broke up a good many of Tweed's threatening rushes.

Goalie Unbeatable.

Wager, the husky net guardian for Tweed, was the man who held the fort for the Tweedsters. He performed like an old veteran of the "twine cage" and saved and broke up rushes several times when goals were almost certain. On a beautiful lone rush in the second period, Harry Cheu eluded the whole Tweed team, but the goalie, who was left to face the onrushing puck carrier. Cheu tore right in on top of him, but the goalie made sure of it when he flopped down in front of the net, taking the rubber in the body and robbing Cheu of a counter.

Houston was the big man on the firing line for Tweed, scoring one of their goals and figuring in the majority of rushes made by the Tweed team. He was all over the ice at once, and could stick-handle like a wizard. His performance was wonderful and M. Geraldi and McGowan are not to be forgotten, for they turned in a lot of useful work. Both A. Geraldi and Quinn, the burly defence men, uncorked a lot of speed and rushed well, but Quinn, although the better of the two, was too much inclined to get the man instead of the puck and was chased several times for bouncing the kids about.

Tweed Takes Lead.

All hopes for a victory were swept from the Petes when M. Geraldi bulged the Peterboro net in the first five minutes of the overtime period, taking the lead. Tweed did not fall back and play a defensive game for the next five minutes, but brought their men up in an attempt to pile up a lead and show the fans that they could give the juniors a real trimming. They tore around the old ice box as if they had just stepped on the ice, and when the Petes did get a shot at Wager in the nets, they either shot wild or bored it right at the goalie. Scotty Maudsley missed a beautiful chance for the equalizer when he failed to raise the puck off the ice on a close-in shot.

With one minute to go Le Barr took the rubber from behind his own nets and headed straight down centre ice. Milloy went with him, taking a pass at centre ice and then slipping it back to Le Barr when they came to the defence. Le Barr glided through between them and flipped a nice one into the corner of the net, tieing up the score. When the period ended the count was two all, and on account of the Petes having to play in Lindsay on Wednesday the Tweed team showed great sportsmanship in not requesting the Petes to play off the tie.

Walter Jackson of Peterboro' handled the bell.

Salmon Absent.

The Juniors were without the assistance of their crack left-wing player, Salmon, last night, but he will be in action with the blue and white in Lindsay on Wednesday night and the locals should be in shape to hand the Scugog boys a trimming in their own ice box.

Line-Ups.

BELLEFEUILLE OUT OF LUCK FOR 1925

Refused Playing Certificate —Ridpath Elegible For Peterboro Juniors.

TORONTO, Jan. 6.— (Canadian Press).—Pierre Bellefeuille, of London, and last season with Iroquois Falls, in the Northern Ontario Hockey Association, was again refused a playing certificate at a meeting of the O. H. A. Executive last night here, the members seeing no reason why they should change their original decision or that of the sub-committee. Bellefeuille, if he makes London his continuous residence, will be granted a playing certificate next season.

The application of Michael Brophy, formerly of Collingwood, for a certificate to play for Owen Sound, was laid over until the next meeting on January 20th, when E. N. Jamieson, manager of the Owen Sound team, must appear.

Frank L. Lambert, student at the Hamilton Technical School, was granted a certificate to play with the Hamilton Rowing Club Seniors.

John S. Ridpath, junior, formerly of Lakefield, was granted permission to play with Peterboro.

The Northern Hockey League made application for affiliation with the O.H.A., and it was referred to the sub-committee.

SOLUTION OF YESTERDAY'S CROSSWORD PUZZLE.

ALLIES WILL NOT EVACUATE COLOGNE

Incident Demonstrates the Need of a Firm Government in Germany.

(By Carl D. Groat — United Press Staff Correspondent).

BERLIN, Jan. 6. —Indignation was expressed throughout Germany to-day at the Allied decision not to evacuate the Cologne area. Even the Liberals demanded energetic Government action. The Deutsch Zeitung said:

"Germany should send a note to the Allies demanding the fulfillment of their pledges and should publish to the far corners of the world this new breach of the Treaty of Versailles."

The Nationalists point out that the incident demonstrates the need of a firm government.

The Government's attitude is that the Allied note about Cologne and Germany's failure to disarm was unjustified but that further specifications will have to be received before a contradictory reply can be sent.

The Allied note delivered yesterday by Lord D'Abernon was described as so general as not to afford a basis for specific contradiction.

The Reichstag, which convened yesterday, adjourned until tomorrow.

REVIVAL NEEDED.

Freedom Completely Suppressed In All Parts of Italy.

LONDON, Jan. 6. — (United Press). — The denunciation of the Fascist rule in Italy, tyrannical and violent, was the keynote of ex-Premier Lloyd George's opening speech of the New Year.

"Freedom has been completely suppressed in all parts of Italy," Lloyd George said, addressing a Liberal rally. "Repression, intimation, arson, confiscation and murder have become instruments of the Fascist Government."

Lloyd George predicted as essential a Liberal revival throughout Europe—particularly in Italy and England.

THREE WERE KILLED.

Bloody Fighting Throughout Italy Yesterday.

LONDON, Jan. 6 (United Press). —The Daily Herald and The Daily Express, London morning newspapers with widely separated viewpoints, both carry dispatches today stating there has been bloody fighting throughout Italy as a result of Fascist measures of repression. Many persons have been wounded and three killed.

DISEASES

Dread disease, cancer, gradually increases its death toll in every 100,000 Americans.

More cheering is the news that tuberculosis is slowly losing its grip, though it still kills about 93 a year in every 100,000.

Sanitation is exterminating typhoid. Its toll, once mighty, has fallen to about 7 out of 100,000 population a year.

Diabetes snuffs out 18 of every 100,000 yearly. But insulin—which holds this malady in "suspension," halting if not curing it—will rapidly lower its death rate.

BEAR

Russia is mining only 31 tons of coal for every 100 before the war. She is producing only 9 tons of pig iron for every 100 pre-war. These figures, which appear to be authentic, notwithstanding that they deal with Russia, are from the Russian newspaper Rul.

Russia is an agricultural rather than a manufacturing nation. So more illuminating, as to her general condition, is the U. S. Department of Agriculture's estimate that Russia's 1924 crops total 46 million tons of grain. That is enough to feed her—if properly distributed, which is unlikely in view of her broken-down transportation system and general economic machine.

POSTAL ENQUIRIES

From time to time the Post Office have requested the co-operation of the mailing public, pointing out the several ways in which such co-operation would result in better service. In practically every case, these co-operation hints have referred to the actual preparation and mailing of letters, parcels, etc. but there is another way in which you con co-operate and that is on the matter of enquiries. Owing to late mailing, poor packing, faulty addressing, etc., it is perhaps inevitable that a certain amount of mail is delayed or even on occasion lost, and naturally when this happens, the senders are much concerned and are anxious that the difficulty is straightened out as speedily as possible.

During the Christmas season, an exceptional amount of mail has been sent and every one is anxious that it be delivered safely and in good time. Sometimes the addressee neglects to acknowledge a gift as promptly as he should and the sender perhaps concludes that the article has been by some mischance lost. This results in a very large number of unnecessary enquiries being made at the Post Office immediately following the holiday season, and these unnecessary enquiries cause considerable work and expense to the Post Office, delaying legitimate enquiries or possibly holding up other mail—maybe your own or a friend's..

Before enquiry is made, then, there should be some definite fact on which to base the enquiry, and not mere conjecture. First, be sure the article was actually posted—it may still be in someone's pocket or tucked away in a corner. Then be sure it was correctly addressed. Also remember that some persons will insist on bringing their mail to the Post Office at the very last minute and that for this reason there is certain to be at least some congestion and delay. For this reason more than the usual time for delivery should be allowed. Lastly, be sure that the addressee did not receive the article. Write and explain just when you posted the article, and if possible, get a definite statement that the addressee did not receive it. If you do this, then the Post Office will be in a position to give your enquiry the best attention and you will, by your co-operation, have assisted the Post Office in giving every one the best possible postal service.

WOOD CUTTER HURT.

John Edwards, of Nestleton, Suffered Painful Injury.

JANETVILLE, Jan. 6. — While cutting wood in company with Cecil Johnson, of Janetville, John Edwards, of Nestleton, received a severe gash in his foot which required six stitches to close the wound. The young men were just finishing work for the day when one of them suggested that they cut down one more tree which stood in the roadway. They had just struck a few blows when the accident occurred. Edwards is doing as well as can be expected.

Holiday Entertainments.

The holiday entertainments are over for the season, and were marked by a large measure of success.

The North School held a Christmas entertainment in which a cantata, entitled "Topsy Turvy" figured very largely. The two south schools combined and held their concert in the Foresters' Hall, which was very successful. The Presbyterian and Methodist Sunday Schools both held trees and concerts, which were most gratifying in their results.

Missionary Anniversary.

Next Sunday will be a great day in the Methodist Churches of Janetville and Mount Horeb. Rev. Dr. Thompson, on furlough from China, will have charge of the missionary services. Dr. Thomanson will be heard with great profit. Janetville has waited the pleasure of the missionary department as to a deputation, and is delighted with the arrangement. The people should hear this man from the battle line of missionary operations.

POULTRY SHOW OPENED TO-DAY IN ARMOURIES

Entries This Year Higher Than Usual—Forty New Pens in Use.

OVER THOUSAND BIRDS

Show Will Be Open Each Evening—Several Demonstrations.

The seventeenth annual exhibition of the Peterboro Poultry Association opened to-day in the Armouries, and will continue until the evening of Thursday of this week. The entries this year promise to exceed in number those of any previous exhibit. With the forty new pens purchased this season in requisition, it was found necessary to crowd in the exhibits ,three and four to a coop, in some instances. Over a thousand birds will be on view, all the classes well filled, with farm entries bigger and better than ever, evidencing an increasing interest on the part of the farming community in the show and in the breeding of good birds.

Barred Rocks appear to be the predominating entry in point of numbers, with forty birds, with White Leghorns a close second, and large entries of Pitt Games and Rhode Island Reds. Hamburgs, Brahmas and Cochins lead in the fancy species, there is a big showing of turkeys and geese and ducks, a fine exhibit of bantams, and an exceptionally large number of pigeons, including Chief Newhall's homers, and a variety of Jacobins, owls, carriers, fantails and tumblers.

Entries from out of town include those of H. L. Van Allen, of Stirling, who is showing 170 birds; W. J. Abernethy, of Campbellford; G. Hutchinson, of Warkworth; Wilson, of Port Hope; Dr. Hayden, of Cobourg; McLaughlin, of Oshawa; and Messrs. Patterson, Weir and Bowie, of Agincourt. Of the local exhibitors, H. Lush has probably the largest number of birds on view.

This year's officials, the president, James Ellis, and the secretary, W. Nesbitt, with the superintendent, George Paxman, were busily engaged in getting things ready this morning. Mr. Paxman is entering to-day on his fourteenth year of sperintendence of the annual show of the Peterboro Poultry Association.

Protests, strong and vigorous, came from the majority of the chief actors in the fowl drama that will be staged in the Armories during the next three days and nights. From the covered hampers and crates at the entrance came the impatient outcries that were repeated up and down the lines of wire coops that fill the big grey interior of the Armories building. A crowd of small boys followed a procession headed by an assistant who lugged two heavy geese to their temporary home. "The lordly Canada goose" that Jack Miner raves about was a loud-voiced member of the fowl family this morning. Two temperamental Emdens created a scene when they objected strenuously to removal from one coop to another. In the corner near them were half a dozen dignified Africans, while next door were the bulbous-forehead Chinese variety. Several little boys, discovering the description "Chinese" on their coop, hurled the word at them as an epithet of reproach, provoking a torrent of cackling remonstrance. Above the noisy geese were the quiet, well-behaved pigeons in Quaker-like greys and greens and whites, and the funny Jacobins with their tufted heads and long tail-feathers.

Two pens of pheasants make interesting exhibits this year, and the poultry show holds two entirely new and different type of bird, that have not heretofore been on view at the annual exhibition, and have been just recently admitted to the standard. One is the big creamy white "Chanticler," the bird perfected after years of careful breeding by one of the brothers in the Trappist Monastery in Quebec, and shown by C. LaPlante, Lock Street. The idea behind the breeding of this type was to produce a bird without a high comb and wattles which freeze so quickly in a northern country, and the small vestige of both is proof of the breeder's success.

The other new variety to this exhibition is the Jersey Black Giant, a big, massive fowl with glistening coal-black plumage and long shank. One of these big birds was trying unavailingly to arouse a somnolent beauty in the next coop, its head buried under a bright green and bronze hackle. A hefty Plymouth Rock, with a blue band completing its patriotic color scheme of white plumage and red wattles, dozed on one foot, a continuous performance that seemed to cause it no discomfort.

The ducks made a good showing. There are pure white Indian Runners, with beady black eyes, the dark Muscovas with warty noses, the wild mallards and cream Pekins with bright orange bills. There are gold and silver-laced Wyandottes, little Dorkins with their rug-like markings, and beautiful Blue Andalusians.

Down at the end of the hall are the turkeys, monstrous birds in brown and white and bronze. One big white Holland gobbler has a marvellous head of rose and pale blue and another shows a golden-brown overlay on pure white. From the guinea fowl comes their querulous "buckwheat" call, and the tiny bantams have a miniature cry that is amusingly strong. One big Ancona in the large coops has a gurgling crow that seems to occasion it much inconvenience. It kept repeating it over and over again this morning as if in an effort to dislodge the offending trill.

In the row that houses the bantams are creamy "silkies" with odd grey faces, and a few white Angora rabbits, with rose-pink eyes. In connection with the exhibit, a demonstration on killing fowl and one in egg grading and candling will be given by Government experts.

Mrs. R. Bugg is rendering excellent service to the poultrymen and their patrons by conducting a counter where home-made pies and cakes, sandwiches, light drinks, tea and coffee with real cream, may be purchased.

UNVEIL WINDOW IN ALL SAINTS'

Rev. J. W. R. Beck's Ministry is Recalled in Beautiful Ceremony.

RECTOR IN 1856.

All Saints' Anglican church was the scene of an interesting and unique service on Sunday evening when Ven. Archdeacon J. C. Davidson unveiled a beautiful stained glass window in memory of Rev. J. W. R. Beck.

The window, which is of wonderful coloring and chaste design was originally the chancel window of the first church in All Saints' parish, where it was placed in 1900. It has now been rebuilt into the sanctuary of the splendid edifice that to-day shelters All Saints' congregation.

Rev. Mr. Beck was a rector in Peterborough from 1856 until 1889, and his good wishes are living yet in the memories of his parishioners. It his address on Sunday Ven. Archdeacon Davidson also eulogized Mrs. Beck's sterling service in charitable works.

A brass tablet near the window in its new location is inscribed, "To the Glory of God and in Memory of John Walton Romeyn Beck, Rector of Peterborough 1856 to 1889." Then follows the story of the transferring of the window in which the present Rector, Rev. J. D. Paterson, took a great personal interest.

Rev. Mr. Beck was the father of Mrs. Stevenson, of Peterborough, wife of Col. Arthur Stevenson.

DESCRIBES THE BANK FAILURE

H. J. Daly Informed the Directors That It "Was His Mess."

TORONTO, January 6. — Canadian Press. — J. F. M. Stewart, a former Home Bank director, convicted of negligence, took the witness stand this morning in defence of a fellow director, R. P. Gough, on trial for making false statements concerning the banks affairs, to the Minister of Finance. Mr. Stewart entered the box to tell of the history of various companies with which he and other bank directors were connected.

He said the syndicate, including himself and M. J. Haney, put half a million dollars in the Halifax Shipyards, most of which money came from the Home Bank.

Witness said he had been invited to join the bank directorate by the late H. J. Daly, president, who had told him the bank was making the usual amount of profits.

Mr. Stewart broke down when telling of the directors' meeting of Aug. 7, 1923, when A. E. Calvert presented a statement showing the bank was broke. He said he could not describe the effect of the blow on the directors. Wiping his eyes, witness said the late H. J. Daly announced that it was his mess and he would accept responsibility for the crowd, but, added witness, "before the meeting was over he made a worse mess of himself than I am doing now, and eventually had to be taken home."

Continuing Stewart told of the clash between President Daly and Calvert, during which Daly declared Calvert did not know enough about the bank to know its condition. Finally Daly told Calvert he was through and asked him to leave the room. Calvert replied that if he left the room he would be through. Other directors urged Calvert to remain. After Calvert had gone Daly declared he had known the true condition of the bank for 18 months but did not tell the other directors because he did not think they had enough red blood in their veins to stand it. He then declared he would take the punishment for the crowd.

ARE WE "BUGHOUSE" ON HOTELS?

It looks as if half of the country were deserting their homes to live in hotels. Last year a quarter of a billion dollars was spent on hotel construction in this country and those under way or contemplated for the present year will amount to double that sum. These are going up in the large cities and small and of those opened last year 64 represented a cost of more than a $1,000,000 each. Some of them cost $10,000,000. Five had more than 1,000 rooms each and 30 of them ranged from 4 to 1,200 rooms each.

There is no longer any prejudice against imitation jewellery. It is a part of the costume to-day, and is as necessary to the effect as any other detail.

A SMART COSTUME

There a very painjable quality about this ensemble costume of which the dress and coat lining are of printed pussy willow taffeta and the coat of plain silk the same shade of the groundwork of the printed silk A wide scarf finishes the coat. ....

SCHOOL ASSOCIATION.

The Red Cross Will Form Classes For Home Nursing.

(Contributed).

The regular monthly meeting of Queen Alexandra Home and School Association was held Monday evening, January 5th, the president, Mrs. H. G. Walker, in the chair.

The Red Cross are forming classes, to teach home nursing, which they hope to hold in the Public Library. Young mothers and girls were urged to take advantage of this opportunity. There are to be afternoon and evening classes.

The teachers have consented to take charge of an entertainment, to be held in February.

A telephone committee was formed, at the suggestion of the secretary, as the large attendance at this meeting demonstrated what the judicious use of the telephone can do.

The members were reminded that the nominations would be held next month.

Several new members were added to the roll.

The ice on Inverlea Park Rink is getting better. This is not on the river, but over near the end of Inverlea Street.

Mr. J. Cuthbertson gave a most interesting address on the women of Japan. Their life is a constant service to their husbands, and later to their sons. The girls are eager to get education. It is a scandal, in Japan, for any girl over twenty to be unmarried. The girl is never consulted as to whom she will marry. Parents of both parties arrange everything. He gave some touching incidents of the heroic devotion of mothers during the awful earthquake.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered the speaker.

A short programme by some former pupils was greatly enjoyed. Piano solo—Mr. Hedley Vickers. Vocal solo—Miss Grace Simpson. Piano trio—by the Misses Violet and Isabel Davidson and Margaret McCulloch.

The President thanked the pupils and hoped they would favor the Association often.

The meeting closed by the singing of God Save the King.

The banner was won by Senior Fourth, Mr. M. H. Park's room.

MACHINES CONFLICTED.

Radio Demonstrator Had to Move Away From Doctor's Office.

ESSEX, Conn., January 6th. — (United Press).— Henry Chalker, demonstrating his radio set at his home to-day, far far away from all doctors offices.

Henry desired to sell sets as a side line just about the time Mr Charles C. Davis, who has an office next door to Chalker's store, decided to buy a violet ray machine for use in his practice. All went well with the radio business until the violet ray machine went into operation.

When every time he was giving a demontsration of a set while the doctor was giving a patient a treatment with the violet rays, Henry could get nothing but station static and a consequence he lost his sales.

All sorts of experiments having failed and not being able to come to terms with the doctor, Henry today moved his radio business out to his home.

RADIO EVERYWHERE.

Programme From W. O. S. Picked Up By Set Inside of Vault.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Jan. 6. —(Canadian Press.)—Radio station WOS announced last night that a letter from the Savings Bank at Palmyra, Missouri, said the programme from WOS had been received on a super heterodyne set placed inside the bank's vault. The letter said the vault's walls were twenty-seven inches of steel and concrete and that during the reception of the programme the steel door was closed.

COMING MONDAY

Lon Chaney and Virginia Valli in "THE SHOCK"

THEATRES

AT THE CAPITOL.

"His Hour," the feature picture at the Capitol, which has its last showing to-night, is one of those vivid love-stories rarely pictured on the silver sheet in these matter-of-fact days. It is the sort of production that sends fat men in the audience groping for their hats at the meridian of its tempestuous screening, and sends them out, muttering "slush," but keeps the major portion of its watchers glued to their seats to the last moment. It is something of the "St. Elmo" type of story, with a strong, supposedly bad man pursuing a haughty beauty. And it is also distinctly Elinor-Glynish. It takes a woman to write this sort of thing.

"A proud woman challenges fate," the Russian Prince told Tamara Loraine, the aristocratic English widow, as he left her in the shadow of the Sphinx, to meditate presumably on his peculiar temperament. When she arrived later in Russia, to be the guest of his aunt, and when his closest friend, Count Boris, became infatuated with her, he began his campaign. The cross-play of passion and temperament in the cold English beauty and the passionate Russian, "wild as a hawk," is very entertaining. It is a tale of Romance with a capital R, and calculated to cause the heart-strings of all the young people who watch it to thrill in sympathy with the colorful wooing of the Prince Gritzko.

Mrs. Glyn evidently didn't overlook any items that would contribute to the artistic perfection of her picture. The keynote of passionate romance is struck at the very beginning, and continues with mounting fervor to the final close-up. The Russian setting is admirable for a picture of this type, and the central figures are immense. Aileen Pringle makes a superb heroine, and John Gilbert, as the Russian Prince, the man who dominates the stage at all times, is the personification of romance, albeit a trifle stagey. Handsome, vital, magnetic, his impersonation of the vivid lover in "His Hour," is calculated to wither the laurels of even a Valentino. The combination of setting and plot and acting in Elinor Glyn's production of her own story make an intense, colorful picture.

The comedy is a Harold Lloyd production, with the usual Lloyd situations to make it very entertaining.

AT THE ROYAL.

PRISCILLA DEAN IS BACK IN OLD FORM

Dynamic Star Has Colorful Role in "The Siren of Seville."

Now we know why Priscilla Dean has been noticably absent from the screen for the past half dozen months or so!

She's been holding out on us—storing up energy and vitality so that she could burst forth on the screen again with all the old fire and pep she displayed in "The Virgin of Stamboul," "The Wildcat of Paris," "Outside the Law" and other of her earlier triumphs.

At least she has accomplished that result in "The Siren of Seville," the first of her own productions, which opened a three-day engagement at the Royal Theatre yesterday.

This picture is unquestionably the most elaborate and spectacular production in which she has appeared. Incidentally it is her first production under a new starring contract. Her present screen work certainly reflects her enthusiasm and wholesoul effort.

"The Siren of Seville" was written especially for her by H. H. Van Loan, who also write "The Virgin of Stamboul." Against an unusual and at all times picturesque background Mr. Van Loan has woven an action story of adventure and romance, with plenty of arm-of-your-seat-gripping thrills for good measure.

Certainly few of the recent screen offerings have held audiences so intensely interested as did this picture yesterday. One breath-taking thrill followed another until the climax smashed its way across the screen. And what a climax!

We are not mean enough to give it away. Consider, however, that it happens in a bull ring—a huge arena in Seville, with thousands of cheering spectators for a background — and that it presents a situation unique in the history of screen melodrama.

If you miss this one you'll be cheating yourself!

LOU CHANEY OF "HUNCH BACK" FAME AT ROYAL THURSDAY

Lou Chaney, now famed as the screen's greatest character actor, and Virginia Valli will be seen at the Royal on Thursday in "The Shock." The "big scene" in this production is the destruction of a big city by earthquake and fire.

AT THE REGENT.

Last evening a full house greeted the opening presentation of "The Orphans of the Storm, D. W. Griffith's great screen epic of the French Revolution.

This stupendous production brings before your eyes the tragic doings of that eventful period of French history. The magnificent and wasteful actions of the French court and nobility are shown in glaring contrast to the deep poverty of the common people.

The Gish Sisters do the finest acting of their career in this film.

ENGLAND HAS CHANCE.

May Get Revenge on Australian Cricketers in the Second Game.

MELBOURNE, Australia, Jan. 6 (Canadian Press).—England has a splendid opportunity to avenge the defeat inflicted by Australia in the firsts cricket test match played in December. Witih nine wickets still to fall, England require 318 runs for a victory in the second contest, and it is likely that with the best batsmen still to go in, the runs will be obtained.

Tate, a young Sussex professional, was mainly responsible for the poor showing made by the Antipodeans, who scored 250 runs. Tate obtained six wickets for 99 runs. Hearn obtained the remaining four for 84 runs. Commencing the last innings of the match, England were set with a mark of 372 to win, and by close stumps were drawn had secured 54 for the loss of Hobbs' wicket.

TRUTH VERSUS ERROR

Of late there has been quite a lot of writing put before the public regarding Church Union. It is quite certain that two or three wrongs amalgamated will not make one righteous unit. A just separation is better than a false unity. Taking sides against the truth is one of the greatest hinderances to true unity. Unity of hearts and minds is the union that concerns all followers of the Lord Jesus. Amen to all the knowledge and understanding of spiritual things, that brings unity. Jesus prayed for the true unity to be the portion of all who believe in him. —John 17; 20, 21.

WEEK OF PRAYER

The inaugural service of the series arranged by the local Ministerial Association, in observance of the World's Week of Prayer, was held last night in St. James Methodist Church. A good number of people were in attendance and the spirit of devotion and prayer was very deep throughout.

The service was conducted by Rev. Mr. Young the address being given by Rev. Mr. McLeod. Mr. Fred Chenhall presided at the organ, and the music included a solo by Miss Saunders. The subject around which thought centred was the claims of Christ on Young People, and in a number of earnest prayers as well as an impressive season of silent prayer, the work of the church with young people was remembered.

Mr. McLeod spoke briefly on the subject, "What is the Purpose of Man's Life?" In telling manner he emphasized that life had its noblest purpose in the service of God. With special emphasis he dwelt on the opportunities for living out the Christian spirit in our daily existence. Only as our little lives related themselves to the larger interests of the higher living on mankind did they find deepest significance, and the one way to attain true happiness and success was by the way of service to God and to our Fellowmen. Obedience to Christ brought into harmony our relationships and responsibilities to God, to ourselves and to the rest of mankind. To hear the call of Jesus and the call of the needy world and give oneself to the endeavor to relate the two, is to find the fulfillment of life.

The service tonight will be held in St. John's Church, beginning promptly at eight o'clock. Members of all churches and all interested in the deepening of life through prayer are invited to attend.

And said: "Steve, I am glad I became your bride
But I am soon going to the other side.

"When I have passed away—
I know you will be lonely many a day—
For my friends will forget you,
Likewise your brother, too.

"But if you prove faithful every day,
God will guide you all the way;
And Jesus: He will stay
Close beside you all the way.
And as I journey on from day to day
And wondrous things do see
The greatest wonder of all is
The care of God for me.

EDUCATION BOARD ENDS YEAR WITH THEFT OF TEST PAPERS STILL A CLOSED BOOK TO IT

No Response From Premier G. H. Ferguson to Solicitor's Request.

URGE ACTION

Epidemic of Mumps Decimates Attendance in East City Schools.

In the absence of J.. M. Greene, 1924 Chairman who has been elected to the 1925 City Council, J. A. McKone presided at last night's meeting of the Board of Education, the closing session of the 1924 Board.

Stolen Papers.

Having been asked to enquire about the stolen examination paper probe, E. A. Peck, solicitor for the board, reported that he wrote to the Prime Minister but received no reply and endeavoured to interview him today without success, the Premier being out of the city.

E. B. Fowler said the necessity for prompt action should be urged upon Mr. Peck, and moved that the secretary write to this effect. A number of people will want boys cleared of suspicion.

Dr. Craig: "You will brand one a criminal."

E. B. Fowler: "Isn't he? He picked 3 locks and broke a plate glass window, and threw the onus on pupils and teachers."

Mrs. Morris: "If we could get all the facts it would be alright but I'm afraid we won't.."

E. B. Fowler: "It's a matter of common justice."

The motion carried, A. A. Fowler and Dr. Craig not voting, and a full report will be pressed for.

One citizen at least has written to the Board demanding a full report to clear the pupils. The statement made by Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, he said, cleared pupils now resident in the city at the expense of those who are not now living here.

Routine Reports.

James Abraham, school attendance officer reported 42 absentees during December through illness. There were 3 children admitted to the schools and 10 removed.

Dr. A. W. McPherson, school medical officer, reported 242 inspections during the month, with 98 defect slips issued.

During December the school nurse made 289 examinations, made 32 home visitations and excluded 30 children for various causes..

Dr. J. C. Green, school dental officer, reported 104 fillings, 58 temporary extractions and 20 permanent extractions during December.

Account For Glass.

An account was presented by George Street Church for windows broken in the Grace Sunday School, totalling $7.86. It was alleged that the windows were broken by public school pupils.

Mr. Mowat said the windows were not broken during school hours.

The first bill was dated December, 1921, and even Dr. Yelland, a member of George Street Church, admitted that at this late date the claim is not very strong against the Board of Education.

No action was taken.

Epidemic of Mumps.

Mr. Mowat reported a very serious epidemic of mumps that he said had spread like wildfire during the holidays. The outbreak centres in East City, where the attendance is decimated. Steps are being taken under the Medical Officer of Health and the School Medical Officer to stop the epidemic, the school officials having authority to exclude all suspected of having the disease.

Hints Improvement.

As a result of an inspection of the premises and classses, Geo. F.. Rogers reported that the Commercial department rooms should be re-decorated and more suitable desks should be provided. There are not sufficient teachers, the ration being 34 to 1. The teachers are efficient and teaching is excellent.

The long delay in providing additional accommodation for pupils at the Collegiate is not without its effect on the organization of the school, he said. He saw plans of a proposed extension but no one seemed to know what was being done.

To Library Board.

A. Mowat, B.A., was re-appointed as the Board's representative on the Public Library Board for the three years beginning February 1. His appointment was on motion of Dr. Craig and J. A. McKone.

There were present: E. B. Fowler, Dr. John J.. Craig, John A. McKone, Dr. Herbert M. Yelland, A. A. Fowler and Dr. F. C. Neal.

Lose Three Members.

Dr. Neal referred to the dropping from the Board of Education of J. M. Greene, A. A. Fowler and Roland Denne.

"We appreciate the work of these three gentlemen, who have all filled the chairmanship of the board and a lot of good' work and hard work was accomplished under their tenure of office," he said. "We hope that they will carry on in their new positions the good work they started on the Board of Education."

E.. B. Fowler: "It means a sacrifice on the part of any citizen to assume this office and these men have always given their best."

J. A. McKone: "There's no doubt they worked hard and we will miss them, especially this year with so much important business coming up."

A. A. Fowler replied that he had given of his best as a member of the Board for eight years. He expressed his appreciation of the kind expressions and wished the Board of Education every success.

Mrs. Morris said it is rather pleasant to think that these three men will go out as missionaries from the Board on a matter that has engaged the attention of the Board for some years. "I like to think that the vote in September was unanimous and the chairman, Mr. Greene asked all to put their shoulders to the wheel to further the plans."

She was sorry to see Messrs. Greene and Denne leave, but was certain they would be just as valuable on the City Council, understanding the problems that attach to the project before the Board.

DISLIKE FOR KAISER LED TO MUTILATION

Father Ripped Son's Back Open With Butcher Knife So He Would Not Have to Fight.

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y., Jan. 7.—(United Press). — The tale of a father who mutilated his son so that he would not have to fight for the Kaiser was told in the Supreme Court here Tuesday. Conrad Johanneson sued the Atlantic Transport Company for damages owing to injuries received aboard one of their vessels, and photographs of his body revealed a terrible scar running the length of his back.

In 1914 he was living with his father, a Dane, in Germany, Johanneson said, in explaining this old wound. The elder Johanneson disliked the Kaiser, and did not approve of Germany's entrance into the war.

One night, soon after the declaration of war, Johanneson's father called to his son, and, stepping behind him, ripped his back, from nape to the end of his spinal column, with a butcher knife.

"Now, you will never be able to fight for the Kaiser," the father cried.

The boy recovered from the cut too late to fight for the Kaiser.

One of his companions shot and probably fatally wounded a detective. His father, a stock broker, formerly was in business in Louisville, Ky.

HOTEL SALE OF BEER IN MANITOBA REFUSED

Request of Hotelmen Contrary to Verdict of People.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 7.— Amendment of the Manitoba Government Liquor Control Act to confirm with Alberta and Quebec legislation, permitting sale of beer in licensed hotels, could not be consistently made by the Government of Manitoba, Premier John Bracken and Attorney-General R. M. Craig, informed a delegation of Winnipeg hotelkeepers yesterday.

The hotelmen declared that public opinion had changed considerably since the last referendum dealing with the sale of beer and light wines, and insisted that a vote, if taken now, would be favorable to the proposal. The Cabinet officials, however, took the view that the Government could not make any amendment in the lines suggested consistent with the recent vote.

THREE CHURCHES VOTE AGAINST COMBINATION

26 of Ottawa Presbyterian Bodies for Union.

OTTAWA, Jan. 7. — (Canadian Press).—The returns from the Presbyterian Churches in the Ottawa Presbytery show that out of the twenty-nine churches that have taken a vote or decided the matter of Church Union without a vote, up to date 26 have gone into the United Church, and three have voted to remain as they are and not join in the Union.

There are 89 churches and missions in the Presbytery. Out of the number which have announced their decision to go into Union, 21 have done so without voting or by a unanimous choice.

NINETEEN WITNESSES.

For Trial of Man on Charge of Slaying Two Half Sisters.

FREDERICTON, N.B., Jan. 6, — (Canadian Press.)—Crown Prosecutor P. J. Hughes, K.C., has asked for summonses for nineteen witnesses for the trial of Harry D. Williams, charged with the murder of his two half-sisters at Fosterville, November 25 last. The list includes all those who gave evidence at the preliminary hearing, also Hollis Wilson, of Canterbury, who was mentioned in the evidence at the examination. The mother of the dead girls and two young brothers are also expected to be called.

GREGG OBJECTS.

Threatens to Quit Baseball Over Sale of Senators.

SEATTLE, Wash., Jan. 6.—Vean Gregg, veteran Indian southpaw, who was sold to the Washington Senators at the close of the 1924 season, has left for his home in Alberta, Canada, threatening to retire from baseball rather than play for the Senators.

Wade "Red" Killifer, manager of the Seattle club, said Gregg believed he should have received a larger bonus from his sale to Washington.

"The club gave Gregg a bonus of $1,500 besides paying his expenses back home, contrary to the general rule," said Killifer.

FROM PARLIAMENT TO PLACE IN BREAD LINE

Two Former Labor Members of Commons in Need.

LONDON, Jan. 7. — (Canadian Press).—Two former Labor members of the House of Commons have fallen on evil days.

Albert Law, member for Bolton in the last Parliament, an operative spinner in his home town, Bolton, Lancashire, is now ill and out of work. He intends applying for aid from the national unemployment fund.

The other former representative of Labor in the House of Commons who has found the way of life hard and uncertain is John Brotherton. Brotherton was in financial straits while he was an M.P., and in his maiden speech in Parliament he admitted that he had drawn the dole only the week previously.

713 DIVORCE CASES IN BRITISH ISLES

200 Fewer Cases For Approaching Court Term.

LONDON, Jan. 7. — (Canadian Press).—While there are 200 fewer divorce cases entered for the ensuing court term than in the last term there are still 713 divorce cases to be tried. At the time of the armistice and for two years following the divorce courts had their busiest years, every term seeing 3,000 cases or more on the list. In most of these cases it was erring wives misbehaving while their husbands were fighting for the Empire.

Petitions by wives for divorce nowadays are coming into more prominence than formerly as a result of the Act recently passed which enables a wife to obtain a divorce for her husband's misconduct alone. Previously it was necessary for the wife to prove cruelty as well as infidelity on the part of the husband from whom she wished to be divorced.

LABOR GROUP DESERTED THE WINNIPEG COUNCIL

Suspicious of Committee Appointments—Were Then Left Off.

WINNIPEG, Man., Jan. 7. — In protest against the action which they assumed the majority of the Winnipeg City Council proposed to take in appointment of civic committees for 1925, the entire Labor group, comprising seven members, deserted the Council Chamber in a body Tuesday, before any business had been transacted.

The appointments were made by the remaining members of the Council, and as a result of their action not a single chairmanship of the standing committee was allotted to the Labor group. They were given a small representation on other bodies within the city's scope of work.

CONFIDENCE IN DALY DECLARED BY ASSOCIATE

Frank and Friendly — Had Exceptional Analytical Ability, Says J. F. M. Stewart.

AT GOUGH TRIAL.

Daly "Got to a Place Where He Couldn't Tell What He Knew.

TORONTO, Jan. 7.—J. F. M. Stewart, Home Bank director, who has been convicted of negligence and who broke down Tuesday while giving evidence in the defence of R. P. Gough, another director on trial, on charges of making false returns of the bank's affairs to the Department of Finance, continued his evidence yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Tilley, defence counsel, continuing his examination of Stewart, asked what conclusion he had arrived at as to the integrity and ability of the late Col. Mason, who was general manager when the bank failed.

"My opinion is that Col. Mason was a frank and efficient general manager," replied Mr. Stewart. He added that he had never seen anything to disturb his confidence in Col. Mason.

"What about Mr. Daly?"

"I was a great admirer of his ability and business efficiency."

"What of his qualities appealed to you particularly?"

"The way he could analyze. He got to the bottom of things. He was always frank and pleasant and made friends with every one, as he had done with me."

"Was there anything up to August 7 which tended to make you lose confidence in him?"

"No."

Ogilvie Options.

Mr. Stewart, under cross-examination by D. L. McCarthy, crown counsel, told of his connection with the Ogilvie Company of Montreal. He was with a syndicate which took over the Ogilvie Company which at the time was unprofitable. Two hundred thousand dollars were borrowed from the Home Bank, each member of the syndicate guaranteeing his portion. Both Daly and Stewart had options to purchase the Ogilvie Company and both attempted to exercise the option at the same time. Daly was first, because Stewart's first notice of taking up the option was not in legal form. He dropped out of the Ogilvie Company except to retain enough shares to sit on the directorate board, at the request of Mr. Daly.

Mr. Stewart then told of his connection in various firms with Mr. Haney, while the latter was president of the Home Bank. Mr. Stewart at this time was not a director of the bank. Most of these companies were financed with bank money on guarantee by witness and Haney, and when the transactions were completed, the bank shared in the profits. Mr. Stewart said that of the various transactions of this kind which he negotiated, the bank got profits upwards of $200,000. C. A. Barnard of Montreal, another bank director, who has been convicted, also appeared in some of these transactions. Theses kind of transactions ceased when Haney resigned from the presidency of the bank.

Haney's Resignation.

Haney told the witness that he resigned because Daly had secured so much stock of the bank, and he couldn't want to serve under such circumstances. Witness had never known of the so-called "Barnard trouble," about the dishonored cheques, although he knew Barnard was connected with the Davie Shipbuilding Company and owned two ships. Witness said he joined the bonk board in 1922 on the invitation of Mr. Daly, who told him that the bank was in good condition. Mr. Haney transferred witness 40 shares of bank stock to qualify as a director.

"Daly said he was going to pay a lot of attention to the bank, and make it a real institution, and I believe he thought he could," said Stewart.

Witness said he would not say that Daly was dishonest, "but he got to a place where he couldn't tell what he knew." He didn't think Daly would have asked him to join the board if he had realized the bank was in poor shape. Mason had also talked to him about the bank, contending that there was a place for the small bank in Canada, although it might have more difficulties than others in making headway.

CHICAGO WATER FLOW PROPOSAL

Bill Asks for Seven Years to Comply With Diversion Order.

IS INTRODUCED.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—(Canadian Press).—Representative William E. Hull, Republican, Illinois, yesterday re-introduced a bill designed to settle the controversy over the withdrawal of water from Lake Michigan by the Chicago sanitary district.

The measure introduced as an outcome of the Supreme Court decision Monday, upholding an injunction restraining the district from withdrawing 10,000 cubic feet of water a second, would provide for gradual reduction of the diversion to 7,000 cubic feet at the end of ten years. The district, in the meanwhile, would be required to construct adequate treatment plants for disposal of sewage.

The court, in upholding the injunction, allowed sixty days before it becomes operative to permit action looking to prevention of spread of disease in Chicago, which was predicted if the district should be held strictly to withdrawal of only about 4,100 cubic feet a second, as stipulated in the war department permit the Government fought to uphold.

SUGAR TARIFF CHANGE ASKED

Delegation From Halifax Sugar Refiners Lay Request Before Hon. J. A. Robb.

ON RAW SUGAR.

OTTAWA, Jan. 7. — (Canadian Press). — Requesting modifications in the British preferential tariff on raw sugar, a delegation representing Halifax sugar refiners waited upon Hon. James A. Robb, Acting Minister of Finance, and Hon. E. M. Macdonald, Minister of National Defence, Tuesday. The delegation, which was introduced by R. E. Finn, member for Halifax, took the ground that the British refiner who purchased his sugar in the open market had an advantage over the Canadian refiner.

The new preference for West Indies sugar, recently announced by the British Government, was discussed, and its bearing on the sugar industry in Canada was taken into consideration.

Beyond revealing that the discussion took this form, neither the members of the delegation nor the Ministers involved cared to discuss the matter after the meeting. "It was just a general discussion; nothing was decided on," said Mr. Macdonald afterwards.

Mr. Robb, as Acting Minister of Finance, promised to take the whole matter under his consideration.

WOODROW WILSON FOUNDATION MEDAL

Viscount Cecil of Chelwood, best known by his former title of Lord Robert Cecil, is shown receiving the bronze medal which constituted the first peace award under the terms of the Woodrow Wilson Foundation. BEATTY BLAMED FOR ESCAPE OF TIRPITZ' FLEET Outspoken Opinion By Admiral Bacon in New Book Creates Sensation.

LAUDS JELLICOE.

Commander of Dover Patrol Asserts Beatty Was Too Impetuous.

LONDON, January 6. — Canadian Press Cable.—"Sensational" is hardly the term which can be applied to "The Jutland Scandal," the book of Admiral Sir Reginald Bacon, who was in command of the Dover patrol during the great war, since the late Admiral "Jacky" Fisher inaugurated a policy of talkativeness, thereby putting an end to the reputation of the British navy as the silent service. Admiral Bacon's publication sheds new light on the Battle of Jutland, and endeavors to fix responsibility for the inability of the British fleet to completely annihilate the Germans. His analysis of the conflicting characters of Admiral Jellicoe and Admiral Beatty, as revealed in the Jutland engagement, has produced many doughty champions for each personality in the controversy.

Praise for Jellicoe.

Sir Reginald doesn't mince words, and he reaches the general conclusion that Jellicoe led the fleet with matchless skill and left nothing undone to secure the defeat of the enemy. If the victory of the British fleet was less decisive than the nation had hoped then the blame lay with Beatty, he says.

That the gunnery of the battle cruiser fleet under Beatty was not good and that it was the admiral's business to see that his ships were able to shoot acurately, is one of Bacon's strictures. Furthermore, Beatty's impetuosity precluded a clear cut decision for the British.

"On sighting the enemy," he comments, "Beatty's duty was to avoid action until the four powerful ships nearby had joined his line when he would have been able to bring an overwhelming concentration to bear on the Germans; but without waiting for the battleships he dashed headlong into the fight, consequently ensuing an action which might have been a brilliant success. Instead it became practically a defeat."

Admiral Bacon does not dispute the gallantry and combativeness of Admiral Beatty, but he says that these qualities were not matched by the equipment of a scientific sailor.

Churchill's Comment.

When Winston Churchill, Chancellor of the Exchequer, who was first Lord of the Admiralty from 1911 to 1915 was leaving London for Paris yesterday he was asked whether he had read Sir Reginald Bacon's book.

"Yes, I have," said the Chancellor, "but Bacon never liked my appointment of Beatty, of which I shall always be proud."

In 1912 Mr. Churchill appointed Beatty Naval Secretary to the First Lord of the Admiralty, and to the command of the First Battle Cruiser Squadron. The Battle of Jutland was fought in 1916.

SURVIVORS RETURN.

Six Members of British Ship's Crew Arrive at Boston.

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 7. — The captain and mate, four members of the crew of the British schooner Esther Hankinson, which was abandoned after sprinking a leak and becoming unseaworthy during a storm in South American waters on November 18, arrived here from Montevideo Tuesday as passengers aboard the steamer Thespis.

The men who were rescued just as they were about to abandon their ship and taken to Montevideo by the Greek steamer Charalambos, are:

Captain Ernest Collett, mate Wallace Smith, Cook Patrick Veters and Seamen Chesley Dicks, Martin Peddle and Jabez Moores.

The three-master, hailing from Newfoundland, was bound from Cadiz, Spain, to St. John's, Nfld., when struck by the storm. During the gale the ship's boatswain was swept overboard and drowned. The British consul is arranging for the transportation of the survivors to Newfoundland.

Bank Robbery Suspects Held in Seattle Until Saturday.

SEATTLE, Jan. 7. — Federal Judge E. E. Cushman yesterday denied a petition for a writ of habeas corpus in behalf of Ross C. Watson, former city detective, held with four other suspects in connection with the $42,000 robbery of the Nanaimo branch of the Royal Bank of Canada, Dec. 21. Judge Cushman, however, signed an order returnable Saturday, which required T. H. Patterson and Bert C. Ross, special counsel for the Crown, to show cause in court then as to why writ should not be issued.

CHURCH UNION MEETING HERE

Case For Union Was Presented by Rev. Robert Laidlaw, D.D.—The Great West.

There were about two hundred people present last evening at the meeting held in St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, in the interests of church union when the case for union was presented by Rev. Robert Laidlaw, D.D., of High Park Presbyterian church, Toronto. The pastor, Rev. James Gordon, introduced the speaker, and opened the meeting with a short prayer, which was followed by the singing of Joseph Scriven's hymn, "What a Friend we have in Jesus."

Dr. Laidlaw gave an impassioned, eloquent address, presenting the case for Union from a very evident sincere and strong belief in its efficacy as an instrument in the hand of God for the advancement of His work on earth. Instead of reviewing the hackneyed arguments usually advanced, he stressed other aspects of the question, laying particular emphasis on the will of th Almighty, as manifested in this movement.

Dr. Laidlaw reviewed in turn his own reasons for going forward into Union. "First, because I am a Presbyterian," he said, going on to give a definition of Presbyterianism from the Encyclopedia Brittanica, showing it to be a half way medium between episcopacy, in which control of church matters is almost entirely withdrawn from the peop', and congregationalism, in which the reverse is the case. To trust spiritual matters and decisions to the judgment of its church courts has always been the guiding influence of the Presbyterian Church, he declared. To leave decisions to the people "is an argument which, carried to its logical conclusion, subverts the very genius of our Presbyterian Church, takes away the stability of our governmental system and throws it back to the Congregational system of popular vote. A vote not to enter union is a vote of censure of the Presbyterian polity and against its leadership."

The second reason: "Because I believe the basis of union agreed upon by the united churches to be in substance agreement with the best in the history of the church of my fathers. We are not asked to give up anything that is vital to our Presbyterian heritage." The speaker alluded to the unanimous judgment of both sections of the Pan-Presbyterian Council in saying that the principles of the Presbyterian Church are sufficiently preserved in the constitution of the United Church to justify its alliance an membership in the Presbyterian Council of the world.

The action of the Church of Scotland in extending felicitations to the United Church, was an earnest that the Mother Church of Presbyterianism, says that it is the obligation of Presbyterians not to stand aloof from the other churches. "The very genius of Presbyterianism is not aloofness."

Satisfying Statement of Truth

Another reason was: "That there is provided in the United Church of Canada a more satisfying statement of Christian truth. Its theology is not emasculated, and it is not a creedless church. The speaker read two of the articles of the basis of union, setting forth in simple, clear language a firm, strong belief in the divinity, the virgin birth and the sacrificial life of Christ, and asserting "our obedience, adoration and love of our Prophet, Priest and King," also the belief in the Holy Spirit as the Law Giver and the Sanctifier, "the spirit of truth, power, holiness, comfort and love." He said: "The argument is refuted there that the United Church will lean to Unitarianism."

"The time is past," said Dr. Laidlaw, "when we must look back to the seventeenth century for a message of truth. Our God is a living God and His Spirit to-day is a living, vitalizing Spirit. The church should not have a static theology nor a moribund outlook, but should be the instrument for a living message and a living leadership."

More Effective Ministry.

"The United Church ensures conditions for a more effective ministry," declared the speaker. "It is not Christianity, but pure p anism and unthinkable in this new world to send men running after each other to try and prevent the minister of another church from teaching something which may not agree with our special ideas. The world is weary for the message of Christ. Young, redblooded men, eager to give their lives to His cause, will no longer tolerate these denominational differences, nonsense, which has no vital concern with th Christian faith."

Speaking of the argument against the new system of ordination of ministers, Dr. Laidlaw said: "Any of us who know what is going on in Canada at the present time in ordination ceremonies, outside of the big metropolitan centres, realize just how unimpressive some of these occasions are." Alluding to instances coming under his observation, where two or three men would constitute the entire attendance at such ceremonies, he said: "Do you think there is anything impressive in that? Do you think it is comparable to being ordained in the presence of the whole synod?"

"We are not building for the present, but for the future. In twenty years, the population of Canada will be west of the Great Lakes. There is no possibility of dealing with the new Canada in the west and with those prolific peoples from the Old Land, who are populating it, by a dis-united Protestantism."

With regard to foreign missions, and the ninety five per cent. of missionaries who are favorable to Union Dr. Laidlaw said: "We are not sending these men and women out to interpret Presbyterianism to the heathen, but to interpret Jesus Christ. Should we who sit here in luxury be deaf to the prayers of those on the firing line?"

The speaker said that the arguments advanced by non-Unionists that the new settlement committee would possess arbitrary powers which would work to the discomfort of pastoral charges in calling ministers, was utterly baseless in fact. He quoted articles from the basis of union to show that the pastoral charge would have a second choice, if their first choice was not available that the settlement committee would be instructed to adhere to the wishes of the pastoral charge at all times, and asserted further that the Presbytery, as at present constituted, have the power to veto on calls which they use when they so desire.

He spoke in strong terms of the widespread spaces of Western Canada which lack religious instruction or supervision, and of the money now spent in needless rivalry with other churches which might be better expended in providing ministers of the Gospel for these isolated divisions in the West. "There are districts out there where young men and women have never ye attended a Christian service. Here you have a surfeit of services. There are so many of them that you can go when you like and stay at home when you like. Are you going to deny your brothers and sisters a little of that which you enjoy to the full? To God you must give an answer of your faith."

Co-operative Marketing.

Has Proved Very Successful To Manitoba Farmers.

BRANDON, Jan. 7. —(Canadian Press). —Development of co-operative marketing along satisfactory lines, and with a profit to the producers was reported to day to the annual convention of the United Farmers of Manitoba. The report from the marketing committee declared that the wheat pool and cattle pool had "got away to a good start" that the co-operative shipping of poultry, cream and butter had been continued successfully and that an egg pool had been organized.

EARTHQUAKE FEARED.

Heavy Tremor Felt This Morning in Boston.

MANX CATS RESEMBLE DOGS

The origin of Manx cats is now attributed to the arrival of these cats on the Isle of Man from ships belonging to the Spanish Armada that were wrecked there. They were probably brought from Japan to Eastern Asia. They are a distinct species with short forelegs and elevated hindquarters, and differ from other cats somewhat in call, ways and character. They vary in color. People who have owned them for long periods say they are not good mousers or hunters. In character they are rather similar to a dog, being highly companionable and having some of the qualities of a guardian.

DECORATING CLUB.

Two Interesting Talks at Meeting This Week.

The Interior Decorating Club of the Women's Art Association met at the home of Mrs. E. W. Borbridge, Weller street, on Monday afternoon of this week. Two very interesting talks were given at this meeting: one by Miss Maude Rush, on "Lighting and Lamps," the other on "Color Harmony and Color Schemes," by Miss Mayme Montgomery.

SHORT COURSE ATTRACTS MANY

Large Attendance at Opening of Agricultural Course at Centreville.

GOOD BEGINNING.

BAILIEBORO, Jan. 6.—The agricultural short course that is being conducted for the benefit of the farm young folks of this community commenced in the town hall, Centreville, on Monday.

The first morning of the course twenty-eight girls and thirty-five boys were present, while it is expected that there will be many more avail themselves of the opportunity of taking the course before it has advanced further.

F. C. Patterson, agricultural representative for East Durham, is managing and arranging the classes, while Mr. Fraser Ross, agricultural representative from Fort William, is taking charge of the young men's class, and Mrs. McMillian is taking charge of the young ladies' classes.

On account of there being such a large number taking the course, the young folks naturally are looking ahead to having a real good time, along with their studies and it is generally considered by both teachers and scholars that the course is going to be a real success.

Among those who are attending the classes are: Lottie, Effie and Ethel Perrin, Ida Pue, Bernice and Florence Barnard, Geraldine White, Jean Dawson, Margaret Greer, Mary Lackie, Charlotte Barnard, Marion Dawson, May Thorne, Edith Deyell, Jean Russell, Edith Thorne, Bessie Wood, Viola Carl, Lottie Earle, Jean Eagleson, Margaret Brown, Kathleen Barnard, Vera Bradshaw, Kathleen Bateman, Gertrude Benson, Ruby Bonner, Margorie Anderson, Emma Tate, Evelyn Donaldson and Reg. and Leonard Atcheson, Ralph and Billy Benson, Fred Perrin, Jas. Johnston, Walter Kinsmen, Charles Barnard, Jno. and Jas. Gainer, W. W. Waterman, Harold Bebee, Herb Dawson, Wess. Bradshaw, Harold Dawson, Walter Thorne, Fred Barnard, Cleve Byers, Arnold Brown, Howard Fair, Herb Dean, Mackintosh Bradshaw, Wilfrid Johnston, Dawson Rutherford, Aylmer and Gerald Dawson, Carl Lang, L. Bothwell, Harry Campbell, James Wood, Edwin Eagleson, Geo. Morrison, Roy Smith, Frank Lackie.

The course will continue throughout the month of January. The teachers have suggested that a literary society be formed, so that the young people might have some enjoyable times together along with their lectures and studies. It has also been decided that the boys will have a chance to visit the abattors in both Peterborough and Toronto during the course.

Judging classes of horses, cattle, sheep, swine, etc., will also be one of the principal factors of this course, along with demonstrations of killing, dressing and the cutting up of the carcasses of hogs and sheep, and every line of agriculture will be dealt with throughout the course.

Personal Notes.

Miss May Dawson, who has been spending her holidays at her home, has returned to Toronto to resume her duties as teacher on the public school staff there.

Miss Kathleen Isbister has returned to Peterboro where she is attending the Peterboro Business College there, after spending the Christmas vacation at her home in Centreville.

Stewart McGill has returned to Belleville to resume his studies there after holidaying at his home at Centreville.

Miss Edna Dawson spent the holidays as the guest of her mother, Mrs. C. F. Dawson, and has now returned to Toronto.

Mrs. A. H. McConnachie spent New Years, the guest of her sister in Hamilton.

Messrs Harry Dawson, John Greer, and Henry Barnard, were visitors to Toronto over the week-end.

Mr. Frank Buckham and family are moving into the residence owned by Miss Thorne, and will reside there until Mr. Buckham's house is rebuilt. Mr. Buckham recently had the misfortune to have his beautiful big red brick residence burned to the ground

Miss Mary Whittington has returned to Guelph, where she is a student of the college there, after having spent the Yule-tide season at her home in South Monaghan.

Misses May Wood, Loretta Barnard and Ethel Falls, have returned to Peterboro to resume their studies at the Normal school there, after having spent the holidays the guests of their parents.

Miss Edith McGill has accepted the duties as teacher of a public school near Bethany.

Quite a number of ex-Normalites and their friends from this district attended the Normal re-union which was held in Peterboro last week. Omong those who were present were Misses Esther and Jessie Deyell, Evelyn Wood, Messrs. Roy Rutherford, Ronald Deyell, Wilford Johnston, Stewart McGill, Clifford Hall.

Miss Esther Deyell has returned to Kinmount where she is principal of the public school staff there, after having spent the Christmas holidays as the guest of her parents.

Mr. John Heaslip and family have recently moved into their home in the village, formerly owned by David Jewison.

Highway Open.

Although there has been considerable snow, and there is excellent sleighing on all of the roads, still the cars contmue to run, and on the Provincial highway the road is splendid for cars to travel on.

Many of the farmers are taking the advantage of the splendid sleighing and are hauling their grain and logs out. Others are busily engaged getting their wood out of the woods, and hauling it home.

Mrs. William Fell of Peterboro, spent Sunday, as the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Roy Greer.

The closed in shed erected by the members of the Anglican church is now complete, and it is needless to say that it is a splendid looking structure. It is certainly quite a difference to have a warm barn to tie a horse in, than the old open shed formerly stood in its place.

CALIFORNIA SAVES FROM RUIN LANDMARKS OF THE PADRES

OAKLAND, Cal., Jan. 7.—(Associated Press).—Mission San Jose, a picturesque California landmark 30 miles south of here, is to undergo its first renovation since it was erected by the Spanish padres in 1791. The mission contains historic records and an ancient graveyard with monuments bearing the names of some of the men who opened the gates to western civilization.

After the complete restoration of Carmel Mission, in Monterey County, in which the famous padre, Junipera Serra, is buried, San Juan Bautista Mission, in San Benito County, was rehabilitated. The San Jose Mission is next on the program.

There are 21 old Spanish missions in California, separated from one another by about 35 miles, a day's journey in the old times. The preservation committee is headed by Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover and Joseph R. Knowland, Oakland publisher.

OUR GORGEOUS MOVIE PALACES

A distinguished Englishman visiting this country was surprised at the gorgeousness of our movie houses and their size. He says London has nothing to compare with them. The English investments are small and insignificant, English investors, he said, would not consider for a moment the investing of so much money in a venture of this character.

LESSARD URGES MILITIA GRANTS

Compares Canada's Expenditures With That of Other Dominions—Navy League Address.

MONTREAL, Jan. 7.—That is is a foolish argument for people to say that since Canada has nearly half a million veterans of the Great War, there is no necessitiy for the country to spend any money in training Canadian youth, was the convicition of Major-General F. L. Lessard, C.B.E., in an address here Tuesday. It was foolish, for the fact that there veterans are getting older every day, that the war is now ten years old and in a few years these men who served their country in the Great War will have passed the age limit for further service; and Canada, if she needed this agument, would have neither veterans nor militia.

General Lessard deplored the indifference of Canadians to the vital need of protecting the trade routes and intimated that much of that indifference was due to the farmers of the prairie provinces, who considered ships a sectional maritime problem and none of their business. It was advanced by some that ata time of crisis, the Canadian trade routes would be protected by the United States, but General Lessard was unable to imagine any self-respecting Canadian relying on a foreign power for his protection. Even should such be the case. Canada would eventually have "to pay the piper." At the last analysis it would cost a great deal more to have the United States do so than to look after our own protection.

General Lessard furnished the following figures of comparative expenditures on naval defence for the United Kingdom and the Dominions:

	Per capita.
Great Britain	$6.72
Australia	2.04
New Zealand	1.14
Canada	.17

Defence, Pensions and debt in 1922-1923 per capita was:

Great Britain	$56.00
Australia	27.50
New Zealand	26.25
Canada	14.67

The speaker recalls that the British navy had been considerably decreased from its pre-war strength, and quoted the warning of Sir Frederick Field, Commander of the Special Service Squadron that had toured the globe, to the effect that with Britain's now limited naval force, it would be imposssible in time of war for the Royal Navy to undertake the defence of all the empire trade routes.

"Surely," continued General Lessard, "we cannot reproach England for not having played the game by us; she has assumed all the responsibilities she can bear. But look at her debt, and what she has undertaken to pay in the even of the countries who owe her money not coming forward with their quota."

General Lessard declared that the Department of National Defence now only gave $10,000,000 for the air, naval and milita forces, as compared with $12,000,000 given to the Militia Department alone in pre-war days. The dollar now was worth only one-third of its pre-war value, hence the decline of Canada's defence expenditures was very considerable.

The address was given to the Navy League, and was listened to by a large gathering.

OBITUARY.

PATRICK DOHERTY.

The funeral of the late Patrick Doherty of Lot 20, Concession 10, Otonabee, whose death occurred on Saturday, January 3, was held on Monday morning from the Church of the Sacred Heart, to St. Peter's Cemetery. The funeral Mass for the late Mr. Doherty, who was an old and well-known resident of the township, was very impressive and was attended by a large number of the friends and relatives of the deceased. The Mass was sung by the pastor, Rev. J. J. O'Brien, with Rev. Gerard Maher as deacon and Rev. J. Finn as sub-deacon. The children's Gregorian choir chanted the funeral music, and His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, who was present, spoke at some length on the virtues and Christian life of the dead man.

The Bishop referred particularly to the good life of the late Mr. Doherty, to his devotion to the church and fidelity in his religious duties, and to his zeal in the cause of education, evidenced by his constant support of and active interest in St. Joseph's School in Otonabee.

Pallbearers were six nephews of the deceased—James Fitzgerald, Thomas Fitzgerald, James Doherty, Thomas Heffernan, Vincent Doherty and James Fitzgerald.

GEORGE R McQUIGGE

HAVELOCK, Jan. 7.—The death occurred on Monday, January 5th, at his home in Belmont Township, of George R. McQuigge, in his 53rd year. The deceased had been ill only a few days, and his death was a shock to his many friends. He had been a resident of Belmont all his life, where he was well known and highly respected. Survivors are his sorrwing wife and three brothers, Thomas of Belmont, Stephen of Madoc and John of Campbellfod.

The funeral will leave the family residence, Lot 6, Concession 1, Belmont, at 1.30 p.m. on Thursday, January 8th, and proceed to the Methodist Church, Marmora, where service will be held at 2 o'clock. Interment will take place in Marmora Cemetery.

FABLES ON HEALTH

Blisters, caused by the shoe rubbing the foot, develop into a real painful ulcer if they are not properly treated, Mr. Mann of Anytown learned.

If pricked, some disinfectant should be applied immediately. The best way to let the water out is to pass a bit of vaseline thread through the blister.

When the blister is on the sole of the foot where the skin is thick, take a fine thread and grease it well with borated or pure vaseline..

Thread a coarse needle and pass it through the blister from one end to the other. Cut the thread on each side and cover the spot with a bit of vaseline. Next day draw the thread out. The blister will be gone.

Blisters on the hand may be pricked with a needle and then covered with a layer of collodion one ounce, castor oil eight grains, soft turpentine eight grains. Two or three coats are required.

THRIFTY PARIS PLANS NEW ENTERTAINMENT FOR VISITORS IN 1925

PARIS, Jan. 7.—A city going up within a city. Such is the sight confronting visitors to Paris when they look over the great buildings going up between the Champs Elysees and the Esplanade des Invalides to provide shelter for the International Exhibition of Decorative Arts, from April to October, 1925.

Situated on both banks of the Seine the exhibition grounds will cover an area of 70 acres. It has been found necessary to extend the private stalls across the beautiful bridge of Alexandre III, which serves as a connecting link over the Seine, and the most modern bridge in Paris with houses built upon it will resemble an ancient structure of the day of the Romans or the middle ages.

Modernism will be the essential condition upon which articles will be admitted. All copies or genuine antiques will be banished.. A special pavilion has been set aside for the exhibits of electrical dynamos and motors.

The industries invited to participate in the exhibition have been divided in five groups; architecture, furniture, decoration, arts of the theatre, street and gardens, and tuition.

Architecture has been subdivided into the following exhibits; arts and industry in wood; art and industry in metal; art and industry in ceramics, and art and industry in glass.

Furniture and household necessities will be shown in wood, leather, metal, glass, textile and paper. Under this head will be also exhibited books, toys, musical instruments and scientific apparatus.

Decoration exhibits will comprise garments, dresses and accessories, perfumery, flowers and jewelry.

Everything pertaining to the theatre, street and gardens and tuition will be shown under the last two groups.

All the great perfumery houses in Paris have combined and will occupy the same pavilion.

A VICTORY FOR CANADA.

The decision of the United States Supreme Court affirming the judgment of the lower court granting a perpetual injunction against the diversion of more than 4,167 cubic second feet of water by the city of Chicago for use in her drainage canal, is a distinct victory for Canada and for the Great Lake ports on both sides of the line.

Canada's contentions have been upheld by the Supreme Court.

The argument that the treaty obligations with this country in regard to the diversion of water should be carried out is fully sustained.

Chicago has for years been taking more than 10,000 cubic second feet of water from Lake Michigan, with the result that the Great Lake ports found their harbours affected by low water.

The carrying out of the judgment will cause an immediate improvement in these conditions, and while it will not add at once to actual power development, it will add to the potential power resources at Niagara Falls, and is therefore of great importance to the people of Ontario.

But will the judgment be obeyed?

Unfortunately, there is an appeal to the Secretary of War possible, and the Chicago authorities are not likely to let the grass grow under their feet while they are considering the desirability of developing this last hope to the utmost.

FOR THE SIXTH TERM.

Congratulations are in order to Mr. A. J. Meyers, son of Ald. J. W. Meyers of Peterborough, who for the sixth successive year has been elected Mayor of the thriving community of Campbellford.

Mayor Meyers will soon be in the class once held exclusively by Tommy Church of Toronto and Mederic Martin of Montreal.

It is unusual for a chief magistrate to hold office for more than two terms, and when the citizens continue to choose the same Mayor year after year it is conclusive proof that he possesses the necessary qualities for the office and that he has served his community faithfully and well.

Certainly that can be said of Mayor Meyers, during whose regime Campbellford has thrived and grown, while better streets and sidewalks and other conveniences supply pidence that progress has ever been a watchword with the many times elected chief magistrate.

This time Mayor Meyers has been returned to office by a vote that leaves no doubt as to the approval by the majority of the electors of his actions, and no doubt he will regard the result as an incentive to still greater efforts on the part of his fellow-citizens in the sixth year of its reign.

Campbellford evidently possesses the faculty of knowing a good thing when she sees it.

SHORTER SPEECHES.

With an editorial in the London Times in which the Thundered argues for shorter, better and fewer speeches, the Examiner hastens to express its entire agreement.

The article was written for English consumption, but if it applies to England, how much more closely does it apply to Canada!

Compared to the average Canadian after-dinner speech or public address the English effort in the same line is almost invariably shorter, generally more lucid and often more amusing.

In this country we suffer from an over supply of fluent talkers and a scarcity of good orators.

The average banquet here is almost invariably robbed of much of its enjoyment because of the fatal error made by most committees of endeavouring to cram the toast list with as many speakers as possible.

And the speakers in turn offend by extending their efforts to inexcusable lengths, with the result that the audience is yawning long before the final toast has been honoured.

The Times' programme, "shorter speeches, better speeches, fewer speeches," could most profitably be adopted here, and possibly would be if the suggestion from the same source were to become popular—that is, that the speeches should come first and the dinner afterward.

This re-arrangement might have the effect of causing the pangs of hunger to interfere with the flight of oratory.

FIRE TRAPS.

The heavy loss of life in two fires in Montreal adds a tragic emphasis to what the Examiner said recently about the existence in every community of fire traps that are a menace to the safety of every one who enter their doors.

In one of the Montreal fires, in which six people met death, the building was an old, flimsy structure, housing a man, his wife, five children and a lodger, and with a wooden staircase occupying the centre of the front room.

Although it must have been clear that if this stairway was cut off by smoke or flame there would be no other egress for the inmates than by dropping from the upper windows, the building was allowed to be used as a dwelling.

There must be ramshackle houses of this kind in every centre, where an outbreak of fire would give the occupants little chance for escape.

There are flats in every city, too, with the only exit a stairway that would in theevent of a fire be quickly cut off, leaving the dwellers in the upper floors face to face with death either from the flames or smoke or from a drop from a lofty window.

The trouble is that such conditions are allowed to drift along with nothing said about them until a terrible tragedy brings them into prominence.

The double Montreal horror shows how such a policy is merely flirting with death.

HIGHWAY UPKEEP.

For nearly a year the Provincial Government has been casting about for a plan by which those who use the highways will bear the greater burden of the cost of maintenance, says the Hamilton Spectator. A tax on gasoline it is known is being seriously considered, and it is expected that the Government will have a definite recommendation ready for submission at the next session of the Legislature. The Chambers of Commerce of Brantford and Galt, it is reported today, have decided to apply some pressure, and it will be surprising if their protest against enforced payment of the cost of construction and maintenance of highways by municipalities is not generally endorsed. It has never seemed right that workingmen, unable either to purchase or maintain automobiles, should be looked to for revenue for the construction and maintenance of highways which they seldom use. The toilers who are property owners pay their municipal taxes, 100 per cent. of the cost of local improvements and, through their taxes, contribute to the Suburban Areas Commission. It will be argued, of course, that improved highways bring trade and that trade brings employment and prosperity and that the highways are thus rendering a very real service to the working class. The complaint, however, is not against this class paying anything, but paying too great a proportion. Motor car owners have demanded improved highways and they are the ones who will have to pay the shot in the future. A nominal tax on gasoline has all the earmarks of the logical solution of the problem. There is reason to believe that this is the suggestion favored by the Provincial Cabinet.

THE COST OF LIVING.

An important commission has just held its first sittings in England. It is known as the Royal Commission on Food Prices and its object is to determine who is getting the greatest share of the profit which is indicated in the price paid to the producer of staples, or the importer, and the price which the retailer is charged.

Prices are 79 per cent. higher in Britain than they were in 1914 and yet at the same time manufacturers are complaining that they cannot compete with the continental nations in the world markets in spite of their best efforts to reduce costs which they maintain have involved serious sacrifices on their part.

It is perfectly obvious that certain sections of the community have gained at the expense of other sections and that the economic burden of the dislocation of the war is most unevenly distributed in all countries. The London Times quotes the case of the British railwaymen who are making a demand for a general increase in wages at a cost to the country of about $150,000,000, which is neither justified by the profits made in the industry nor by comparison with the wages paid in what are allied trades. These advances must come out of the pockets of the users of the various roads and in so doing they will upset the budgets of thousands or more wage earners who will see in the advance given to the railwaymen an excuse and a sound reason for preferring demands of their own.

The demand of the railwaymen for more wages is in many cases influenced by the instances of lavish expenditure and extravagance in living which the railwaymen see around them. It is so in Canada. Montreal has seen several examples recently of thousands of dollars being poured out for a single night's entertainment, involving the expenditure of a sum which would keep a thousand needy families in comfort for a month.

It is the inequalities that disturb—the difference between the price to the consumer and that paid to the agriculturist, the difference beween the scraping and paring of the family where the bread winner is working half time or is out of a job and the spending of thousands for a night of hectic excitement. The only remedy for these inequalities is a realization that the exigencies of the critical times through which we are passing demand a more simple and more frugal standard of living. There can be no permanent recovery of trade while we continue to think of our standards of living in terms of 1913.—Montreal Star.

Sterling rates, $4.77¼.

Sterling cables, $4.77 5-8.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Jan. 6.—(Canadian Press).—There was some further enquiry from foreign buyers for grain here to-day, and some business was worked in Canadian Western barley for January-February shipment, but the market on the whole was quiet. The trade in cash grain in the domestic market was also quiet, but prices were steady. Ontario No. 2 white oats were quoted at 66 cents, No. 3 grade at 64 cents, and No. 4 grade at 62 cents per bushel, ex-store.

The tendency of the spring wheat flour market was firm, but prices showed no change. The market for winter wheat flour displayed further strength and prices were advanced 15 to 20 cents per barrel, which was attributed to the advanced figures asked by Ontario millers for supplies.

The feature of the baled hay situation was the stronger feeling that developed for No. 2 timothy, and prices were marked up 50 cents per ton higher.

Crop beans were quoted at $2.70 and $2.80 per bushel.

READY

Germany is prohibited by the Allies against building up any airplane or dirigible forces that could be used for war.

Can it be done? Returned travelers from Germany assert that thousands of autos over there have been equipped with powerful new motors that could be lifted out and attached to airplanes in a few minutes. Any German military comeback in the next decade would probably be by air. France, sensing this, builds battle planes by thousands.

POLISH RAILROADS ARE OVERMANNED

WARSAW, Jan. 7.—(Associated Press).—Polish railroads are expensive to operate because of the large number of employees. This averages 13 for each kilometer of track, as against seven men in France and five in the United States. It is declared by experts that Poland could dispense with 50,000 railroad employees and thus save $30,000,000 a year.

SPEAK ON RADIO.

Local Engineers Will Hold a Meeting on Thursday Evening.

At the next general meeting of the Peterborough branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada, which will be held in the Chamber of Commerce on Thursday, Jan. 8, at 8.15 p.m., a paper will be given on one of the most important branches of the radio art.

The speaker for the evening will be F. K. D'Alton, Esq., B.A. Sc., Ass. A.I.E.E., who has consented to give a paper on "Radio for Emergency Communication."

Radio in all its branches has made such phenomenal progress and has become so popularized and so generally accepted as a medium for pleasure and recreation, that the layman, or even the engineer not directly in touch with this branch of the art, has very little conception of the developments which have taken place within the past few years.

Mr. D'Alton, who is Assistant Laboratory Engineer for the Hydro-electric Power Commission of Ontario, is a graduate of S. P. S. and of the Student Engineers' Course at the local plant of the Canadian General Electric Company. He is in charge of radio work in connection with power service for the commission, and is well known both for his work in this connection and also on account of his contributions to the technical press.

The paper will be illustrated by lantern slides and should prove of great interest.

The meeting will be under the chairmanship of A. B. Gates, Esq., B. Sc., A.M.E.I.C., and the local branch, following their usual custom, extend a cordial invitation to anyone interested in the subject.

JUNIOR GAME CAMPBELLFORD

Belleville Defeated Campbellford Team by a Score of 8 to 5—Good Hockey.

CAMPBELLFORD, Jan. 7—Belleville defeated the local youngsters in a Junior O. H. A. game played here last night by a score of 8 to 5, scoring their last three goals in the last five minutes of play. Campbellford were leading 4 to 1 at the end of the first period, and 5 to 4 at the second rest. Half-way through the last period, Belleville tied it up, and then went on and won.

It was a great game between two clever young teams, with Charlie Lemyre at centre for Campbellford the outstanding player on the ice. He broke up the Belleville rushes before they got nicely started, and bored in on the Belleville net for shot after shot. He was all over the ice, using a poke check that would do credit to a neighbor. He apparently skated himself out, and was not so effective near the end of the game. The local kids had much the better of the first two neriods, and should have scored more goals, but Jeffery, in the Belleville net, was turning the shots aside in great style, and was aided materially by bad shooting on the part of the locals. They either blazed them around his head, or right on his pads. Wood, Ayrhart and Blue worked on the forward line, and all played a useful game. Johnston and Copperthwaite were good defensively but neither had much success in their trips to enemy territory, while Saunders did his share in goal. The shots that beat him were from close in, giving him no chance to save.

The Quinte Town boys are a big, husky bunch, and possess two speed merchants in Hibbard and Townsend. Hibbard accounted for 6 of their 8 goals, while Townsend was the most persistent back checker on the ice.

The win puts Belleville away to a flying start with two victories, both at the expense of Archie Wood's kids. However, the youngsters are not entirely out of the running, and with a few more games will improve, and the fans are with them, win or lose, for the arena was nearly full. Something new for the first game.

Ross Burt of Trenton refereed to the satisfaction of all, handing out penalties for every infraction of the rules. Campbellford drew 8 penalties and Belleville 13. Seeney made five trips to the bench for a total of 12 minutes.

Play went up and down at the start of the game with neither team having an advantage, till the "Home Brews" got the old rubber around the Belleville net, and kept it there for some minutes, the Red Sweaters not getting past the blue line, while Lemyre Wood and Ayrhart were firing shot after shot at Jeffery. Charlie finally slipping one in at the side.

Johnny Hibbard evened it up, with Wood and Johnston keeping the penalty timer company.

Blue went on for Ayrhart and carried the rubber down to the defence and passed to Wood who sizzled it home.

Blue and Johnston got the prettiest goal of the night going from end to end together. Johnston carrying the puck and giving Blue a perfect pass right at the goal mouth. Lemyre got the next alone, beating the whole Belleville team.

Down three goals the Quintee Boys cut out a fast pace and held the upper hard for awhile Hibbard and Rourke reducing the lead to one. Blue camped in front of the Red Shirts cage and took a pass from Lemyre from behind the net and beat Jeffrey. But Hibbard came back with a nice rush that carried him in on top of Saunders for Belleville's fourth. Although outscored 3 to 1 in the period, the locals had a shade the better of the play, but poor shooting spoiled their chances to increase the lead.

The third period was full of excitement. The Belleville kids trying everything they knew to get goods. Halfway through the period they got the right method combination. They broke three abreast and passed the puck, Red Townsend got the equalizer, and just when everybody was getting prepared for overtime Johnny Hibbard loomed up again on the firing end of three combination plays for three goals and the old hockey game.

FURNACE.

Heating your home by electricity will be only a matter of time, a Westinghouse official predicts.

It is also a matter of cost.

Cheap electricity will be available later. Coal will be burned at the mines and converted into electrical power that will be sent out over high tension wires to all parts of the country. The saving in money now spent on hauling coal by railroad will be tremendous, not to mention the convenience of electricity as fuel.

PROPAGANDA IN PUBLIC SCHOOL

New Scheme Adopted by the Communists in France—Use Blotting Pad.

PARIS, Jan. 7.—(United Press).—Communist propaganda for boys and girls in the primary and secondary schools of France has reached such a point that several senators are urging the Minister of Education to take steps to stop it. The methods are ingenious. One of the most popular is known as the "propaganda of the blotting pad."

Young students in the schools here are accustomed to carry with them a kind of little folder containing half a dozen sheets of blotting pape: covered with a leather or cloth binder. A woman teacher told Senator Hughes Le Roux of the Department of Seine-et-Oise, that through curiosity she picked up one of these folders and found printed on the blotting paper the following: "Only the children of wealthy parents get the benefit of advanced education. Poor children are looked upon by the bourgers as lower than dogs. Their masters do not want them to get above mediocrity and poverty."

The teacher looked over scores of similar folders and found an entire collection of Communist teachings inscribed on the blotters.

Inquiry led to the discovery that these were not purchased in the ordinary stories where school supplies are on sale. They were introduced into the school by the children of Communist parents. The latter utilize their children to spread the Bolshevist doctrine among their comrades.

The children are expected to take the publicity documents into their own homes.

DEBTS REDUCED BY GOVERNMENT

Speaker Declares Canada is Enjoying a Period of Development.

TORONTO, Jan. 7. — (Canadian Press.)—Defence of policies of Mackenzie King Government was made here last evening, before members of University of Toronto Liberal Club by Hon. Charles Stewart, Minister of interior. The argument of the speaker was that the Ottawa Government had reduced both administrative expenditure of country and its national debt and that trade returns showed that period of development not known for many years was now being enjoyed. Tariff policy was declared to be one adapted in interests of country as whole and not in interests of any one class.

Evidence of the government's achievements was declared by Mr. Stewart to lie in the fact that current expenditures had been reduced by 50,000,000 per year and by further fact that $35,000,000 had been pruned from the National debt.
